Smiles for Kids Reaches Out

Smile Kingdom Dental Gives Kids “A Smile to Last a Lifetime”

Dr. Jose Juarez (above) performs a checkup on Evelyn Murzak (9) during Smiles for Kids. Although this was his first time hosting the volunteer event at his new practice, Smile Kingdom Dental, Dr. Juarez has volunteered his services for several years. The fantasy-themed decor was inspired by Juarez's own children.

Story and photos by Anne Stokes

Dr. Kasi Franck (left), of Franck Family Dental in Rocklin, volunteered her time during the Smiles for Kids event. Franck, who has been volunteering her time for the past 10 years, said, “It’s a great opportunity to help the kids who fall in between the cracks; the ones who don’t have dental insurance or may not qualify for Denti-Cal but still need dental treatment done.”

RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG) - Smile Kingdom Dental’s grand opening isn’t until February 23rd, but the Rancho Cordova dentist office opened its doors two weeks early for some very special patients on Saturday, February 7th. Dr. Jose Juarez and his staff were one of several local practices hosting the Sacramento District Dental Society’s Smiles for Kids program, an annual event that serves uninsured or underinsured children with needed dental care free of charge.

depending on the office, [between] 20 patients to 50 patients,” said Dr. Juarez. “We are doing a lot of exams, cleanings, of course we’re taking x-rays on all the patients, and we’re taking care of any large cavities that need to be treated. Of course, if the child is complaining of any kind of pain, we’re getting them out of pain.”

Originally founded in 1991, the Smiles for Kids program provides screenings, dental care, and education to children from low-income families throughout Sacramento, Amador, El Dorado, Placer, and Yolo counties. Since its inception, the foundation has granted more than 350,000 children with roughly $13 million in free dental care.

“Today we have several volunteers who have given up their time on their day off

Governor Brown Signs Compact With Jackson Rancheria Band of Miwuk Indians

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. announced that he has signed a tribal-state gaming compact between the State of California and the Jackson Rancheria band of Miwuk Indians.

The terms of the new compact are consistent with provisions of more recent compacts related to licensing, compliance enforcement, and mitigation of off-reservation gaming impacts but have been updated to reflect, among other things, the evolving nature of financial markets, as well as the professionalism of the Tribe’s regulators and their constructive relationship with state gaming regulators.

The compact reflects a continued commitment by the Tribe to revenue sharing with non-gaming and limited gaming tribes so that the economic benefits of gaming reach tribal governments that have not chosen to operate a tribal casino. The terms also provide a framework for the sharing of gaming revenue with Amador County and other local jurisdictions for infrastructure improvements and fire, law enforcement, public transit, education, tourism, and other services and provide incentives for investments in renewable energy projects, non-gaming related economic development projects, and health care facilities that provide a mutual benefit to the Tribe and the local community.

The compact continues to assure the protection of the health and safety of the casino patrons, guests, and employees and affirms the role of a tribal-state association of gaming regulators to provide a framework within which tribal and state gaming regulators can exchange information and collaborate to ensure that the gaming public has continued confidence in the integrity of casino operations.

The compact supersedes the 1999 compact between the Tribe and the State of California. A copy of the compact can be found at www.gov.ca.gov/docs/Jackson_Compact.pdf.

Rancho Cordova Brings a Fresh Take to the Kings

Rancho Cordova, CA (MPG) - Rancho Cordova Night at the Kings was held on Sunday, February 8th at Sleep Train Arena. Cordova High School, PAL, businesses, residents, and community members showed a fresh take on Rancho Cordova. There were many memorable moments: Mayor Robert McGarvey and Council Member Dan Skoglund were named honorary co-captains of the game, Cordova High School students participated in the flag anthem, PAL gave high fives to the Kings players, and so much more. for the Smiles for Kids event,” explained Raquel Juarez, who owns the practice along with her husband. “All these volunteers come out and they give free dental work to underserved communities and families. It’s really nice to actually give back and see the kids smiling and happy. And the families are very appreciative.”

Samantha Lindsay of Sacramento, who brought her daughter in for a cleaning and a checkup, was very impressed with the quality of care and attention her daughter received. “We were welcomed right away,” she said. “Her anxiety went right out the door. She didn’t hear any drilling, she didn’t hear any screaming, she didn’t hear any arguing with other children. It was calm, it was really calm.”

Ka Mauriona Parker (11) was also initially apprehensive about her dental appointment but was put to ease by volunteers’ gentle bedside manners and by Smile Kingdom Dental’s child-centric decor, which includes fantasy-themed murals and TV monitors playing cartoons on the ceiling during procedures. “I liked it, it was comfortable,” she explained. “I was nervous when we got here because they said they were going to pull out my tooth. But they didn’t. I feel better.”

Such confidence is exactly what volunteer Dr. Kasi Franck hoped to impart to her patients.

“Oftentimes the kids are in a lot of pain and parents don’t really realize it. So being able to then take care of that pain for them makes a world of difference,” she said. “Another goal of mine is to make them have a good experience, where they’re not afraid of the dentist. There are a lot of kids who come in with a lot of anxiety because they’re in pain and they’re afraid that it’s going to hurt. So we do a lot of education and prevention to help them become healthy patients who will go to the dentist when they’re older and not be afraid of the dentist.”

Opportunity to Meet Neighbors, Talk With City Leaders, and Exercise

RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG) - After a two-year hiatus, the popular Neighborhood Walks with the Mayor have been scheduled in Rancho Cordova. Robert McGarvey will lead six Saturday morning neighborhood walks, each starting at a different Rancho Cordova school.

because it’s a chance for people to walk, exercise, and talk with neighbors and City officials,” said Mayor McGarvey. “They can ask questions about City plans, voice their concerns, or just come and enjoy the camaraderie.”

