CITRUS HEIGHTS, CA (MPG) - Tuesday Morning, a popular off-price retailer, will close its only Citrus Heights store, located in the Regency Shopping Center at 7255 Greenback Lane near Citrus Heights City Hall, on Thursday, March 30th.

The Dallas-based retailer is consolidating as part of its bankruptcy filing on Tuesday, February 14th. The company currently operates 487 stores in 40 states. Its planned closures include all remaining Tuesday Morning sites in the Sacramento area, including Folsom and Roseville.

The Dallas-based retailer has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Fort Worth Division.

County Seeks Proposals to Support Local Organizations

SacCounty News Release

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - Sacramento County is soliciting proposals from lead organizations to help strengthen and build capacity of local non-profit community-based organizations (CBOs) that are focused on providing services to a variety of underserved populations, including: Black, Indigenous and People of Color (BIPOC) who experience disproportionately negative health and social outcomes, unhoused individuals and families, individuals with behavioral health needs, individuals with involvement in the child welfare or criminal justice system, refugees/immigrants, and other marginalized communities which were disproportionately impacted by the pandemic.

Throughout the County, CBOs improve the quality of life in communities by providing educational, health, and social services to citizens in need of support, beyond the services generally provided by local governments. Through their unique connectivity to the communities they serve, CBOs can impact hard-to-reach and traditionally underserved populations in a culturally responsive and equitable manner. The County recognizes the value of partnering with CBOs to support local citizens and foster an environment in which the community can thrive and recover from the health, economic, and other negative impacts suffered as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The primary focus of this funding is to help CBOs develop core infrastructure to: 1. Effectively expand services and deepen their impact for underserved communities; 2. Build and strengthen the capacity for CBOs to more easily access and better manage government funds and contracts; 3. Support the integration and elevation of BIPOCcentered and serving CBOs; 4. Evaluate services and programs and improve equitable access and outcomes to underserved populations; and 5. Enhance the cultural responsiveness of service provision to traditionally underserved populations.

In 2020, the County declared racism as a public health crisis and since that time has begun to Continued on page 2

Hunger Spike Coming

Impending loss of pandemic CalFresh support

By Jeanne Kuang, CALMatters.org

Food banks across California are bracing for a feared spike in hunger amid inflated prices after a pandemic-era boost in food aid ends in April.

March is the last month CalFresh recipients will get the additional benefits, as the federal government cuts off the "emergency allotments" that have kept food stamp allowances higher than usual for nearly three years now.

The average household on CalFresh will lose about $200 a month, said Becky Silva, government relations director at the California Association of Food Banks. A single-person household, for instance, could drop from $281 a month in food aid to as low as $23 in April.

U.S. Department of Agriculture documents show that since November, the pandemic boosts have amounted to more than $500 million a month in additional food stamps coming into low-income Californians' budgets.

"There's no way to overstate how devastating this is going to be," Silva said. "Families are going to see a dramatic and sudden drop in their food benefits at a time when food price inflation and the cost of living in California especially is through the roof."

Food stamps are funded by the federal government, which determines benefit amounts annually on top for those already receiving the maximum. The recent Congressional spending bill passed in December cuts that off this spring in exchange for funding for extra food aid for school children during the summer months.

More than 2.9 million California households receive food assistance through CalFresh, a number that has risen steadily throughout the pandemic.

their food aid eligibility reduced after a historic inflationary bump in Social Security checks in January. In addition to wages, Social Security, unemployment benefits and disability payments all count as income for the person receiving food aid.

Tom McSpedden, a 69-yearold Citrus Heights resident with Type II diabetes, saw a nearly $60 decrease in his normal CalFresh for five months after the federal boosts end.

But it's unclear whether the Legislature and Gov. Gavin Newsom's administration would agree on new spending as they seek to close a $23 billion budget

Advocates are also calling for the state to add its own funds to the regular food stamps program, to boost the minimum food aid grant people's budgets, dinner tables and California retailers as well," said Jared Call, senior advocate at the food policy organization Nourish California. "But our approach is, no tool in the toolbox should be unused."

