Worried about Student Privacy?

We're facing unchecked data collection as part of a significant and sweeping federal educational mandate, creating a false sense of security.

Commentary by Dr. Paul Kengor

There's an intense debate right now over "Common Core," a major effort to implement a set of federal education standards in public schools nationwide. The Common Core State Standards thus far have been adopted by 45 states and the District of Columbia.

Though it isn't my area of expertise, I've received numerous impassioned emails on the subject. Among them, one person's concerns particularly struck me.

This person is an expert in the field of education. She is thoughtful, serious, and no foe of public education. Her concerns especially hit home given current fears over privacy intrusions by the federal government. Those fears have swirled around the National Security Agency, the Justice Department, and the IRS. But they don't end there. There are likewise potentially serious privacy problems involving Common Core, which likewise relate to data collection, dissemination, and use.

To that end, my friend is hoping to at least help kindle some public awareness.

"The portion [of Common Core] that I believe is most important for raising public awareness," she writes, "is the changes to the FERPA regulations which have greatly expanded who has access to student data." FERPA is the Federal Education Rights and Privacy Act of 1974. Changes have been made to FERPA (some believe) will leave parents uninformed as to how their children's records are shared. "Parents seem totally unaware of what data is being collected," she adds. "In Pennsylvania it is collected under something called the PIMS system, but in other states it has different labels."

There's more. There's also the problem of a rise in "outside vendors and providers to manage student data—again, without parental consent."

How, specifically, would this happen?

For starters, the Common Core standards include a heavy testing component, which involves a great deal of data collection on students. Coupled with this heightened collection of student data is the prevalence of so-called "longitudinal state reporting systems." According to my friend, as part of the "Race to the Top" initiative, states were encouraged to create "robust data collection systems." These systems were touted as a mechanism to provide school districts, state governments, and federal policymakers with more data to analyze trends in student achievement and improve educational efforts. While this might seem benign, notes my friend, we cannot ignore the sheer volume of data that will be collected and how that data might be misused. For instance, most parents have no idea that their child's "personal information" includes not just test scores but social security numbers, attendance records, records of interaction with school counselors, identification of learning disabilities, and even disciplinary records.

All of this is being collected.

And yet, because such enhanced data collection exceeds the resources of many districts and states, schools will be forced to contract the service to corporations that collect, manage, and store such data—and possibly share it. In other words, outside data managers must be employed to maintain this personal data on your kids. Is there any level of oversight to ensure this data is protected?

My friend writes that "this trend of data collection relates to changes in the FERPA regulations by the Education Department in 2011. These changes, made without congressional approval, now allow third party access to student data without the consent of parents. For example, vendors, seeking to market particular products, can access this data."

And there's still more, relating specifically to private religious schools. My friend adds: "One particular concern that I think speaks to Catholic interests is the rush on the part of some dioceses (and other private schools) to adopt the Common Core and buy-in to the assessments connected with such systems (and as such the data collection)."

Indeed, the Catholic press is hot on this issue, realizing the distinct impact that Common Core can have on Catholic schools—the nation's largest segment of private/religious schooling. Nationwide, groups of Catholics have sprung up in protest. The National Catholic Education Association hasn't endorsed the standards, but is helping Catholic schools prepare for implementation.

Perhaps most troublesome, all of this derives from federal/national influences, even as Common Core is instituted at the state level. As my friend states: "the push for the adoption of the state longitudinal data systems and the Common Core assessment collection all stem from national influences. Certainly,

Still Going Strong After 75 Years of Marriage

By Janet Warren

CARMICHAEL, CA (MPG) – August 6th marked the 75th wedding anniversary of Aubrey & Lucile Glahn.

"Aub" and "Cile" met at a baseball game in 1935 in Fort Collins, Colorado. Aub would often walk across town with his accordion to serenade Cile. With a few family members and a couple of friends present, they were married on August 6, 1938 on Aub's 21st birthday. The church parsonage was quarantined because the pastor's children were ill, so they were married in the church.

