CARMICHAEL, CA (MPG) - Five years ago, Professor Kathleen Friedrich was teaching at McGeorge School of Law, Sacramento.

Now -- before her former colleagues have even finished breakfast -- the Carmichael mother of three has milked a small herd of goats. Her does produce 14 gallons of milk per week; the yield is cultured into ice cream, yoghurt and several varieties of cheese. Friedrich can hand-milk five udders in under an hour. She also manages pasteurizing and processing herself.

From litigation to lactation was a leap of faith. Married for 35 years to fellow lawyer Tim Blaine, Friedrich's reinvention gives a beloved son a future. "I did this for Nick," she explains. "Tim and I knew from his first year that he was developmentally disabled. When he was seven, we got the autism diagnosis."

Nick's schooling progressed through special education classes to Orange Grove Adult School. "When he was 24," recalls his mom, "San Juan School District announced it could no longer support Orange Grove. Tim and I had to do something to give Nick a meaningful future." Her immigrant parents had raised goats in Switzerland and later, in Rio Linda. "My father commented that in the old country, families would find farm work for Nick. That planted a seed in my mind." One of seven siblings raised in a goat farm, the lawyer understood dairying and cherished memories of the gentle stock.

"We knew Nick liked animals so we took field trips to dairy farms," explains his mom. "Watching him interact with goats was phenomenal. He was talking to them, cuddling and tickling them. It brought tears to our eyes.

Animals can do that. We knew a farm career would be therapeutic and rewarding for our

Skinner Memorial Set for Sept. 17

John Skinner

CARMICHAEL, CA (MPG) - The life and music of bandleader John Skinner will be celebrated during a big band memorial in Carmichael, Sunday, September

For several decades, Skinner's Carmichael-based orchestras were go-to ensembles for Sacramento parties and community events. Their trumpet-playing leader died in August 18. His wife Susan and daughter Kathryn Skinner have invited fans and friends to a memorial event at the La Sierra Center, 5325 Engle Road. Recognizing Skinner's Vietnam War service, a flag presentation will be included at the event.

The celebration will also feature a brief video on Skinner's career: from early days as a child virtuoso to his contemporary exploits. Skinner's faithful musicians will form a 16-piece band to perform classic big band hits. The program runs from 2-4 pm. Light Snacks will be provided.

"This is an opportunity to salute a man who gave so much to music and community," suggests Skinner's wife, Susan. "We don't mind if people dance. Getting crowds on their feet was John's life-long mission."

Starting a New Business? Get in Line County's Small Business Start-ups Hampered by Bureaucracy

Story by Jacqueline Fox

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG)

- Pent up demand in many parts of unincorporated Sacramento County, and the county proper for retail food chains and other small businesses, some developers and business groups say, is being stalled under the multiple layers of bureaucracy built into the county's complex permitting process and related issues.

Even opening a franchise for one of the country's largest and perhaps best-loved food and drink chains can take years. Case in point: Jamba Juice, which has been pushing to open its first location in Carmichael for more than a year. The wildly popular fresh juice and smoothie maker, originally slated for opening in August at Carmichael Village on Fair Oaks Boulevard, is once again pushing back its opening to late October, due in large part to set-backs in the permitting approval process, according to Brooks Erickson of Carmichael Village, LLC, developers of the retail complex.

Construction and the permitting process for Jamba Juice began more than 24 months ago. Meanwhile, next door, Wing Stop's approval took nearly a year to green light. It followed the oftstalled opening of Noah's Bagels, also in the complex, which opened its doors in 2015.

With two open spaces left to fill at Carmichael Village, Erickson wonders how long it will take him to get the green light for what he hopes will be one more food and drink outfit and potentially a small medical related service provider to complete the development project.