The California Department of Social Services says it's warning households of the upcoming decline in aid and directing CalFresh recipients to food banks, which have received additional funding from both the state and federal governments in recent years.

The state's network of food banks continues to serve on average 1.5 times the number of clients as before the pandemic, Silva said.

The Sacramento Food Bank and Family Services, which provides food in the county McSpedden lives, averaged 150,000 clients a month before the pandemic, said community resource manager Lorena Carranza. In recent months, that number has been about 275,000.

But food distributions can't replace the flexibility of food stamps that many residents rely on. With a special diet to manage his diabetes, McSpedden said food distribution boxes usually only contain a few items he can eat. He's loath to take a full box when others could use it, he said.

McSpedden worked for nearly three decades as a long-haul trucker until about 15 years ago, when a series of heart attacks ended that career and landed him in a hospital stay that wiped out his savings and retirement accounts.

"I've been in predicaments

ment attributes the increase partially to a more flexible application process during the pandemic,

The state social services departallowance last month after getting a $109 increase in his monthly Social Security checks.

But he continued to get the pandemic CalFresh boosts, which kept the total food stamps on his benefits card at $281 that month - the maximum allowable aid for a single-person household.

In April, McSpedden's monthly CalFresh benefits will drop to roughly $50.

Nearly half of McSpedden's monthly $1,368 Social Security check goes toward renting a room; the rest is meticulously budgeted for his phone, car insurance, gas, the portion of insulin and medications that Medicare doesn't cover and bankruptcy payments.

"I don't have the $230 left over each month to compensate" for the drop in aid, he said. "I'm just not going to be able to afford food. It's that simple."

There isn't any plan to immediately backfill the loss.

The food banks association and other anti-poverty organizations have proposed that the state spend more than $2 billion providing a "ramp-down" of the extra benefits from $23 to $50 with corresponding inflationary increases. Other ideas include expanding special CalFresh programs that provide extra dollars for those purchasing California-grown produce, or for certain Central Valley households

A single-person household, for instance, could drop from $281 a month in food aid to as low as $23 in April. Photo courtesy of Anton Estrada Dreamstime.com based on the nationwide cost of living as well as recipients' household size and income.

In March 2020, Congress allowed the USDA to give states funding to boost all recipients' aid to the maximum allowable benefits for their household size, or add $95 while advocates like Silva also suggest the boost in aid made going through an application more worthwhile for eligible residents.

The loss of emergency allotments will be felt particularly hard by older and disabled people, many of whom have already seen

who lack clean drinking water in their homes.

Those proposals are "nowhere near approaching the $500 million a month that will be absent from

before," he said. "But this thing here with the extra food stamps, I have no idea. I'm looking into a tunnel with no light at the FEBRUARY 24, 2023 CITRUS HEIGHTS MESSENGER • 5

Office of Congressman Kevin Kiley

WASHINGTON, DC (MPG) - Rep. Kiley responded to President Biden's State of the Union address with this statement:

"Americans know that addressing our nation's fentanyl crisis should, and must, be bipartisan, and I applaud President Biden for announcing steps tonight to do just that. Likewise, Americans know that addressing the crisis at our southern border – the source of much of the fentanyl reaching our communities – must also be bipartisan. I call on President Biden to put partisanship aside and finally work with Congress to fix our border and protect our families." – Rep. Kevin Kiley (R-Calif.)

Background: Rep. Kiley was honored to host Rocklin residents Laura Didier and Chris Didier as his guests for President Biden's State of the Union address. The Didiers lost their 17-year-old son, Zach Didier, to fentanyl two days after Christmas in 2020. Zach was an Eagle Scout, soccer player, and beloved member of the community who had no history of drug use. Chris and Laura have dedicated themselves to raising awareness of the dangers of fentanyl in the hopes of saving the lives of students like Zach.