Aubrey and Lucile Glahn, celebrating 75 years of marriage.

Following the ceremony, they went to a dance. Aub had his own dance band and was playing for a dance that evening. They didn't tell anyone they had just been married because in those days, people often chivared a newly married couple. Lucile danced with others as Aub played the saxophone or clarinet on stage. She was often asked why she was so "gussied" up for the evening.

When the war broke out, Aub was deferred because he worked for an ice cream company making milk products. Cile was grateful he was able to remain home. Their only child, Janet, was born in 1942. Lucile says that Aub made $12/week and had every other Sunday afternoon off from work. Aub gave her $5 each week for groceries, and she was often able to return $2 to him. A $2 bill was passed back and forth for weeks until she finally put it in her wallet, and it has remained there for 70 years!

They moved to Sacramento in 2007, to be near their daughter, her husband, Mark, four grandchildren and their spouses, and four great-grandchildren. They left the home where they had lived for 64 years, which they had purchased for $2,350. They were honored by the city of Fort Collins a few years earlier for being the longest residents in that particular area of the city.

They currently live at Carmichael Oaks Senior Living. They're able to attend family events and can now participate in holidays and birthday celebrations. A celebration of their 75th anniversary was held Sunday, August 4th at their daughter's and son-in-law's home.

A second celebration was held at Carmichael Oaks Senior Living on August 6th. Few people are able to celebrate 75 years of marriage, and our family was very excited to be a part of this event!

Businesswoman Annie Marszal is a contestant for the 2013 Honorary Mayor position, promoted by the Carmichael Chamber of Commerce. Picture by Susan Maxwell Skinner Honorary mayoral candidate Virginia Stone was introduced in last week's Carmichael Times. This week, we introduce candidate Annie Marszal.

The mayoral race is pumping up. Carmichael Chevron gas station's representative Annie Marszal is the latest citizen chasing the office.

Her family operates gas stations in Sacramento and in other states and has owned Chevron pumps at Walnut and Marconi for over 30 years. Annie is an executive for local and national family interests.

The 30-year-old follows more than Marszal business tradition. Ed Marszal sought the mayoral post in 1986. Though too family is really committed to Carmichael."

As part of her campaign platform, Annie has pledged to help the town rebuild its community swimming pool. "Swimming has been huge part of my life," she asserts. "It helps kids stay healthy and stay in line. Not everyone has access to private pools; a community pool is important." The candidate promises to split her fundraising total 50-50 between the aquatic project and the chamber.

A water polo whiz at Rio Americano, Annie thanks swimming for getting her into college and for kick-starting lifelong friendships. She is rattling corporate cages at Chevron for grants to help local swimmers. The activist also plans campaign fundraisers. "I'm a busy kind of person," she says. "I don't sit on a couch. I serve on the board for United Cerebral Palsy and I'm grateful to have such opportunities at my age."

Still single, Annie is the proud mom of two Maltese puppies: Fred and Betty.

She studied political science at Cal Berkeley and made New York home base for selling Sports Illustrated and CNN advertising. Two years ago, she returned to Carmichael and started working for dad. "There was no entitlement," she says. "I learned the business from the ground up. I was a cashier; then I managed a gas station. If you think that's easy, it's not. You work hard all day. When it's time to go home -- and your dog watch shift worker doesn't show up -- well, you're it. "I've been learning about business since childhood," she continues. "Going to work for your family every day is a personal investment and it's rewarding. "If I am elected, I want to help the Chamber in its support of other local businesses."

the changes in FERPA were undertaken through the U.S. Department of Education."

My friend sums up: "I find the level of data collection on individual students to be excessive, and the transparency...to be lacking." Such data collection methods "put the federal government in a position to track student achievement in ways that have been previously unavailable due to the sheer size of data mining, and have been (until recently) safeguarded by privacy regulations. As an educator I care deeply about the ability for our nation's school children to achieve high levels of learning, yet I believe the decisions for student learning are best accomplished at the classroom and school level, not the federal level."