"I would say it is a complex process and also can be very surprising when you think you have crossed every "T" and dotted every "I" to find out that you have to keep waiting," Erickson said. "I respect the idea of (the permitting and vetting process) being necessary, but it absolutely seems

Troy Givens said a typical time frame for a franchise like Jamba Juice (above) should be roughly 90-120 days and, while he doesn't know the specifics of what may be holding up the clearance for Jamba Juice in Carmichael, he would be happy to sit down with Brooks Erickson or any other business owner to help figure out where the snags are and how to very burdensome. Even after you've won approval for the project, you're waiting on all kinds of things to be approved just to get construction done."

Erickson said Jamba Juice is just one of many examples of the frustration he and other developers, not to mention the franchisees and owners, face when it comes to dealing with the county permitting process, which includes clearance requirements from multiple agencies, usually at different intervals in the build out process, including health and safety, the fire department, and ADA regulators, each of which can potentially stall a previously approved permit or plan from one department with a noncompliance order or demand for changes to meet their own department's regulations.

A green lighted set of blueprints can hit a number of snags in the process, ranging from issues pertaining to noncompliance with ADA regulations or county fire and electrical system guidelines, to equipment model makes and locations and flooring types, as well as overall construction plans for new infrastructures or remodeling of existing ones.

"What puzzles me is that somebody like Jamba with a national brand would have so much difficulty with our little county," have so many different rounds of

Linda Melody, executive director of the Carmichael Chamber of Commerce agrees the county's permitting process often holds up construction plans for many small retailers, specifically eateries. Carmichael's revival along the Fair Oaks Boulevard corridor is enjoying a wave of expansion in the retail food sector. But the growth is being hampered at various levels and she and chamber members are eager to see the momentum continue.

Melody said her agency would like to see pre-approved permitting requirements for existing retail spaces grandfathered in when approvals have been given for one area as others are considered, and that a true one-stop agency for blueprinting approval right down to the plumbing and electrical code sign-off would

"I have a hard time with the county penalizing businesses who have already had components of their projects signed off on get rejected at another level and then see them have to go back to the beginning of the process," Melody said. "You always hear the politicians talk about how much they love business but the rules are often not really all that business friendly."

Diann Rogers, president and CEO of the Rancho Cordova Chamber of Commerce, said her agency has long-been fielding similar complaints about the permitting process and that mitigating those concerns remains one of her agencies top priorities.

"Are there glitches, yes," says Rogers. "But in terms of the challenges, it is all over the board and it really depends on what type of business you're talking about and which layers of permitting and departments they have to go to."

Rogers said the Rancho Cordova department of economic development is preparing to launch a new "concierge" service to help business owners understand and work their way through the permitting process.

"It can be daunting," said Rogers, adding that she did not have specifics about the new program yet. "I know the goal is to help them navigate the process," she said. "I also can say that we have a (city) council that is open and willing to hear these issues, so they do listen to the biz community."

Evan Jacobs co-chairs the economic development committee for the Citrus Heights Chamber of Commerce. He said the chamber is aware of the ongoing issues of "complexity" involved with the permitting process and insists it is an issue of ongoing concern and discussion.

"We are working collaboratively with the city to see more layers of bureaucracy removed from the process in order to both retain and attract businesses to the area," said Jacobs. "I know we and many other advocates are out there working toward finding and see how we can make it easier for businesses to set up shop. There are many complexities involved."

Troy Givens, director of the Sacramento County Department of Economic Development agreed that the process for setting up a small business in the county can be burdensome, particularly for a restaurant, where you have many health code requirements in play. He adds, however, that the county is always pushing to improve the process, noting the availability of free and confidential programs established to help business owners navigate the permitting

"We know there can be difficulties, especially for smaller business owners, but we are always looking at how we can make the process more user friendly," said Givens.

speed through the permitting process, however, there are specific qualifiers. For instance, a commercial or industrial project must create a minimum of 50 new and permanent jobs or show it will generate at least $10 million in annual taxable sales. Neither of these options are likely for a small franchise, Jamba Juice included. Even if the revenue was in place, most fast-casual eateries employ part time workers.

