CARMICHAEL, CA (MPG) — Prestidigitators recently vied for the prestigeous Magician of the Year title at the Mission Oaks Community Center. A 15-year tradition, the contest is run by the Society of American Magicians and the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

A panel of entertainment industry judges chose Sacramento performer Al Skinner for the 2013 title. The award was applauded by local magicians and fans. Skinner's prize includes an opportunity to join a distinguished cast of Magicians at the Mission Oaks Community Center's annual "Mysteries of Magic" on October 19. The event is an annual tribute by the local magical brotherhood to Harry Houdini, who died in October 1926. At the time, the legendary escapist was national president of S.A.M. The show is also a fundraiser, with proceeds split between the S.A.M and Community Center programs. Admission is $5. For information, call S.A.M. President Dale Lorzo at (916) 481-2595 or visit www. Women's Empowerment Receives $14,000 For Job Training and Financial Literacy Programs

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) –Women's Empowerment recently received a $10,000 grant from Bank of America for its job readiness programs and a $4,000 grant from Umpqua Bank to fund its financial literacy programs for women who are homeless.

"If a woman is going to permanently break the cycle of homelessness for herself and her children, she needs a job and she needs to understand how to use her money wisely," said Lisa Culp, executive director, Women's Empowerment. "We are thankful to Bank of America and Umpqua for recognizing that women who are homeless face substantial barriers to employment and money management, but can be profoundly successful when they receive the right training."

Women's Empowerment's initial eight-week program for women who are homeless addresses their basic needs such as health and housing while preparing them to become work-ready. The job readiness component is mostly taught by volunteers from the community and includes computer literacy training, resume writing, communication skills, mock interviews, dressing for success and more. They also meet with an onsite employment specialist to search for jobs. Once women graduate from Women's Empowerment, they can join the advanced job readiness program that includes internships, paid job training programs, certifications and more. Women in the program also receive basic financial literacy training and individual counseling on saving, debt management, bank services and financial negotiations. Once they graduate from Women's Empowerment, they are eligible to join the advanced financial literacy program that includes a money management curriculum, more in-depth individual counseling and a grocery store field trip to practice budgeting. "So many women enter this program with gaps in their understanding of money management, as well as strong emotional ties to money since many have been victims of financial abuse," Culp said. "This program not only educates them, but helps them work through some of their emotional barriers to good money management so they can be successful long term." Women's Empowerment offers the only comprehensive job readiness program in the Sacramento area designed specifically for women who are homeless and their children. The 2009 Nonprofit of the Year has graduated 1,064 homeless women and their more than 2,000 children. Last year, 89 percent of graduates found homes and 78 percent found jobs or enrolled in school or training. The program combines self-esteem courses, job training, health classes and support services to help homeless women across diverse ages, races and cultures. Women's Empowerment is funded solely through private donations from the community. For more information and to donate online, visit www.womens-empowerment.org.

the Delta's northernmost city by boundary, says West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon. The city's drinking water is drawn from the Sacramento River. Lois Wolk (D-Davis), whose California Senate District included West Sacramento pre-redistricting, is proposing an alternate plan for conveying fresh water from northern California to Southern California. She has said she does not support the peripheral tunnels plan as proposed by Governor Jerry Brown. That plan calls for pumping more Sacramento River water through the Delta. Wildlife advocates, such as California Fish & Wildlife, worry how that will impact both the river, and the Delta's fragile ecosystem.

This just in (Saturday, Aug. 24) from the Sierra Club:

Dear Carol:

Something strange happened recently during the state's march to build a pair of peripheral tunnels around the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta. The tunnel proponents moved the tunnels.

With a certain amount of fanfare and one of those press-only press conferences, Secretary of Resources John Laird announced that the administration now proposes to move the pathway for the big tunnels that will draw river water from above the Delta and deliver it to south of the Delta.

The move would push the tunnels eastward and away from at least one farm still in production. Now the tunnels would run through Stanton Island – active feeding and resting space for Sandhill Cranes.

That crane space happens to be owned by The Nature Conservancy (TNC), the first environmental group to embrace the peripheral tunnels as a grand solution for the Delta. That embrace, by the way, came a few years ago, long before any details, including the environmental assessment of the proposed tunnels, were available.

The Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta. Photo Courtesy CDFW

Stanton Island will be a crane resort no more once the digging begins for the twin tunnels. Those tunnels are four stories high and, together, capable of moving water at the rate of 9000 cubic feet per second.

including People, the administration's water experts, have assumed for quite some time that Sierra Club has been officially opposed to the Delta tunnels. Make no mistake; we want something to be done to stop the Delta's ecosystem crash. It's the largest estuary along the west coast of North and South America. It's a key link to environmental health in our state and beyond. But until very recently, despite our open criticism of the proposed project, we haven't taken a position.

We delayed taking a position because we wanted to see the details of the proposal for the tunnels and hoped for the best. More than a year ago, we listed seven key questions involving costs, timing, impacts and operations that need to be answered. In May of this year, most – but not all – of those questions were addressed in some form in volumes of documents that will ultimately make up the draft environmental impact report for the peripheral tunnels proposal.

The Club's process for policymaking is notoriously deliberate and often slow. But that's a good thing. Our volunteers take seriously the notion that every viewpoint needs to be aired, heard and considered. In July, after many, many months of conversation and debate - in person, on conference calls and via long email chains the policymaking body of Sierra Club California, which includes representatives from every part of the state, voted to oppose the peripheral tunnels proposal.

There you have it. We are officially opposed to the proposal to build two giant tunnels that will move water from the Sacramento River system, around the Delta, and to the south. We are taking this position because there is too much certainty that the tunnels will further degrade the Delta environment. There is too little certainty that it will solve the essential water supply problems all Californians face as we grapple with climate change.

That's all Californians. Too often, California's water supply issue has been framed as one of Northern California vs. Southern California. That framing is a devious way to distract like-minded Californians from solving our key problem: What do we need to do to help everyone in the state conserve a precious resource while enhancing the economy and protecting the environment?

There are a lot of answers to this question, and none of them include becoming more dependent on exports through or around the Delta.

For instance, we all need to devote more resources to water conservation. That means going beyond low-flush toilets. We need industrial-scale improvements in water conservation, new investment infixing the old, leaking infrastructure in our cities, and employing more and better recycling.

We need to make better, wiser use

CARMICHAEL COMMUNITY UPDATE

By County Supervisor Susan Peters

Through the generosity of The Carmichael Times this column serves to provide an update periodically about matters affecting the unincorporated community of Carmichael.

Support the Animal Shelter

The public can demonstrate their support for Sacramento County's Animal Shelter and its furry inhabitants while enjoying a fun filled evening at the "Whiskers and Wine" party on Saturday, September 21. The fundraising event is being sponsored by the facility's nonprofit support group TEAM - Teaching Everyone Animals Matter.

This is an opportunity to have

state where farmers ought to have a chance to farm solar productively

in exchange for reducing their water

We need to stop polluting the clean water we have. We need to clean up the groundwater supplies

around the state that are not potable

And we need to seriously

consider water impacts when we decide as a society which industries

we want to grow. Why are we even allowing fracking in this state when

that activity is so heavily dependent on sucking up massive amounts of demand for conventional crops.

because of past pollution.

fun and help the animals at the state-of-the art Animal Shelter located at 3839 Bradshaw Road. The program begins at 6 p.m. Attendees will be able to enjoy a delicious buffet dinner, wine tasting, music, and both a silent and live auction.

Tickets cost $50 per person at the door but can be purchased in advanced for a discount at $40. For more information please call 361-7604 or visit sacanimalshelter.org.

Honoring Carmichael

Enjoy the fun by attending Carmichael's 104th Founders Day event on Saturday, September 28, honoring Daniel Webster Carmichael, who developed the community that bears his name.

Carmichael Park will be the birthday party's location, which starts with a pancake breakfast sponsored by the Fair Oaks Lions Club from 8 to 11:30 a.m. The official celebration kicks off at 10 a.m. that includes classic cars, music, food, arts and crafts as well as plenty of activities for children with all the fun continuing to 3 pm. More information is available online at carmichaelpark.com.

Crime Lab Sacramento

Next month please join me and hear from Supervising Deputy

District Attorney Anne Marie Schubert and Crime Lab Director Jill Spriggs about the role of the District Attorney's Crime Lab at my Community Coffee Meeting on Wednesday October 15 in nearby Fair Oaks. They will be speaking about how that research is used for prosecutions, which should be of interest to all you fans of the popular CSI television show.

The meeting will be at 7:30 am at the Fair Oaks Water District, 10326 Fair Oaks Blvd. near Winding Way. Before the presentation, I will give a brief update on Sacramento County activities.