We're facing, in essence, unchecked data collection as part of a significant and sweeping federal educational mandate. Are we ready for this, and all its repercussions?

My friend pleads for some "public awareness and dialogue in this area." Who could object to that?

It's back to school time. We are finishing our summer break and getting back into a routine. Even those of us no longer in school can use this time to get back into a rhythm. Understanding how important our rhythms are can reduce stress and increase our feelings of happiness.

With summer (or known as Pitta season in Ayurveda) we often allow our schedules to get out of alignment. Here are some simple solutions to get back in balance.

Establish a Routine:

- Having a set time to wake up and go to bed really helps keep the unfocused on track.

Wake Up With Energy:

- Early to bed and early to rise is the most effective strategy for overall wellness. If you waken earlier (by 6:00am at the latest) you will actually have an increase in energy.
- Start with 10 power breaths before your feet hit the floor. Gives the body energy and releases toxins.
- Drink 8oz of room (or warm) water before anything else. Hydrates the body, improves elimination, and releases stored toxins.

Back to School Rules

- For families, designate the time for you to waken that allows for some self-time. (I am a mom too and know it's not always easy, but worth it). Then pre-determine what time is best for the kids to waken.

- Have a designated time and place for homework. (With multiple kids, sports, after school activities, and your work schedule- though it sounds intimidating- set aside the time and place)

- Designate a place for backpacks, homework, items needing signatures (shoes and keys too!!)

- Set aside time for play or exercise. This often goes by the wayside when we have too much on our plate.

- Determine the nights when you will eat together as a family.

- Pick out clothes the night before. (This is a habit that will take your kids past school into adulthood!)

- Start winding down at least 30 min before bedtime. Be aware of what you and your family watch, read, or see late at night. Reduce the white noise in the house if possible before bedtime.

- Use lavender or vanilla or a warm bath if sleep eludes you.

Regardless of how old we are, we are all designed to keep learning and thriving. A routine restores the balance in our body so that we can be less stressed and more present. Take that first step today.

Thrive Instead of Struggle:

Think about this- If you want your family to have intelligence in their learning day- then avoid foods without "intelligence". Junk foods, empty calories, high in sugar, and FLUNC foods (remember that's frozen, leftover, unnatural, nuked, canned) lack the necessary vitamins and nutrients your family needs for a healthy and "intelligent" day. While sleep is necessary for mental development, our diet is the primary focus for positive results.

- Eat fresh whenever possible
- Eat from the colors of the rainbow
- Eat seasonally
- Plan your meals and your snacks
- Avoid eating 2 hours before bedtime

From Calm to Chaos

While going back to school gives a family routine, it can also create great demands on a family's day.

SUPERHERO "KICK-ASS 2" STORY GETS COMIC, BRUTAL AND NASTY

Faison) and Night Bitch (Lindy Booth), an ordinary girl by day and a Catwoman-like sexy figure by night.

For a movie that contains some very graphic violence and brutality, the comic element springs, in part, from the transition of Christopher Mintz-Plasse's Red Mist character of the first film into a full-blown super villain who goes by a moniker not printable in a family newspaper.

For the sake of clean language, we'll go with Red Mist's given name of Chris D'Amico, who still nurses a desire for revenge for the death of his father at the hands of Kick-Ass. After the accidental death of his mother, Chris inherits a fortune.

With seemingly limitless funds, Chris acts like a spoiled rich kid as he hatches an evil scheme to recruit the scum of the earth into a super villain's army. His best conscript is Mother Russia (Olga Kurkulina), a truly frightening psychopath.

As to be expected, there is climactic showdown between the Justice Forever good guys and the villains. The best thing about "Kick-Ass 2" remains the sweet yet tough appeal of Hit Girl.

TV UPDATE - STARZ ORIGINAL PROGRAMS GROW AS LOSSES MOUNT

During the recent national TV press tour, Chris Albrecht, CEO of the Starz cable channel, announced a goal for 2014 to air more than 50 hours of original programs.