Tom Scott is the state executive director for the National Federation of Independent Businesses based in Sacramento. His agency advocates for roughly 22,000 small and independently owned business members in California and thousands more nationwide. Scott said the layers of bureaucracy at the county with respect to permits are so imbedded and years in the making, a one-stop shop wouldn't put a dent

I have a hard time with the county penalizing businesses who have already had components of their projects signed off on get rejected at another level and then see them have to go back to the beginning of the process.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE CARMICHAEL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Givens referred to the county's Business Environmental Resource Center (BERC) launched in 1993. BERC provides confidential support for new and existing businesses as they make their way through the initial phases of setting up shop. The county, he added, also recently brought in a small business liaison to help potential new business owners with financing-related questions and support. Many of the frustrations, he says, often stem from the varying number of scenarios that arise with every start-up, whether related to health permit issues or basic blueprint snags, and whether they are a fast-food operation or a clothing retailer.

"We have a service under our department that is free and confidential, which takes a look at the permitting process at the local, state and even the federal levels and helps businesses navigate the system," said Givens. "We do what we can to help make the process go as quickly as possible."

Givens said a typical time frame for a franchise like Jamba Juice should be roughly 90-120 days and, while he doesn't know the specifics of what may be holding up the clearance for Jamba Juice in Carmichael, he would be happy to sit down with Erickson or any other business owner to help figure out where the snags are and how to expedite the process.

"I'm more than happy to meet with Mr. Erickson and other developers to try to figure out if there is a certain area where we can step in," Givens said.

The county also has a fast track program to help certain projects in the problem, as it stretches way beyond the permitting process and in to areas concerning housing, rising rent costs, California's business taxes, (one of the highest in the nation according to recent studies), zoning issues, as well as employment-related legal complexities and wages.

"There's been a Carl's Junior effect in California for years," said Scott, referring to 2014 plans by the Southern California-based CKE Restaurants/Carl's Junior Restaurants, LLC to expand in the state. Faced with wait times of up to two years to expand in the state, the company moved into Texas and Nevada, where wait-times are roughly only two to three months.

Scott, who also sits on the planning commission for the city of Folsom, said the slow-pace of permitting and approving new eateries and other small businesses is rampant across all parts of unincorporated Sacramento County and the city proper. In some cases, there just aren't enough people to push applications through. In others, the rules are simply too draconian and driving business out.

"This problem is happening all over, and it's not just permitting," says Scott. "It's a chain reaction of things, and the bureaucracy has been building up for decades. Everyone wants the revenue from small business, everyone agrees small business is the backbone of our economy. But, on the other hand, they have created such a bureaucratic mess. So the real question is: OK, how do they undo it?'

State Easing of Public Safety Laws Emboldens Criminal Behavior

Killer of Sacramento Sheriff's Deputy had Lengthy Record and Was Wanted by Federal Authorities

From the Office of Senator Jim Nielsen

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG)

- According to authorities, Thomas Daniel Littlecloud fired multiple shots at officers who knocked on the front door and walls of a motel room in their search for a different parolee's room. Littlecloud struck and injured two CHP officers before he attempted to exit through the back balcony. Using a high powered assault rifle, he shot Sacramento Sheriff Deputy Robert "Bob" French, who died on the way to the hospital.

"Convicted criminals like

Thomas Littlecloud should not have been allowed out on our streets," said former Chair of the Board of Parole Hearings Senator Jim Nielsen (R-Tehama). "State laws, court decisions and initiatives have turned the criminal justice system inside out."

Senator Nielsen added, "The lack of meaningful penalties has emboldened career criminals like Littlecloud. This individual has been apprehended with firearms on multiple occasions."

Since the passage of Assembly Bill 109 and Propositions 36, 47 and 57, criminals like Littlecloud now face diminished to no consequences for their continued criminality.

Senator Nielsen and others have made many attempts to strengthen laws to protect police officers and the public.