Financial Resilience During a Disaster

SacCounty News Release

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) -

Sacramento County faces regional hazards throughout the year including severe weather, floods and fires. If a disaster or other emergency strikes, you may only have seconds or minutes to react. In those critical moments, your focus will be on your family's safety.

Once the immediate danger has passed, having an Emergency Financial First Aid Kit (EFFAK) ready can provide you with peace of mind and will help you recover faster.

Remember these four steps to help you organize critical financial, medical and household information before a disaster or emergency strikes.

Assess & Compile: Gather your important financial documents and contacts; Review: Review your insurance policies and financial paperwork to be sure that they are still accurate and current; Safeguard: Store paper and electronic copies of all files in safe locations; Update: Revisit and update your Emergency Financial First Aid Kit regularly. Updates are especially important when significant changes in your life occur.

Items in this kit should be kept in a secure location and can include original paper and electronic copies of your:

Homeowners, renters, auto, flood, and health insurance policies; Bank account information, and other financial records; Rental lease agreement; Will or living will.

For more information about financial resilience during a disaster and how to compile an EFFAK, visit community.fema.gov/ PreparednessCommunity/s/emergency-financial-first-aid-kit. The EFFAK is available in English, Vietnamese, Spanish, Chinese, and Korean.

COVID-19 Effects on California Will Linger for Years

By Dan Walters, CALMatters.org

Gov. Gavin Newsom says California's COVID-19 state of emergency will end on Feb. 28, just four days shy of three years since he issued the first of countless orders he said were necessary to cope with the pandemic.

"Throughout the pandemic, we've been guided by the science and data - moving quickly and strategically to save lives," Newsom said in October announcing the February end date. "The state of emergency was an effective and necessary tool that we utilized to protect our state, and we wouldn't have gotten to this point without it."

The efficacy of Newsom's pandemic orders will be debated for years, particularly the shutdowns of schools and businesses and the billions of dollars in no-bid contracts his administration issued.

What cannot be debated, however, is that their impacts on millions of Californians will linger for years, decades or perhaps even generations.

Nearly 3 million Californians lost their jobs due to the shutdown orders. While the state has, on paper, recovered all of the jobs it lost, countless small businesses that shut their doors have not reopened.

growing norm, restaurants and other businesses dependent on concentrated employment were clobbered. The downtowns of the state's larger cities - including the state capital, Sacramento were hollowed out and have not, in the main, recovered.

California's stark divide between haves and have-nots grew wider. Upper-income Californians could do their jobs from home but lower-income service workers simply lost their jobs. Some qualified for unemployment insurance, but a managerial meltdown at the state Employment Development Department delayed, sometimes for months, benefits for legitimate claimants while EDD handed out billions of dollars to fraudsters.

School shutdowns, and the fitful efforts to continue instruction via the internet, had a devastating effect on students, especially those from poor families which lacked technology and whose parents could not work from home. The "achievement gap" that has long plagued California's public school system widened even further, recent research has found.

Several new studies add even more evidence that the steps taken by the state to combat COVID-19 will have long-term negative impacts.

An analysis by The Associated Press, Stanford University's Big Local News project and Stanford education professor Thomas Dee determined that 234,000 students in 21 states vanished from public school enrollment rolls during the pandemic. More than half of them were in California.

Overall, in those states, With work-at-home the enrollment dropped by about 700,000 students, but most of the decline could be explained by enrollments in private schools, movements to other states or shifts to at-home instruction. Of the remaining 234,000 absences for which there was no explanation, researchers said, 152,000 were in California.

The Public Policy Institute of California crunched the numbers and discovered that not only did COVID-19 kill about 100,000 Californians but that the state's life expectancy, which had been tied for the nation's highest with Hawaii at 80.9 years, has dropped by two years - the first such decline since World

PPIC found that the higher death rate has disproportionately affected non-white Californians, particularly Latino and Black residents. "Between 2019 and 2021, the death rate (deaths per 1,000 residents) increased 51% among Latinos, 31% among Blacks, 26% among Asian-Americans, and 17% among whites," the PPIC reported.