Starz has had critical, if not financial, success with several original series, including "Boss," starring Kelsey Grammar as a ruthless Chicago mayor, and "Magic City," starring Jeffrey Dean Morgan as the owner of a ritzy Miami Beach hotel during the early 1960's.

At a press conference on July 26th, Albrecht answered a question about a possible third season for "Magic City" only by saying that there many "surprises left in the last three episodes" and that Starz is "evaluating all the options" with "Magic City."

Little more than a week later, Starz announced that they would not order a third season of "Magic City." Listening to TV executives is a lot like trying to figure out what politicians are really saying.

Albrecht dropped another clue on the TV critics when he said in his answer about the fate of "Magic City" that they had a couple of surprises in store "so I can't reveal too much other than you'll have the answer to your question soon."

Okay, he was at least right about the last part, knowing soon, that is. So while we may never be able to check into the Miramar Playa again, there will be other new programs.

Interestingly, Albrecht also revealed a second season pick up for "Black Sails," based in part on fan reaction at Comic-Con to a viewing of the first episode. And in 2014 there will be a second season of "Da Vinci's Demons."

Palace intrigue is always good for TV programs. Just ask Showtime about "The Tudors." Launched this month, "The White Queen" is a limited ten-hour series based on Philippa Gregory's best-selling novel "The Cousins' War." "The White Queen" is set against the backdrop of England's War of the Roses, but it is told through the eyes of three main female characters as they manipulate behind the scenes for the throne of England.

The year is 1464, before the Tudor dynasty, and war has been ravaging throughout England over who is the rightful King. It is a bitter dispute between two sides of the same family, the House of York and the House of Lancaster.

There may not be a sequel to "The White Queen," but Philippa Gregory continues to be a prolific writer about medieval British royal history, so the source material will be available for several new series.

I know little about the finances of cable networks, but it is obvious that programs like "Magic City" and "The White Queen" have tremendous production costs, which must be recouped.

If the audience for a Starz original series does not grow over time, the financial losses continue to mount, which has factored into whether series stay or go. Starz is committed to keep searching for the right balance.

KICK-ASS 2 (Rated R)

Just in case it wasn't obvious in the original, the R rating achieved by the comical superhero franchise "Kick-Ass" has been attached for a purpose. Notwithstanding the lead characters being teens, this is not a family film.

Arguably, the thrust of "Kick-Ass 2" appears even more intense and over-the-top than the first, though there was something completely shocking about a foul-mouthed pre-teen vigilante superhero in Hit Girl the first time around.

Chloe Grace Moretz's Hit Girl is now in high school, watched over by her guardian, a police officer (Morris Chestnut), who insists that she hang up her uniform to be a normal teenager, known only by her given name of Mindy Macready. Of course, that's not part of her plan.

Meanwhile, Hit Girl's partner in crime-fighting, Kick-Ass (Aaron Taylor-Johnson), now a high school senior, has also put away his green and yellow spandex uniform. But Kick-Ass inspired a motley crew of masked vigilantes to continue the efforts to battle the bad guys.

Mindy tries to fit in with the school's clique of popular girls, even trying out for the cheerleader squad. Her acrobatic moves, inspired by Hit Girl's martial arts skills, make the other contestants look inferior.

Of course, the cool kids are, in fact, the mean girls, and they are just like the obnoxious students in Lindsay Lohan's "Mean Girls," and to a lesser extent, "Clueless."

At school, Kick-Ass is Dave Lizewski, a rather nerdy fellow who's bored by his mundane life, so he starts patrolling the streets with Justice Forever, a fearless group of urban watchdogs fronted by Colonel Stars and Stripes (Jim Carrey).

Members of the colonel's squad of masked crime-fighters include Dr. Gravity (Donald

By Ronnie McBrayer

There is an old story about a monastery that fell on hard times. Once it had thrived, but over the years it had become so decimated that only a few old monks were left living in an even older house. People no longer came there to be nourished spiritually, and only a handful of the brothers shuffled through the cloisters.