The Democrat-controlled Legislature denied passage of his proposals to support public safety. Earlier this year, Senator Nielsen introduced Senate Bill 652 to change current law to require that felons with firearms would return to state prison if they had been previously convicted of a violent felony. Even this modest change was rejected in committee.

Unfortunately, the weakening of the state's criminal justice system allowed for the release of convicted felons like copkiller Littlecloud whose criminal record spans 14 years.

The San Francisco Chronicle laid out the "extensive criminal history" of Littlecloud's life that included: Assault on officers and first responders; Drug possession; Robbery; Grand theft; Assault with stun gun; Battery on emergency personnel; Two counts of assault on peace officer or firefighter; Six counts of assault with or possession of firearms; Federal indictment on charges of possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine, illegal possession of a firearm and ammunition, using a counterfeit credit card and identity theft.

"Littlecloud's wide-ranging criminal behavior speaks for itself. Legislative acts, court decisions and initiatives facilitated this behavior," Senator Nielsen added.

Senator Nielsen represents the Fourth Senate District, which includes the counties of Butte, Colusa, Glenn, Placer, Sacramento, Sutter, Tehama and Yuha

Rising Star Jennifer Reason to Perform at Pioneer Church

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - Jennifer Reason, concert pianist, will perform at 3:00 p.m. Sunday, September 17, at Pioneer Congregational Church, 2700 L Street, across from Sutter's Fort.

This is the first concert in the 2017-2018 Sacramento Community Concert Association series. Hailed by German critics as a pianist "in the league of Carnegie Hall," a "rising star" whose playing is "lush, sensual and colorful: like a painting" (Sulzbach-Rosenberger), Reason is a vibrant young performer. Recently she completed her 8th international tour, including twice appearing as a soloist to critical acclaim at the Interharmony International Music Festival in Germany, as well as at the Schlern and Orfeo International Music Festivals in Italy. running a goat farm," she recalls. "My colleagues were surprised but no one said I was nuts. Some actually asked if they could join me. I bought three goats and settled them on the Rio Linda property I'd grown up on."

The lawyer had to master a new business. "We knew it would be lots of work," she recalls. "Dairy regulations had changed in the years since my dad was a gentleman farmer. I wasn't scared; it helped us that lawyers are trained to be problem solvers." By breeding her stock to enlarge the herd, she soon had enough milk to start experimenting with cheese production. Friends were happy recipients of small white tubs of chevre, feta and ricotta cheeses with Nick's portrait and "Friedrich Farm" on the label.

The greatest beneficiary was Nick, now 29 "At every opportunity, he loves to be with the goats," approves his mom. "I find him plenty of chores. He pulls branches down so the does can nibble the leaves. He cuts up carrots and apples for them. He loves to brush them. He calls them by name and they come to him. Goats are naturally affectionate; they know who their friends are.

"When people visit, Nick tells them about the herd and our routines. What the farm gives him is irreplaceable. Having something in your life that you feel good at – well, that gives life meaning.

Several other disabled students have worked at the Friedrich Farm. "People involved with the developmentally disabled like to find them places in agriculture," says the mentor. "Farm tasks can be simple. Animals respond to affection; they make you feel needed and loved. This gives their carers importance as human beings. Nick's friends proved their interest by milking and cleaning up after the goats. They all had something to show for their work at the end of the day. We made cheese and ice cream together."

Friedrich, husband Tim Blaine and their other sons Alex and Chris hope to establish a non-profit dairy farm to employ people like Nick. For now, the mission still needs to be businesslike. Does must have babies or they won't produce milk. But to manage the farm as a single operator, Friedrich must keep her herd small. Surplus stock must therefore be sold; usually for meat. +

SEPTEMBER 15, 2017

Because the babies were nurtured and named by their gentle son, the parents feared heartbreak. "So I took Nick to the market," says the mom. "He enjoyed the experience. Then I showed him the checks we got for our sales. He was impressed. He understands there must always be a business side of things."