Adults, seniors, teens, and parents with their children are invited to participate. “Mark your calendars and plan to join us,” urged Mayor McGarvey.

SPOTLIGHT ON BUSINESS

AWARD AND TROPHY
ENGRAVERS LOOKING TO SELL

Walking into Probert's Engraving, one is greeted by bespectacled owner Jerry Williams, an octogenarian with a ready smile and salt and pepper hair. As one scans the front showroom, plaques waiting to be selected for a lucky recipient line shelves, bronzed military statuettes stand at the ready, and a number of miscellaneous items peek around each other, each potentially the award for someone deserving. Williams has been engraving, drilling, trimming and creating trophies and awards for people for nearly 24 years. But he and his wife of 55 years, Barbara, are ready to retire.

Located near the corner of Rockingham Drive and Mather Boulevard, Probert's stays busy with customers. The shop reaches back into a hallway, and various rooms stretch out like limbs on either side. There is a smaller office where Barbara does the bookkeeping, the hallway houses a large bookshelf with completed orders, a supply room is stocked with necessary tools of the trade, and the large workroom is filled with equipment to fulfill orders.

However, the retired military man is ready to put his hands to rest on this business that has treated him well, even through the struggling times of the economy. Williams is honest about how the business has seen its ups and downs, but like so many others today, it is bouncing back. Items included in the sale will include everything in the supply room and showroom as well as all the equipment, including the computer with Photoshop and printers, two engravers for metal and plastic, two heat presses, a drill, a plastic trimmer, metal and plastic cutters, a table saw and more. Williams is also willing to have a potential buyer shadow him for a few days to see if the business is a good match for them. Once someone has purchased, Williams will train that person side by side for several days and be available for two to three days a week for up to two months after purchase for any questions or extra training. Williams stresses, "this is a turnkey operation," everything is ready to go.

If you are interested in keeping Probert's running strong, contact Jerry Williams to discuss the opportunity. Income, expenses and purchase price will be discussed with serious buyers.

Your Personal Finances in the Year of the Green Wooden Goat

A common tradition during Lunar New year is to give and receive red envelopes containing crisp new bills since it brings good luck. Want to get even luckier? Get your hands on a new two-dollar bill (even numbers are good luck). Yes, they still print these bills and they are the most common request banks get during Lunar New Year, but they go quick, so head to your bank fast! RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG)

- February 19th marks the beginning of the Lunar New Year, and 2015 is the Year of the Goat. In the Chinese culture, each year is also associated with an element, and this year's element is wood. Wood is associated with prosperity and wellbeing for all, which is traditionally signified through the color green. So 2015—the Year of the Green Wooden Goat—will be a more prosperous and peaceful year than 2014. This auspicious sign makes for a much-anticipated and optimistic Lunar New Year, especially related to health and finance. In the Year of the Green Wooden Goat, we should see the turmoil and crisis that has been gripping the world lessen. Chaotic conditions, economically and politically, should be easing up and stabilizing. Goat years are years of high hopes, dreams, and goal setting for the future.

With such favorable conditions,

Bank of America branch managers from Chinatown and Rancho Cordova came together and have provided some tips to bring in a very happy New Year.

Go Green: Since 2015 is the Year of the Green Wooden Goat, green will be a lucky color, enhancing money and wealth. Thinking about painting a room, re-decorating your house, or adding color to your wardrobe? Think green.

Set Clear Goals: Whether it is health, financial, or personal goals that you have in mind, make sure you are setting clear goals and not just a general one such as “be healthier” or “save more money.” Consider clearer goals such as running three miles at least three times a day, adding one type of fruit or vegetable to your diet, or sit down with a banker to analyze your debt and credit position.

Start Fresh: Lunar New Year represents a fresh new start, so clean and cleanse your life in order to increase balance and harmony. Clean your home or office to get rid of negativity that has accumulated during the year. Pay off or make payments to bills and debts as a symbol of positive action and aim to relieve debt. Start a savings or investment account and begin building your wealth.

Get Lucky: A common tradition during Lunar New year is to give and receive red envelopes containing crisp new bills since it brings good luck. Want to get even luckier? Get your hands on a new two-dollar bill (even numbers are good luck). Yes, they still print these bills and they are the most common request banks get during Lunar New Year, but they go quick, so head to your bank fast! While you're there, get some red envelopes too—banks give them out as a courtesy to customers.

Bob McGarvey

Before I get into the Paul Harvey “Rest of the Story” and “put my two cents in,” I want you to know that I appreciate the response from a reader who disagreed with my balancing the budget column on January 30th. I have met many people who comment about this column and their comments include both agreeing and disagreeing. It’s nice to know that what I write is thought provoking enough that they are willing to let me know what they think. So whether I meet them at church or at the store or if they write a letter to the editor, I’m glad that people know I’m always ready to learn something new.

Now for the “Rest of the Story”: as far as “put my two cents in,” it is from an English idiom in which someone expresses their opinion. Most people in the U.S. don’t mind expressing their opinions about everything—from someone else’s hat to the way the government uses our tax dollars (or, in their opinion, misuses the taxes they collect). Another money idiom we use is “a penny for your thoughts.” Today, that usually means we are simply asking someone else to share what they are thinking about someone or something.

From the Mayor’s Corner

“Put My Two Cents In”

Thinking about money as simply money and not an idiom; I was reading that President Obama’s budget outlay for the coming 2016 fiscal year is $3.99 trillion. I decided to look up what President Johnson’s budget was 50 years ago. The answer is that in the 1966 fiscal year, the budget outlay was $698 billion. I guess the dollar covered quite a bit more then because the decade of the 1960s was rather tumultuous, to say the least, but a dollar was worth more than it is today.

A few of the items in that 1966 budget were the costs of the Vietnam War; contracts with the “Military Industrial Complex” (President Eisenhower’s words); the Space Race and all the scientific advances in metals, computers, etc., and the costs because of that race; and the costs of the Cold War. We survived it all though.