Finally, a new study UCLA Center for Health Policy Research found that Newsom's stay-at-home orders, affecting businesses, child care centers and school, created financial hardships that led to psychological distress and a sharp increase in turmoil and conflict, including domestic violence.

Some COVID-19 victims are experiencing long COVID, with lasting debilitative effects. California suffers from lingering effects as well.

Dan Walters has been a journalist for nearly 60 years, spending all but a few of those years working for California newspapers.

About Social Security's

"First Year Rule"

All Legal Ads Published by Messenger Publishing

By Russell Gloor, AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: I'm considering filing for my SS at age 64 in February, before my full retirement age of 66 years and 10 months. I'm working full time and would like to continue earning until I meet the $21,240 limit for this year. When does the $21,240 limit go into effect? Does it start after receiving my first SS benefit deposit? Or does Social Security go by my year-to-date earnings starting on January 1st?

If I file in February and it takes 90 days to receive my first SS deposit, and at that point my year-to-date earnings are $18,500, can I continue to work until I earn the balance of the $21,240 ($2,740) and then stop working? Or do they only count the earnings after I receive the first benefit payment? I know that for anything earned over $21,240 I'll need to repay $1 for every $2 over the limit. Signed: Ready to Retire

Dear Ready: Since you haven't yet reached your full retirement age (FRA), if you claim now and are working, things will work somewhat differently during your first year collecting benefits.

If you claim for your benefits to start in February, only your earnings starting in February count toward the earnings limit. But during your first calendar year, once your benefits start, you'll be subject to a monthly earnings limit of $1,770 and, if that is exceeded in any month (February -December), you won't be eligible for benefits for that month. That means that they could withhold your entire monthly amount for any 2023 month after January that exceeds the monthly limit. This is part of Social Security's "first year rule," which applies only during your first calendar year collecting. If, instead, you claim for your benefits to start in March, then the monthly limit will apply from March thru December. Remember, it's not when your payment is received that counts; it's when your benefits start (SS pays benefits in the month following the month earned). Beginning in 2024 only the annual limit would apply. Nevertheless, the "first year rule" offers some latitude on your earnings. If the penalty for exceeding the annual earnings limit ($21,240 for 2023) is less than the penalty which results from using the monthly limit, Social Security will use the annual limit and assess the smaller penalty amount. So, if your annual (full year) 2023 earnings are less than $21,240, no penalty will be assessed, or if you only exceed the annual limit by a small amount, you'll be assessed a penalty of $1 for every $2 you are over the limit. But if your annual earnings are substantially more than the 2023 limit, Social Security may deem you temporarily ineligible to get benefits. When you complete your application there will be a section asking you to tell them about this year's earnings as well as what you expect next year's earnings to be. From that they will decide whether you are currently eligible to collect benefits.

So, if your goal is to work only to the point that no penalty will be assessed, you can work until your 2023 earnings reach $21,240 (whenever that is). Or you could work even a little bit longer and simply take the penalty (half of what you exceed the annual limit by), in which case SS will simply withhold future benefits for enough months for them to recover what is owed for exceeding the limit. But if you continue working full time and will substantially exceed the annual limit, it's likely Social Security will say you are temporarily ineligible to collect benefits (until your earnings are less or you reach your full retirement age when the earnings test no longer applies). This article is intended for information purposes only and does not represent legal or financial guidance. # Board Affirms Development Process Improvements

Sac County News Release

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - The County's development process is one step closer to undergoing comprehensive systematic and customer service improvements, as the Board of Supervisors voted unanimously on Tuesday, February 7, to support the direction and goals of the process.

The plan includes improving the timeliness of review, ensuring a predictable and consistent process, and a concerted focus on providing outstanding customer service.

"Simply put, we want Sacramento County to be the best place to build in the region for all of our customers," said Dave Defanti, Deputy County Executive, Community Services. "We're grateful for the Board's feedback about the Development Review Process improvements and for its support in implementing changes that will make the process more efficient and easier to navigate.