Though gentlewoman farmer Friedrich has no yearning for her professional past, she admits farming is hard work. "You're tied to the goats," she explains. "They must be milked and tended every day. Every Friday night, Nick pretends to complain. He says he doesn't see why he should have to go out to the goats next morning. I tell him: it's okay, you can stay home. Then he insists: "no, mom, I'll go with you."

"I can see what an impact this farm and the goats have had on our son," she concludes. "I'll always know I did the right thing."

CDPH Launches Cannabis Public Education Campaign

By Corey Egel, CDPH

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) has launched a health information and education campaign about what's legal in California and potential health impacts of cannabis use. Senate Bill 94 (SB 94) - Medicinal and Adult Use Cannabis Regulation and Safety Act (MAUCRSA) makes it legal for adults 21 or older to possess, consume and cultivate cannabis in California. Sale of cannabis from licensed retail outlets will become legal January 1, 2018.

CDPH received funding to develop a campaign, as detailed in SB 94, describes: The scientific basis for restricting access of cannabis and cannabis products for persons under the age of 21 years; The penalties for providing access to cannabis and cannabis products to persons under the age of 21 years; The potential harms of using cannabis while pregnant or breastfeeding; The potential harms of overusing cannabis or cannabis products.

"CDPH engaged in extensive conversations with stakeholders in California and partners in other states with legalized cannabis to target the most vulnerable populations and apply their lessons learned," said CDPH Director and State Public Health Officer Dr. Karen Smith. "We are committed to providing Californians with science-based information to ensure safe and informed choices." CDPH has and will continue to incorporate the latest data available into public messages to increase awareness about how cannabis affects bodies, minds and health.

On CDPH's website, individuals can find information about legal, safe and responsible use, and health information for youth, pregnant and breastfeeding women, parents and mentors, and health care providers. CDPH produced fact sheets with safe storage tips and the important things Californians need to know about purchasing and possessing cannabis for personal use. Separate accounts?

Dear Dave,

I have a full-time job, but I also have a small Etsy business on the side selling 10 products that makes about $200 a month. I don't see the money from this part-time work getting any bigger in the future. Should I keep a separate account for this business, or just roll it into our regular checking account?

- Sydney

Dear Sydney,

It's very important to have a separate account, or accounts, for small businesses for two reasons. One, it's a huge help when it comes to taxes and tax season. It will also give you a much clearer picture of how your business is actually doing. Whether you're talking about revenue or tracking expenses, it will give vou an easy-to-read report card.

Even if the business is small and is going to stay small, I would want to know - almost as an intellectual exercise - which of my products were winning in the marketplace. This would help you concentrate on the ones that are making you money, and allow you to focus less on the ones that aren't doing so well.

Dave Says

So yeah, you need to keep a separate business account, and preferably a separate checking and savings account on your business. Make sure 100 percent of the income from the business goes into those accounts, and only expenses associated with the business come out of those accounts. With really small side businesses, your checkbook register can almost become a simplified profit and loss statement.

—Dave

Balance rebuilding and repaying

Dear Dave,

My wife and I have had marriage problems, and a lot of them were related to money. We're working through those issues and are on Baby Step 1 of your plan. In the process, we're talking more and things are getting better. We have $40,000 in credit card debt, along with a combined income of around $70,000, so I talked to her about taking an extra job or two. She said she would rather I be at home so we can spend more time together in working on our marriage. What should I do?

- James

Dear James. First and foremost, I would urge you two to begin seeing a good marriage counselor together. Money problems and fights over money are the number one cause of divorce in our country today. Continuing to deal with these issues, with the help of a good, caring counselor, will create even more communication.

I think you've both realized you're going to be in a mess if you don't address your income and money management issues. However, her concern about spending more time together and becoming closer is valid. Since you've just started the rebuilding process, maybe you could put off the extra jobs for a month or two – but no longer. That should give you both time to talk, hug on each other a lot, and start developing a solid plan together for the future! —Dave