Deep in the monastery woods was a little cabin where an old rabbi occasionally came to fast and pray. No one ever spoke with him, but whenever he appeared the word would be passed from monk to monk: "The rabbi walks in the woods." And, for as long as he was there, the monks would feel blessed by his presence.

One day the abbot decided to visit the rabbi and open his heart to him. As he approached the hut, the abbot saw the rabbi in the doorway. It was as if he had been awaiting the abbot's arrival. The rabbi stood with his arms outstretched in welcome. Though they had never spoken, the two embraced like brothers.

The two entered the hut and simply sat in the stillness. Then the rabbi began to weep. The abbot covered his face with his hands and began to cry too. The two old men sat there like lost children, crying their hearts out, filling the hut with their shared pain and tears.

When the tears ceased, the rabbi lifted his head and spoke, "You and your brothers are serving God with heavy hearts," he said, "and I know you have come to ask a teaching of me. But it is the same in my town. Almost no one comes to the synagogue anymore." Very little else was said.

When the time came for the abbot to leave, he embraced the rabbi once again and said, "It has been a wonderful thing that we should talk after all these years. But is there nothing you can give us that would help us save our dying order?" The rabbi paused and said quietly to the old abbot, "Well, there is one thing I have to tell you: One of you is the Messiah."

The abbot left without a word and without ever looking back. The next morning, the abbot called his monks together. He told them he had spoken to the old rabbi from the woods, and then he looked at his assembled brothers and said bluntly, "The rabbi said that one of us is the Messiah."

In the days and weeks that followed, the old monks began to think about the rabbi's words and wondered whether it could actually be true - the Messiah is one of us?

Thinking like this, the old monks began to treat each other with extraordinary respect on the off chance that one of them just might actually be the Messiah.

And on the off, off chance that each monk himself might be the Messiah, they began to treat themselves with extraordinary respect.

A gentle, warm-hearted, concern began to grow among them which was hard to describe but easy to notice. Over time, as people visited the beautiful forest in which the monastery was home, they sensed the extraordinary respect that now began to surround the old monks and seemed to radiate from them.

There was something strangely attractive, even compelling, about it. Hardly knowing why, people began to come back to the monastery more frequently to picnic, to play, to meditate, and pray. They began to bring their friends to show them this special place, and their friends brought their friends.

Then it happened that some of the younger men who came to visit the monastery started to talk more and more with the old monks. After awhile, one asked if he could join them. Then another. And another. Within a few years, the monastery had once again become a thriving order and a light to the community, thanks to the rabbi's gift - a gift that taught them to look at and love others, expecting the very best.

Dave Says

Loving Your Friend Enough for the Truth

Dear Dave,
 I have a close friend whose 17-year-old daughter is going to take out student loans to attend an expensive private school, and tuition alone over four years will cost $100,000. I feel this is a really bad idea, but I don't know how to talk to her about this.

- Natalie

Dear Natalie,

I'm sure your friend and her family are nice people. But what we've got here is a little teenage girl who has her heart set on something, and no one has told her no in awhile. You're getting ready to help introduce a new word into her vocabulary, because what you've described to me is stupid.

Listen, I love high school band directors. It just doesn't make sense to spend over $100,000 on a degree to become one. Most of them make about $30,000 a year, so the return on investment for this kind of thing is terrible. It doesn't matter if you're a band director, English teacher, or a doughnut shop owner; you need to figure out what you're going to make versus what you spend to get there.

Make sure you talk to your friend directly, not her daughter. If you do that, you'll end up branded as mom's mean friend. Use your relationship and history together to help her see this is a train wreck waiting to happen.

My suggestion would be for her daughter to live at home, work, and attend a community college for a couple of years. Then, when she transfers to a four-year school, make sure it's a state institution and she keeps working.

The trick is to kindly and gently maintain enough influence to guide these two weak people away from a horrible decision. At the same time, you've got to be strong enough to call mom out for not stepping up and providing proper guidance. Mommies who don't try to stop their babies from doing things this dumb are known as bad mommies. People who spend $100,000 to $150,000 to make the kind of money that's waiting on her daughter are either young and inexperienced, or they're what are known as fools.