On the wall of my office here at City Hall, I have placed three words: Imagine, Dream, and Believe. It was easy to imagine that we (Rancho Cordovans) were going to make our dreams come true because we believed in ourselves. Those who were alive during the 1960s remember how those three words fit so well in what we believed we could do in the Space Race for example. We read science fiction books and stories about going into space. We imagined that we could and would land on the moon. It was a dream or vision we could see so vividly that we had no problem being able to believe it. That dream of landing on the moon came true on July 20th, 1969.

Whether we are talking about putting in our “two cents worth” and expressing our opinion, talking about trillions of dollars (it’s still hard to imagine those numbers), or being able to see what we have been able to accomplish in the City of Rancho Cordova—all those things and many more demand that we use our imaginations, follow our dreams, and continue to believe in ourselves.

From Mayor Bob McGarvey, God bless, and see you next time. ★

To me romance is all about creating magical moments in your relationship that’ll take little time out of your busy schedule. Stop thinking you’re too busy for romance. Remember you chose to spend your life with your husband, so enjoy him.

Here are 6 more ideas I’ve collected from some very happy couples as well as some tried and true ideas from yours truly. (Please note: I’m on my second marriage.)

1. Crockpot sex

I use my crockpot a lot in February letting it’s savory scents waft throughout the house. The aroma goes straight to a primitive part of my husband’s brain that tells him all is well. Remember that old saying, the way to a man’s heart is through his stomach? I’ve found it’s true and the kitchen has proven to be a very romantic room to most men. (Not that they want to “do it” in that room necessarily, but they appreciate good cooking.)

2. Be selfish

This year my New Year’s Resolution was to be more selfish. Enlightened selfish. That means I’m playing, writing, singing, walking, reading and napping more. I have my “go to” clothes that make me happy (thank God for elastic waistbands sympathetic to my indulgences in the name of holiday cheer), and my loving husband who, in spite of being a workaholic is able to take time to play with me when the effort isn’t going to end up making us money.

3. Compliments are magic

Take the time to tell your husband that he looks wonderful, sexy or great when he does. We all have doubts about our looks and hearing that we are attractive to our mates is a very important part of creating a romantic relationship. You know the old saying, “If you want a compliment, give a compliment.” In a marriage we end up seeing our mates at their worst and their best. That’s why it’s also important to dress up and go out once in a while, but if you don’t plan for it you won’t do it.

4. Build a fire

There’s something very romantic about a fire especially in the winter. February in the Pacific Northwest is as cold and gray as an old lady on ice. Our home sits on a hill about 800 feet high and we often get stuck up here in February when the roads freeze over. It’s very cozy (and romantic) watching the storms rage through the Lewis River Valley from the mountains east of us. I like to pretend our house is a mountain lodge and when Terry builds a crackling fire on those especially drizzly days, that’s romantic.

5. Three little words

Before you leave each other in the morning, connect with eye-to-eye contact and tell him you love him. Never leave the house without acknowledging your husband or saying, “I love you.”

6. Music

Music changes moods like magic. Use music in your home to create romance. I love the channel that plays love songs. I often do my housework singing love songs with my favorite singers.

Taking just a little bit of time to plan and be creative with the person you’ve chosen to spend your life with will do so much for your marriage. And one more thing: let him know what turns you on. Chances are he doesn’t. I love it when Terry opens a door for me, hugs me from behind, gives me his coat when were out and I get cold, holds my hand, rubs my feet when we watch movies at home, but unless I’d told him, he’d never do those things.

Thank you for reading my column. Please share it, if you think it might help a couple that needs a little spark.

There is much to talk about in the Kiwanis community these days. We are pleased to welcome two new members to our family: Cindy Cogil and Travis Anderson. Cindy is the owner of True Color Litho, a full-service printing and promotional company; Travis is employed by the Golden State Water Company. They are two very enthusiastic and community-minded individuals and we are glad they chose to lend their talents to the Rancho Cordova Kiwanis Club, where we seek to make a positive difference in our community.

We will need this extra manpower as we prepare for our first annual community-wide benefit dance on Saturday, February 28th at Sacramento State University. The two main recipients of the profits from the dance will be the Kiwanis Family House (www.kiwanisfamilyhouse.org) and the Sacramento State Dance Council. The dance takes place from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. The cost to attend is $20 for adult singles and $35 per couple. College-aged students with school identification are asked for a $10 donation.

The dance is a great opportunity to experience a new community event that is both healthy for you and a breath of fresh air to the fund-raising scene in this area. By supporting the dance, you enable the Kiwanis Family House to continue its commitment to assisting families by providing living accommodations while their loved ones receive medical care at the UC Davis Medical Center.

In addition, you can witness first-hand the talents of our next generation of leaders as they perform at the dance benefit. Everyone who attends will have the opportunity to not only shake their booty but also to park for free! Please look for our ad in this newspaper on page 13.

If dancing isn’t your cup of tea, consider these two events on the horizon: the Service Club Olympics for eligible Rancho Cordova service clubs and our very own Kiwanis Car Show. More information is forthcoming on these two future events.

I encourage you to come on and join our club! We are upbeat and you can enjoy the camaraderie every Thursday morning at 7:00 a.m. at the IHOP on Sunrise Boulevard. Find us on Facebook or at www.kiwanisclubofrancho-cordova.com.

John Savely bought his daughter, Debbie, a Bible for her seventh birthday. Before she graduated from high school, her father had died. That Bible became a revered keepsake, but she lost it in 1974, while attending Tennessee’s Volunteer State Community College.

Yet, last year, that Bible made its way back into Debbie’s possession. A college officer from Volunteer State found the Bible in a box of debris from a 2006 tornado that almost destroyed the college’s campus. The winds that splintered buildings uncovered the lost Scriptures.