Each month the Crime Lab processes evidence for more than 1,000 cases. The lab and its criminalists are an important member of Sacramento County's Public Safety team processing evidence as large as a full-sized SUV or as small as a microscopic fiber. Equally diverse are the cases, ranging from driving under the influence of alcohol to homicides for all law enforcement agencies in Sacramento County, plus the California Highway Patrol and Folsom State Prison.

Susan Peters represents the Third District on the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors. She can be reached at susanpeters@ saccounty.net.

Sierra Club Opposes Peripheral Tunnels clean water, polluting it, and then of farmlands. There are parts of the casting it aside as waste? These are just a few answers, but you get the idea.

As long as everyone in the water world stays focused on that old standby, the notion of creating a new way to move water around or through the Delta, Californians will be shortchanged. It's time for the state's water leaders to take a new tack. Abandon the costly peripheral tunnels and invest in the answers that we can all live with, that will make every region more sustainable, and will support all Californians.

One more thing: In addition to moving the tunnels, the latest proposal also calls for reducing their length from 35 miles to 30 miles. That's a good trend. Keep cutting and we'll be rid of that crazy peripheral tunnels idea for good.

Sincerely,

Kathryn Phillips, Director Sierra Club California

Denied for Life

Dear Dave,

My husband was recently denied term life insurance because he has a criminal record from a long time ago. The good news is that, in a year, he'll be far enough removed from the incident that he'll be eligible for a policy. He has a whole life policy for $75,000 from before, which he doesn't plan to cancel. We have two small children, so is there another kind of policy he could get in the interim?

- Dana

Dear Dana.

If you can't get term life insurance, you can't get whole life. It's the same underwriting process. I only recommend term policies, but under these circumstances I'd keep the whole life in place because he's basically uninsurable.

There are a couple of things you can do in this kind of situation. One thing is to get a mortgage life insurance policy. These are usually available without any kind of major inspection, and they pay off your mortgage, in full, in the event of death. It's about 10 times more expensive than regular term insurance, but at least it will pay off the house.

Another thing to look into is an automatic issue-type policy. Lots of banks offer these when you open an account. Usually, they'll send you an offer for a $10,000 life insurance policy. But if you pick up four or five of these, then he's got another $50,000

on top of the $75,000 already in place. It's still not enough,

but it's better than nothing.

But I wouldn't spend a lot when he's only got a year left until

he can get some good, proper coverage. I recommend people have eight to 10 times their annual income in life insurance coverage.

So, if he makes $50,000 a year,

he needs to have $400,000 to $500,000 in a good, level term

policy. That's what you guys need to shoot for a year from now!

I have a townhouse I'm preparing to rent. Do you have any advice for evaluating potential

The first thing I'd do is pull

a credit bureau report. I'm not really worried about their credit

score; I just want to see if they have a history of late or missed payments. Talk to some local property management firms and see who they use to pull these reports. I'd also recommend doing a background check on the potential renters. Talk to the owner of the last place they rented as well as the one before. I advise this because there are some dishonest landlords out there who will tell you that a bad tenant is

- Chris

Dear Chris.

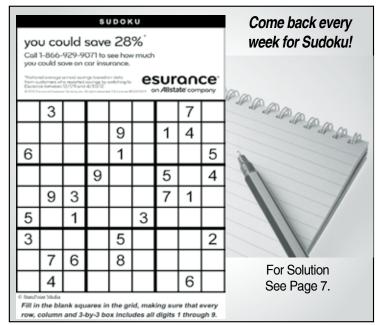

wonderful just to get them out of their property.

A lot of things, though, are simply common sense measures. Have them fill out an application, which includes their income and a list of their debts. If they make $2,000 a month and have $2,500 a month in debt payments, you don't want them as tenants. In this scenario, a smile and "I promise I can pay it" won't work.

Spend some time just talking with them too. Really listen to what they say and how they say it. Get a feel for what kind of people they are, and, if they have children, pay special attention to the kids. Are they well behaved, or do they run around and act like a bunch of wild animals? If it's the latter, then they're going to tear up your house. And guess what? If the parents can't discipline their kids, there's a good chance they can't discipline themselves either. You don't want to get mixed up with that. People who let kids run the household don't make good tenants.

Finally, remember to trust your gut instincts. If you get a weird vibe from someone, or if things just feel strange, don't rent to them. Chances are, there's a reason you have those feelings. - Dave