I'm sure you'll find a nice way to say it, but basically, your friend needs to grow a backbone and tell her daughter no.

CARMICHAEL, CA (MPG) — Carmichael Elks last weekend achieved nostalgic outreach with a car show and sock-hop.

More than 40 vintage vehicles parked for public inspection in the Cypress Avenue lodge backyard. Indoors, a rock 'n roll band played for dancing.

The auto show culminated with a best-of-show prize, awarded to the 1941 Willys Coupe shown by Danny Ausmus of Citrus Heights. Ladies choice was a 1948 Bentley.

Winners also earned invitations to cruise in the Elks' July 4 parade next year.

The event was a fundraiser for the Elks Lodge beautification project. Learn about Carmichael Elks organization by calling (916) 489-2103 or E mail Carmelks@comcast.net

What You Need to Know About Congress Right Now

Commentary
By Lee Hamilton

Deeply unpopular and flagrantly unproductive, Congress is on its August recess right now. It won't return until Sept. 9, after a five-week recess, leaving itself just a few days to settle issues like raising the debt ceiling and passing a federal budget. Here are some things you should know about where it stands at this stage of the game:

— Few, if any, Congresses can match this one for futility. It managed to help out some communities in the wake of Hurricane Sandy and to reach a deal on presidential nominations, but mostly it can't get things done — whatever your politics. The repeal of Obamacare, action on climate change, a “grand bargain” on our fiscal problems, education and tax reform, creating jobs, strengthening gun laws... the list of dropped balls is long, although there is still hope for immigration reform, if just barely. A few weeks ago Speaker John Boehner told Americans not to judge Congress by how many laws it passes, but by how many it repeals. It hasn't succeeded on either count.

— The budget process is a mess. It's been years since Congress put together a budget according to its regular order, but even by its recent low standards this year has been chaotic. None of the appropriations bills needed for the government to continue running after Sept. 30 has been enacted. “It is common for Congress to leave big budget fights until the last minute,” the Wall Street Journal's Janet Hook wrote as Congress left town, “but the budgeting process now seems so adrift that even congressional veterans find it hard to see a resolution.”

Passing a budget is the most basic function of government, and Congress can't manage it.

— Members of Congress do not like to compromise. The parties are more divided ideologically than they've been for many decades, with one side fiercely hostile to government and the other convinced that government can accomplish good things. Neither side can get things done on its own. That's pretty much the definition of when responsible lawmakers step forward to build a consensus. Yet in this Congress, either they don't know how or they're not interested. A glimmer of hope does exist, as more members respond to polls showing Americans believe it's more important for the parties to compromise than to stick to their positions. They may not be able to come to agreement, but some of them are talking about how willing they are to reach across the aisle.

— Even so, it's worth noticing that one of the congressional parties is extraordinarily difficult to lead at the moment. The Republicans are fractured and squabbling over their future direction. This makes me sympathize with the formidable task the Republican leadership confronts.

— Hardly anyone out there thinks Congress is doing a good job — it's consistently below 20 percent approval ratings — and most people think it's too partisan. Yet members aren't very concerned. They've become quite skilled at running against Washington, even though they are Washington. And they count on the fact that few voters hold their own member of Congress responsible for its shortcomings, however unpopular Congress as a whole has become.

— As lobbyists descend in swarms on Capitol Hill, they hold more power than ever. They rain cash, twist arms, and even draft bills — all the things that powerful congressional leaders used to do. The NRA's defeat of legislation strengthening background checks for gun purchases, in the face of overwhelming public sentiment after Newtown, was nothing less than an impressive display of political clout and an example of how influential lobbyists and special interests have become. Perhaps this is why a good number of my former colleagues have made a tidy living for themselves by becoming lobbyists.