With Debbie Savely’s name inscribed within, that college officer went to work trying to find her; and by way of relentless pursuit and the marvel of the internet, John Savely’s gift was returned to his daughter forty years after it was lost. She and her nearly ninety-year-old mother were jubilant beyond measure.

What makes this story so remarkable is not that a Bible was salvaged. If the book had been a copy of “Green Eggs and Ham,” it would hardly have been any less miraculous. Besides, I doubt that Debbie needed a Bible. She, like all of us, had access to millions of Bibles to read, still the best-selling book in the world.

What made this particular copy of the Bible special was its source. It had been given to her by her father. Her attachment to it was as sentimental as it was spiritual. So it wasn’t as if she had recovered the original stone tablets of Sinai or the Dead Sea Scrolls. She had something more important: She had a link to one who truly loved her.

What if we learned to approach our own Bibles with the same heartfelt sentiment? What if we concerned ourselves less with the “miraculous” nature of how the Bible arrived in our hands, and focused more on the link the book is to One who truly loves us? What if we stopped deifying the Bible (worshipping “God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Bible” as it were), and embraced it as a pointer aiming us in a more Jesus-like direction?

How do we do this? By being Christians, not Biblicists. A Biblicist is one who reads the Bible, “flat,” that is, every word is given the same weight and significance, because “God said it, I believe it, and that settles it.” So, “He that curseth his father or mother shall surely be put to death,” is given the same credibility as, “Love thy neighbor as thyself” (A drastic but accurate example).

Yet, Christians might be better served to see the Scriptures with a bit more texture. Our faith and practice would be healthier if our interpretive lens was Jesus Christ. He, as the living Word and Source, is the peak of revelation. So, we look to him as we read, using his words to hold ourselves to his way, and, dare I say it, to hold the Bible accountable as well. Refusing to do this, schizophrenically puts the Bible and Jesus at odds with each other.

Maybe this is what Kurt Eichenwald was trying to get at in his recent Newsweek diatribe, “The Bible: So Misunderstood It’s a Sin.” He railed against biblical abuses, ignorance that impedes science, the foolishness of uniting church with state, and the suffering inflicted on this world by those who misapply the Bible. My response was, “Amen! Preach it, brother!”

He couldn’t hear my agreement, though, because his words were so thunderously angry; as were the vitriolic words of his critics. And while I believe Eichenwald was largely telling the truth, nothing will change about this state of affairs until Bible-reading, Bible-loving, Bible-believing people stop treating the Bible like it is God. It’s not, no more than that storm-torn Tennessee testament was Deb Savely’s father.

I love the Bible, but not because every passage can be reconciled with Christianity. I love it because it helps me stay connected to the Source, to Jesus. After all, he is the foundation of my faith, and even as the Good Book says, there is no other.

JUPITER ASCENDING (Rated PG-13)
A Film Review by Tim Riley

A friend of mine reported that of the eight or nine coming attractions showing recently at his local cinema all except one had something to do with fantasy adventure and science-fiction.

Admittedly, my friend tends to exaggerate but then both “Jupiter Ascending” and “Seventh Son,” originating in the otherworldly context, are released on the same day, and so he may have a valid point.

Lana and Andy Wachowski, the filmmaker siblings behind the “Matrix” trilogy and “Cloud Atlas,” have an affinity for inviting audiences into uncharted territory and fantastic new worlds, the basic stuff of science-fiction.

At times their magic touch for fantasy adventure works, particularly with the first “Matrix,” and then there is the complete bore that was “Cloud Atlas.” With their latest effort in “Jupiter Ascending,” the Wachowskis may have hit upon the middle ground.

The trouble with “Jupiter Ascending” is not that the lovely Mila Kunis is the central figure in a space odyssey which requires her character to bridge the gap between the working class of the Midwest and the royalty of the intergalactic universe.

A Russian immigrant toiling in menial jobs with her extended family, Jupiter Jones (Kunis) dreams of better things, but the cold reality is that she’s cleaning other people’s toilets and suffers an endless run of bad breaks.

Riley Reviews

CONVOLUTED SCI-FI FORMULA RISES WITHIN “JUPITER ASCENDING”

Along comes the hunky Caine Wise (Channing Tatum), who looks fully human except for his Spock-like pointy ears. He’s a bounty hunter from outer space assigned to track down Jupiter because her genetic signature marks her as next in line for a royal title in the House of Abrasax.

Granted, it’s a real leap of faith to think that the ordinary Jupiter Jones has royal blood, but that news is far more disturbing to the three primary heirs of the Abrasax dynasty following the death of the royal matriarch.

At this point, the problem for “Jupiter Ascending” is the somewhat convoluted story of the squabbling within the royal empire, where three siblings vie for total control of their dominion in a manner reminiscent of Shakespearean drama, which inevitably recalls visions of “King Lear.”

On a distant planet, it is the death of the queen that triggers a battle for succession, which is complicated by the sudden presence of Jupiter, who has the same genetic makeup of the late monarch, a fact which would elevate the Chicago maid to queen of the universe.

Palace intrigue ensues. The oldest of the royal siblings is the treacherous Balem (Eddie Redmayne), a person so tightly wound that he speaks in an oddly controlled, ominous whisper until those moments when he bursts into uncontrolled rage.

Balem is a mercenary whose only interest, as the current head of Abrasax Industries, is to savor the expansion of wealth and power by looting the Earth of all its precious resources, including the harvesting of humans.

The sister Kalique (Tuppence Middleton), an ethereal beauty, prefers to advise and befriend the newfound member of the royal family, but she is no less devious than the rest of the clan as she is reluctant to reveal her hand.

Titus (Douglas Booth), the youngest brother, gives the impression of a charming and spoiled playboy with an admittedly cavalier relationship to the truth, but his devotion to his hedonistic pursuits belies a fierce ambition every bit as calculating as Balem’s.