"These changes will help us to meet our goals of attracting, planning and fostering housing production and other beneficial uses in existing and new communities, and serving our customers even better than before."

Goals include an increase in affordable housing units, helping achieve state and local goals and regulations to address climate change and air quality, providing for unparalleled environmental protection and encouraging public participation.

Defanti provided the Board with an update on improvements recently implemented/pos-

Focus on building a collaborative, positive culture and supporting staff; Sacramento County earning the state's Pro-Housing Designation, a recognition of its commitment to policies that increase housing supply; The formation of an Industry

Working Group with representatives from the building industry that will vet new process improvements moving forward; Addition of two Development Process Managers, who will facilitate key projects through the County's processes; Training and review of the Accela Government Software system - the system of record for the development process - to review what's working and what can be improved; Providing customers with easy-to-follow manuals for how to do business with the County, including when and how to seek permits for construction activity.

Additional improvements in the coming months will lead to processes that:

Are timely, efficient, and carried out in a manner that recognizes "time is money" for our customers; Reduce complexity and eliminate superfluous requirements; Are consistent with industry best practices and comparable agencies' processes viewed by customers as exemplary; Include customers in problem-solving and decision-making; Ensure the level of detail requested is appropriate for any stage of development; Offer clear timelines and transparency for customers regarding the status of their permit or application; Provide routine opportunities to solicit and receive customer feedback; Empower staff to be innovative and creative to help solve problems and facilitate desirable development.

"Sacramento County is facing an unprecedented housing supply and affordability crisis, and we believe these improvements will positively affect new housing production to address these crises," said Defanti. "This is an exciting time for the County, and we look forward to updating County residents and the Board about our progress to affect real change."

Dear Todd,

Roll With It

Dear Dave,

The other day, my wife and I discovered a Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) we'd forgotten about for over 10 years from my time in the Army. There's a little over $3,200 in there. We're both in our thirties, and we're trying to save up our starter emergency fund in Baby Step 1 of your plan. We were wondering if we should withdraw the money and use it toward Baby Steps 1 and 2, or just leave it in there.

Todd

Dave Ramsey Says

The best thing to do is roll the money over into an IRA. Otherwise you're going to be hit with a 10% penalty - plus your tax rate - and end up paying 30% to 40% of it to the government. That's kind of like asking, "Would it be a good idea to borrow $3,200 at 30% interest to pay off debt?" Of course not! That would be a really dumb idea. And in a sense, that's what you'd be doing by just taking the money out of the TSP.

It's not a ton of money, but conceptually, I hate the idea of giving the government 30% to 40% of my money just to get my money out. So yeah, do some research, find a good investment professional near you – one with the heart of a teacher – and roll it into an IRA.

Congratulations to you and your wife for deciding to take control of your money. And thank you for your service to our country, Todd. I hope this helped.

Disabled Person Parking Permits Must Be Renewed

DMV News Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - The Department of Motor Vehicles highlighted new laws that started in 2023 and one of those require drivers 70 and older to renew their license in person at a DMV office.

In October 2020, Governor Gavin Newsom temporarily waived the California law requiring senior drivers to renew their licenses at a DMV field office and signed AB 174 in September 2021 to allow online or by mail renewals through the end of 2022.

The DMV is sending notices to Californians who have had their permanent Disabled Person Parking Placard for at least six years and asking them to confirm that they are still in need of one.

The DMV will not renew placards for people who do not respond. This renewal requirement is one provision of prior legislation, SB 611, enacted in 2017 to curb fraud and abuse of Disabled Person Parking Drivers are now required to change into another available lane, when possible, to pass cyclists, building on the current requirement for drivers to give cyclists at least three feet of space when passing. The law also permits Class 3 e-bike riders to use approved bicycle paths and trails, bikeways, and bicycle lanes. In addition, starting on January 1, 2024, the law allows cyclists to cross an intersection when a walk sign is on.