— Finally, all of this contributes to the emerging themes for the 2014 congressional campaign. Candidates will clearly run against the mess in Washington, and a good number of them, though not all, will talk regularly about the need to be bipartisan. The big question for 2015 will be whether the successful ones can translate their talk into legislation to help move the country forward.

Lee Hamilton is Director of the Center on Congress at Indiana University. He was a member of the U.S. House of Representatives for 34 years.

Dare to Live Without Limits

BRICK WALLS

by Bryan Golden

You have objectives you want to accomplish. Some of them are easily achieved. Others are more challenging. Then there are times when you feel as if you're up against a brick wall when trying to achieve some goals. When this happens, it seems as if it's impossible to make any progress.

What should you do when you are facing a brick wall? Some people will give up, resigning themselves to accepting their goals as unattainable. They may also justify quitting by thinking it must not be meant to be. Failure only occurs when one quits. Therefore, quitting is not a suitable strategy.

Brick walls test your resolve. The only people who get past them are those who want to reach their objective badly enough. The reason there are fewer successful people than unsuccessful ones is because of the deterrent effect of brick walls.

In order to get past a brick wall, you must be more than motivated. You need a burning desire. You have to be willing to devote whatever time and effort is necessary. Moving beyond a brick wall in your path is not an easy task. However, there are limitless rewards on the other side.

As you progress through life, you will encounter multiple brick walls. With each one you break through, you become stronger. You gain confidence as you go. Some walls are thicker than others, but none can stop you when you decide your progress will not be halted.

Here are the traits you need to get through a brick wall: determination, persistence, perseverance, drive, endurance, desire, flexibility, and consistency. These are the same characteristics all successful people share.

Determination gives you a laser-like focus. It enables you to concentrate all your efforts in one direction. This gives you incredible power which leads to awesome accomplishments. Persistence is what carved the Grand Canyon from solid rock with nothing more than rainwater. Imagine what persistence will do for you.

Perseverance keeps you going when others stop and turn back. How long it takes to break through your wall doesn't matter. The time goes by anyway. You never want to look back on today and wish you had kept going.

Drive keeps you in gear and moving forward. Just revving your engine may make lots of noise, but it gets you nowhere. Endurance gives you the ability to keep going when you're exhausted. It's when you feel you have nothing left that you must keep at it.

Desire is the fuel that keeps your engine of accomplishment running. You know you have a burning desire when you want something so bad you can taste it. Desire allows you to keep you laser-focused.

Flexibility enables you to be resourceful and creative when formulating strategies to break through your walls. Not everything you attempt will work as expected. Flexibility empowers you to adjust your approach as necessary to produce the results you want.

Consistency is the opposite of being a flash in the pan. You don't just put in some effort for a predetermined, limited period of time. Consistency keeps you hammering at your wall day in and day out.

Not only can you break through your brick walls, but you will only encounter them when you're on the right track. Anything worthwhile takes effort. The loftier your goals, the bigger the walls you'll encounter.

The next time you encounter a wall, focus not on the wall but on the path that lies beyond. To become discouraged and turn back is a shame. The only direction is forward. Let nothing stand in your way.

"Be Happy"

By Micheal Messmer

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) – Have you ever really thought about happiness? Or maybe you shouldn't think too much about it...because that's what's happened to Bruce Carver. And now he's thinking about ending it all...simply because he can't figure out what it means to be happy. Then he encounters a thief with a degree in philosophy. Really. And the game is afoot.

Arden Playhouse is delighted to present BE HAPPY a devastatingly comic exploration of almost every idea anyone has ever had about what it means to be happy. And what can happen to people who over-analyze things until they become totally confused.

In another original comedy by Michael Messmer, you have to wonder if he's channeling Woody Allen or just poking fun at people who may be too smart for their own good. The talented ensemble includes Blake Flores as Bruce, Keri Long as Sally, Katie Pratt as Kris, and Laura Hechel as Marcy.

8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays — August 23 thru September 28 *except 8/30 & 8/31.

Sunday Matinees 2 p.m. — September 8 and 15. *Note: there are no performances Labor Day Weekend.