To be sure, Jupiter, though faithfully assisted by Caine, is a mere innocent in this pit of venomous snakes. The amusing scene is when Jupiter is put through the bureaucratic maze of validating her royal position by obtaining the necessary paperwork.

Never before has dealing with red tape looked as inept, complicated and inefficient as here. Jupiter’s shuffling back and forth to obscure government agencies is akin to the nightmare of having to deal with the DMV, IRS, Social Security Administration and Department of Homeland Security all at the same time.

Just in case you were wondering, aerial battle scenes are plentiful and exciting, with a generous helping of explosions. With Jupiter in his arms, Caine zips through the Chicago skies on his jet-propelled boots, and while this happening the aliens destroy most of the skyscraper landscape.

The action moves at the quick pace that may prove satisfying for most fans of the genre. Even the reliable Sean Bean gets into the act as tough-guy bounty hunter Stringer who’s been exiled to a ramshackle Midwestern farm in the middle of nowhere.

With the Wachowski pedigree firmly in place and the attention generated by an original work steeped in the genre elements of science-fiction, “Jupiter Ascending” may very well rise to the top, and not without good reason considering there’s just enough action excitement to keep the convoluted business interesting. ★

Another Lie: Proposed $1.8 Billion Tax on CA Drivers

Commentary
by Jon Coupal, President of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association

For the second time in as many weeks Californians got the news that Sacramento politicians are proposing yet another big tax hike. The truth is that new taxes would never be required were it not for Sacramento’s mismanagement of existing tax dollars.

Last week, it was the proposal to deal with the very real problem of “revenue volatility” in California’s tax structure with the very unreal “solution” of a $10 billion tax on services.

But the latest proposal comes from new Senate leader Toni Atkins who proposes a brand new tax on drivers to pay for highway and road repairs in California. This new “fee” would take $1.8 billion dollars out of the pockets of hard working California citizens over the next five years.

Now, most Californians would wholeheartedly agree that our roads are in terrible shape. Years of neglect have resulted in a highway system that, according to a recent state report, requires a massive infusion of $59 billion. But taxpayers have a very good question that has yet to be answered: How is it that California has the highest gas tax in the nation and yet cannot keep its roads in decent condition?

Moreover, although the exact nature of this new “fee” has yet to be determined, Senator Atkins’ comments in proposing the new revenue source can only be described as foolish and insulting. Here is what she said: “California cannot have a strong middle class or a thriving economy if our roadways are congested and people and goods cannot move efficiently.”

Really? A left-wing politician now claims that this new tax is needed to protect the middle class? She is simply blind to the truth that the progressive policies of heavy taxation and over regulation are crushing the middle class in California. As is so common now in California, statements from politicians such as Atkins reveal a profound disconnect between their pampered lives and the lives of ordinary citizens.

So, instead of slamming Californians with another tax hike, what is a better way to meet the funding needs for our crumbling highway system? Glad you asked.

First, let’s demand that gas tax revenues pay for roads, not bike lanes, environmental mitigation programs and mass transit. The latter programs are all well and good, but gas taxes should go for roads. (For purposes of full disclosure, as a cyclist I support bike lanes. But I don’t want my gas taxes paying for them).

Second, how much of our transportation dollars are wasted on burdensome labor restrictions? So-called “Project Labor Agreements” add between 25 to 35% to the cost of highway construction. Let’s get rid of PLA’s and, while we’re at it, “prevailing wage” laws which also add to the cost of construction unnecessarily.

Third, let’s direct valuable transportation dollars to those systems that actually work. This would mean abandoning the doomed-to-fail High Speed Rail Project that is sucking up tax dollars in a way that voters never approved.

Fourth, we can agree that gas tax revenue has fallen a bit short of expectations because cars are now more fuel efficient. But if that is the case, why does the state still subsidize electric vehicles? Shouldn’t we abandon those subsidies and direct those dollars to filling potholes?

Instead of reflexively demanding higher taxes, our elected officials should do what other states seem to do without controversy – prioritize spending. Now there’s a novel concept.

Jon Coupal is president of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association — California’s largest grass-roots taxpayer organization dedicated to the protection of Proposition 13 and the advancement of taxpayers’ rights.

Representatives From Rancho Cordova Attend National Leadership Forum

RCCYF Collaborative Learns New Skills to Reduce Youth Drug Use

RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG) - Representatives from Rancho Cordova Children, Youth, and Families (RCCYF) Collaborative headed to the Washington, D.C. area to join more than 2,500 substance abuse prevention specialists and advocates from throughout the country for Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America's (CADCA) 25th Annual National Leadership Forum, which was held February 2nd through the 5th at the Gaylord National Hotel.

"We are so excited to be able to spend several days with other similar organizations from across the country, learning and honing our prevention skills so our community can be a better place, one that doesn't suffer from the harms of drug and alcohol abuse," said Jamie Gomez, RCCYF Collaborative project coordinator. "We hope to come back reenergized with new strategies under our belt to tackle drug use in Rancho Cordova, California."

CADCA's Forum covered a wide range of topics, everything from how to prevent prescription drug abuse and heroin use to how to create tobacco-free environments and develop policies to reduce underage and excessive drinking.

The RCCYF Collaborative recently impacted the community by hosting the "RC is Drug Free" public service announcement contest in Rancho Cordova secondary schools to celebrate the fact that most students do not use drugs or alcohol. Other projects the RCCYF Collaborative has worked on include helping insert a prescription drug bin into the Rancho Cordova Police Department for individuals to safely dispose of expired medication and hanging up posters in local liquor store businesses to reinforce that it is illegal to sell alcohol to minors.

The RCCYF Collaborative also met with their U.S. representatives and senators during Capitol Hill Day, which took place on Wednesday, February 4th during the CADCA Forum.