This law exempts vehicles registered to veterans displaying specialized license plates from paying tolls on roads, bridges, highways, vehicular crossings, or other toll facilities. The exemption applies only to vehicles with license plates that are issued

The DMV is sending notices to Californians who have had their permanent Disabled Person Parking Placard for at least six years and asking them to confirm that they are still to a disabled veteran, Pearl Harbor survivor, prisoner of war, or to veterans who have received distinctions such as the Purple Heart or the Congressional Medal of Honor.

California state courts will stop sending notices to the DMV for license suspensions for failure to appear starting on January 1, 2023, while requiring the DMV to stop suspending licenses for failing to appear starting on January 1, 2027, to allow time to make computer programming changes. *

Through the generosity of the Citrus Heights Messenger, this column serves to provide an update about matters affecting the community of Citrus

Several years ago, I was approached by a group of individuals who were desperately advocating for the Sacramento Board to approve Laura's Law, which would establish collaborative court proceedings for seriously mentally ill individuals who have not committed a crime, do not know they have a problem and yet they are a danger to themselves or others. At the time, my thoughts immediately drifted back to overcrowded State Mental Institutions, the movie "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," and a person's civil rights.

Who decides if someone is seriously mentally ill, and when is the appropriate time to intercede on their behalf?

Then I learned about condition called Anosognosia. This condition makes people believe they are not sick and do not know they need help. People who suffer from Anosognosia are more vulnerable and can threaten their families and others

To give you some history, "Laura's Law" was named after 19-year-old Laura Wilcox, who was killed in 2001 while volunteering at the Nevada County Department of Behavioral Health by a former patient of the county's outpatient mental health clinic. It was signed into Law in November 2002 and was patterned after New York's highly successful Kendra's Law (AB1421).

Laura's Law is also known as Assisted Outpatient Treatment (AOT). It allows court-ordered, intensive outpatient treatment for people 18 years old or older who illnesses and refuse treatment because their condition impairs their ability to make rational decisions.

We see and hear about these people daily. They are wandering the streets hungry and afraid, homeless and without hope. Sometimes they lash out, and their families don't know how to help them. They are in our emergency rooms and often wind up in our jails, only to be released back to a society where they don't fit in.

In 2021 the State of California required counties to "opt-in" or "opt-out" of the program, and if the county decided to "opt-out," they had to provide a reason. By May of that year, the Sacramento Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to opt-in. Since that time, our staff has been coordinating with the Collaborative Courts Judge Brown and his team, Law Enforcement Agencies, Probation. Adult Correctional Health, Substance Use Prevention and Treatment (SUPT), Department of Human Assistance (homeless services, Medi-Cal applications), and Community Organizations to meet individual service needs. The program has been estimated to cost 2.5 million annually.

I'm happy to report that our AOT Court is scheduled to go live in mid-February 2023. While we don't know all the program details yet, I am told there will be a website for referrals; individuals will be strongly vetted to determine if they qualify for the program. Family members, roommates, treatment providers, and law enforcement may request an investigation. Only the County mental health direcis unlikely to be able to survive safely in the community without supervision. They and various service providers and receive multiple Rancho Murieta suffer from severe mental interviews and offers for services appropriate to their condition. There will be an opportunity to accept assistance with Mental Health through a formal agreement. They receive encouragement, rewards, and even a graduation certificate during their treatment. If they do not take services, they can receive assistance from a public defender and petition the AOT Court, where they will go before the Honorable Superior Court Judge Lawrence Brown.

> I met with Judge Brown last week, and he described these as collaborative justice courts, where a team of experts are all working together to achieve the best outcome for that person. While the Judge in the Black Robe is a strong influence, he underscored the importance of the collaborative team, who all work together on behalf of that person.

> While we cannot force treatments or lock people up if they have not committed a crime, other counties with AOT programs report that many individuals opt into treatment before ever getting to the Judge in the Black Robe.