Also during the CADCA Forum, the following youth members of the RCCYF Collaborative participated in CADCA's National Youth Leadership Initiative training to help them become strong community leaders: Abraham Avagyan (15), Daniel Ortiz (15), Roberto Hernandez (17), Gabriella Perez (16), Meisha Jackson (18), Arya Sharma (16), Jordan Mallory (17), and Ashvrya Sharma (15).

CADCA's National Leadership Forum is the premier and largest training event for community-based substance abuse prevention professionals, coalition leaders, and prevention and addiction researchers. The Forum is a four-day event packed with opportunities to learn the latest strategies to fight substance abuse and hear from nationally known prevention experts, federal administrators, and concerned policymakers. For details about the more than 70 training sessions and speakers, visit www.forum.cadca.org.

What is Constitutional in the State of the Union Address?

By Dr. Harold Pease

In listening to the President's State of the Union Address one might think that he actually has the power to do what he requests. On domestic issues two old requests from last year's State of the Union Address were renewed: a request for raising the minimum wage and, instead of just making the college opportunity available to all middle class Americans, he went further proposing free community college for all. Other requests included advocacy for "a free and open Internet," which, given a recent executive order means control of it, expanded child care tax credits, improved job training, expanded paid leave, and a new tax benefit for two-income families. All this to be funded by increased taxes on the rich. He threatened a veto to any legislation that altered Obamacare or undermined his recently decreed executive amnesty. He was decidedly unclear on his request for criminal justice reform, certainly a reference to the riots in Ferguson, Mo. More federal involvement always means more federal control.

He defended his positions on Cuba and Iran and threatened presidential vetoes if Congress legislated differently. Constitutional had to have cheered when he seemed to lecture, the mostly Republican Congress, on what he called, "rash decisions, reacting to the headlines instead of using our heads; when the first response to a challenge is to send in our military—then we risk getting drawn into unnecessary conflicts, and neglect the broader strategy we need for a safer, more prosperous world." He called it, "a smarter kind of American leadership" and seemed aimed at the so-called military industrial complex of which President Dwight D. Eisenhower warned. He saw rewriting the Authorization of Use of Military Force, which authorized the air campaigns in Iraq and Syria, as a priority but left few specifics on what that meant. He still refuses to use the term Radical Islamist Terrorists in describing the Islamists involved in the mass killing in Nigeria, Iraq, Syria and France even though while he spoke they were threatening to topple Yemen who has stood with us in opposition to al-Qaida.

The list went on and on as it does for every president Republican or Democrat, but what was different from last year is that he threatened the use of the veto rather than the threat of his bypassing Congress with the use of the "pen" through executive orders. The term executive order is not found in the Constitution and initially was nothing more than inter-departmental communications between the President and his executive branch with him requesting some action on their part. Constitutionally they have no law-making function.

Unfortunately most, if not all, of these things are not in Article II of the Constitution nor have they been added by way of amendment as outlined in Article V of that document, thus they are unconstitutional. It is very probable that, even with the approval of Congress, they would be outside the Constitution but that is a topic for another time. Presidents, in their thirst for power and / or proclaimed expediency, have empowered themselves to the point of "kingship" with their worshipful, unchallenging, party followers (whether Democrat or Republican) quite willing to look the other way as government grows beyond its ability to be constitutional or efficient. At any time he could remind the people of his real constitutional powers but he will not as that would drastically reduce his power that is beginning to look limitless.

We must return to the Constitutional powers of the President as identified in Article II. As we list these powers attempt to match the State of the Union requests wherein he suggests that he might have a role. Under the Constitution the president has but eleven powers. Let us identify them: 1) "Commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States" including the militia when called into actual service of the United States; 2) supervise departments (cabinet), each presumably established by the Congress (George Washington had but four); 3) grant reprieves and pardons; 4) make treaties with the help of the Senate; 5) with Senate help appoint positions established by law such as ambassadors, ministers and judges; 6) fill vacancies "during recess of the Senate;" 7) make recommendations to Congress on the state of the union; 8) convene both houses on special occasions and handle disputes with respect to convening; 9) receive ambassadors and other public ministers; 10) make certain that "laws be faithfully executed;" and, 11) "commission all the officers of the United States."

Simply stated the president has two supervisory powers over existing organizations and two shared powers with the Senate, otherwise he pardons, recommends, appoints and entertains. That is it! Notice the absence of power to make any rules and regulations on us. This is the job of Congress alone.

All measures listed in the 2015 State of the Union Address are but suggestions to Congress, which alone, as per Article I, Section I, has all law-making functions—the president has none. That said, he is within his constitutional bounds with his threat of the veto, which is likely to be used liberally.

IRS Offers Free E-Filing for Tax Returns

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG)

- The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Free File Alliance announced the launch of Free File, which makes brand-name tax software products and electronic filing available to most taxpayers in California for free.

Free File software can help taxpayers with tax preparation, including the health care law that will affect almost everyone. California taxpayers can use Free File software immediately

Free File is available only at www.IRS.gov/FreeFile, thanks to a partnership between the IRS and the Free File Alliance, a consortium of 14 leading tax software companies.

"About 70% of all federal tax returns come in below the $60,000 income level," said IRS Spokesman David Tucker II. "Millions can use it to file a federal income tax return for free."

Nationally, more than 3.2 million people used Free File last year with nearly 270,000 coming from California. Since 2003, more than 43 million people have used Free File, saving $1.3 billion based on a conservative $30 fee estimate.

"You don't have to be an expert on taxes or the new health care law. Free File software can help walk you through the rules and help you get it right," said John A. Koskinen, IRS Commissioner. "For 12 years, this partnership between the IRS and the Free File Alliance had helped taxpayers save both money and time. The real winner in this partnership has been the nation's taxpayers."

Taxpayers who earned $60,000 or less last year are eligible to choose from among 14 software products. For those who earned more, they are still eligible for Free File Fillable Forms, the electronic version of IRS paper forms. This more basic Free File option is best for people comfortable preparing their own tax return.

Free File offers easy-to-use products that ask questions and supply answers. The software will find the right forms, find the right tax credits and deductions and even do the math.

Free File also can help taxpayers with the new health care requirements. Almost everyone will need to do something new when filing a tax return this year. For each month in 2014, you and everyone on your return must either report health care coverage, claim an exemption from coverage, or make a shared responsibility payment with your tax return. Most people will simply have to check a box to report health care coverage for the entire year.

Free File will be available through October 2015. Taxpayers who cannot meet the April 15 tax deadline can also use Free File to file a six-month extension.

Here are some common tax-related documents you will need to complete your tax return: a copy of last year's tax return; valid Social Security numbers for yourself, your spouse and children; all income statements, i.e. W-2 forms from all employers; interest/dividend statements, i.e. 1099 Forms; Form 1099-G showing any state refunds; unemployment compensation amount, if any; Form 1095-A if you purchased coverage from a Health Insurance Marketplace; and proof of health care insurance coverage for you and everyone on your return. Remember, you must also have documentation of any credit or deduction you are claiming.

Lancer Boys Hoops Clinch Outright SVC Title

By Mike Bush

RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG) - All that was standing in the way of the Cordova High School boys basketball team winning the Sierra Valley Conference (SVC) title was foe Liberty Ranch. But no more!

The Lancers' early lead paced them to grounding the Hawks by an 88-76 score. The win clinches an outright conference title for Cordova (9-0, 21-5), which holds a two-game lead over Liberty Ranch (7-2).

"It's a great feeling," said Cordova head coach Fletcher Johnson on winning the SVC crown. "It was part of our goal ... [it's a] great feeling to achieve that goal."

This is also the Lancers' second consecutive league title; Cordova won the Capital Athletic League crown last year. Cordova returned to the SVC this school year under league realignment.

In the first quarter, Cordova jumped out to a 23-19 lead over the visiting Hawks. But in the second quarter, five points separated the two teams; Cordova edged Liberty Ranch 27-22. The Lancers continued to lead at halftime, 50-41.

"We shot the ball well," said

Johnson of the first quarter. "Attacked the basket. We just got after them. A high level of intensity."

Both teams' defense held the other to limited scoring in the third quarter, with the Lancers edging the Hawks by an 18-13 margin. Entering the final quarter, Cordova sat on a 68-54 lead.

"Guys were getting challenged to getting to the basket," said Johnson of the third quarter. "Both teams' defenses stepped up."

In the final eight minutes, Liberty Ranch outscored Cordova 22-20. But the damage was done by the Lancers to win the outright SVC title.

Lancer guards Jordan Roberson and JaQuan Lewis led in scoring with 37 points and 20 points, respectively. Center Christian Munoz rounded out the trio of Cordova players scoring in double figures with 10 points.

More scorers for Cordova were Damion Baldwin and Kyle Lorena with six points each, Chris Johnson with five, and EJ Turner with four. ★

Cordova Girls Hoops Lose Back-to-Back SVC Games

By Mike Bush

RANCHO CORDOVA, CA (MPG) - With one Sierra Valley Conference (SVC) game left, the Cordova High School girls basketball team finds itself on the threshold of making the Sac-Joaquin Section playoffs.

On February 5th in a conference home game, Cordova fell to El Dorado 47-34. The Lancers (5-4 in the SVC, 16-10 overall) led 22-21 at halftime, but the visiting Cougars (9-0 in the SVC) outscored Cordova 25-11 for the win.

Kelsie Graf led Cordova in scoring with 12 points. Brianna Clark followed with nine points, Erika Wilson scored five, Cauje Curney and Midori Mekata scored three each, and Nikki Jones scored two.

Cordova had 18 rebounds in the game. Jullissa Reis had six boards.

Union Mine 60, Cordova 51

In a February 3rd road game, the Lady Lancers fell behind 28-15 at halftime. Cordova outscored Union Mine 36-32 in the second half but held to single digits.

Two Cordova players scored in double digits: Clark had 18, and Curney had 15. Reis scored six points, and Adrienne Hammond scored four.

On Tuesday, February 10th, Cordova posted a 46-37 SVC road win against Liberty Ranch. As of press time, Cordova and Union Mine are tied for third place at 5-4.

On Thursday, February 12th, Cordova played at second-place Rosemont and Union Mine played at SVC-champion El Dorado. Depending on the outcomes of those SVC finales, Cordova and Union Mine could face off in a play-in game for the conference's No. 3 playoff seed next Tuesday, February 17th.

The winner will secure third place, while the loser could still reach the playoffs but as at-large playoff berth. The conference is guaranteed three playoff berths. The playoff brackets will be released early next Wednesday evening, February 18th. ★

Lancers Fend Off Cougars

By Mike Bush

PLACERVILLE, CA (MPG) - In its first seven Sierra Valley Conference (SVC) games this season, the Cordova High School boys basketball team won by 15 or more points in each game.

But at El Dorado on February 6th, the first-place Lancers were challenged by the host Cougars. And Cordova (8-0 in the SVC, 20-5 overall) rose to the challenge and earned a 66-55 victory. The win expands the Lancers' winning streak to 16 games.

Leading 28-26 at halftime, Cordova traded leads with El Dorado (4-4 in the SVC, 14-10) in the third quarter until 4:08. That's when Lancer center Christian Munoz recorded a three-point play with a slam dunk, plus the one-on-one shot at the free throw line. The play gave the Lancers a 39-38 lead.

In the fourth quarter, the Lancers' starting five—Munoz joined by Jordan Roberson, JaQuan Lewis, Damion Baldwin, and Joseph Gomez—forced El Dorado into five of its 14 turnovers. That led to Cordova building its lead in the game to 47-42 with 6:30 left in the game and 55-49 three minutes later. The Lancers finished the game with an 11-6 run en route to the win.

In the first half, El Dorado jumped out to a 16-12 lead, thanks largely to second and third chance shots resulting from offensive rebounds. Both teams exchanged leads in the second quarter with Cordova taking the halftime lead.

"Poor shot selection killed us (in the first half)," Cordova head coach Fletcher Johnson said. "They had a good scheme, and they were ready to play."

Johnson praised El Dorado head coach Conrad Dizon and his squad for their play from tip-off to the final minute of the game.

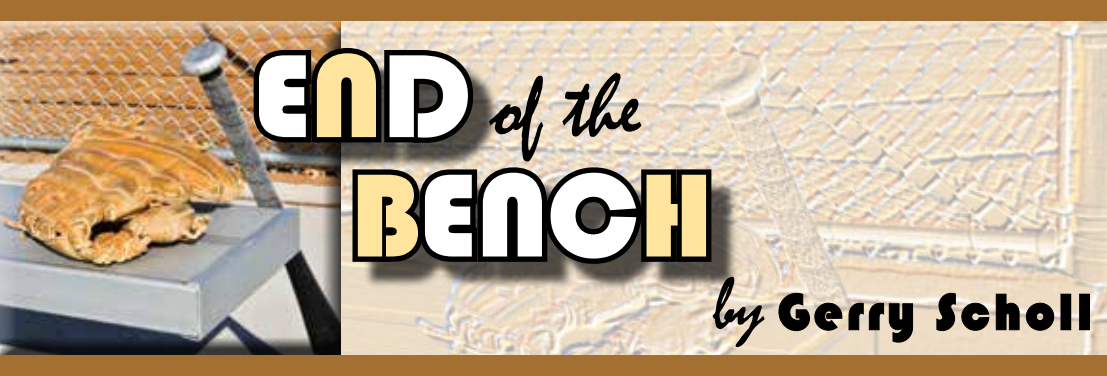

"They are a very well-coached team, very disciplined team," Johnson said. "They've got athletes and players."

Cordova 62, Union Mine 37

In an SVC home game on February 3rd, the Lancers jumped out to a 19-6 first quarter lead over the Diamondbacks, which led to a 30-12 halftime lead.

On Friday, February 13th at 7:30 p.m., Cordova will host Rosemont in the conference's finale. After Friday's game, the Lancers will prepare for the Sac-Joaquin Section playoffs.

According to John Williams, the section's assistant commissioner, the playoff brackets are scheduled to be released next Wednesday, February 18th, on its Website, www.cifsjs.org. The playoffs will start Friday, February 20th with outbracket games, and then the first round begins on Tuesday, February 24th and Wednesday, February 25th. ★

You Know, We've Come a Long Way

Fore!! As in, "Look out! Here it comes..."

Actually, make that "four," as in, "together" we have made it through a foursome of year-long seasons of viewing the sporting life perched on our vista at the End of the Bench.

We know by now that the sports world is not flat. What goes around comes around. We've played around with and through another year of sports happenings to reach this fourth annual review of where we've been.

If you have just recently joined the fray, oh boy (as Grant Napier likes to say), have you been missing out! We hope that now you are just happy to be here, and we are hoping to win you over.

For what it's worth, here at The Bench we've often expressed some connection between sports and classic rock/pop music. That likely stems from those long-lost days in the college dorm room watching sports on TV with the sound turned down and the music up loud. With somewhat limited talents for sports and zero talent for music (other than singing in the shower), we've come to lean on an appreciation for both.

If you pick up on the frequent references blended with the creative (twisted?) usage of far too many sports clichés, good for you. If you don't, it's a big-league "hang with 'em," and you'll just have to smile on your brother and keep on truckin'.

Thanks to one timely outside influence came the reminder that "you don't have to try to be like something else." The young art teacher added, "It's all about your perception of what it is." Art can be found all around us, in life, in sport; not to say that writing about the melding of the two is in any sense art, but, rather, a vehicle to voice that it is there to be appreciated.

Confusing? Yes, and possibly pointless. As the comedian reminded us, "...when you're telling these little stories, here's a good idea: have a point! It makes it so much more interesting for the listener."

Though it changes from day to day, we've come to realize that the sphere of sports is a big, small world, after all, full of little reminders and wonders:

How often does a country host the Olympic Games on "holy ground" in a city it once invaded one week, then invade another country the next? Are we chasing fool's gold in seeking solace in two weeks of international athletic endeavors? Can the Games still be a viable tool in building bridges over treacherous waters?

We cannot allow people such as Despicable Donald (Sterling), now the former owner of the Los Angeles Clippers, to keep us down. The incident involving his racist statements, attitudes and practices coming to light took us a sad step back, but, also, a hopeful step forward by reawakening our awareness and sensitivities to respond with perseverance.

Once again, the NCAA basketball tournament selections reinforced the notion that justice being served is, pretty much, a 50/50 proposition.

The use of the phrase "overcoming adversity" should forever be limited to the running of the Boston Marathon.

We shouldn't need Red Auerbach to tell us, "Don't let your guard down," or it could be "close, but no cigar." And, unless Wrong Way Marshall is nearby, if you want to win, don't drop the ball, losers.

Love is not for free; but certainly not worth Klay Thompson. Remember, the horse is the horse, of course; don't go "Least Mode." And, it's bad karma to not wear your school colors in a title game.

We wondered how low into limbo can the Oakland Raiders go? When the kid came to the door on Halloween in a Raiders costume we had to ask, "Don't you know that they don't scare anybody anymore?"

Each new season that comes along provides new additions, realizations, ironies, questions: Trying on a new uniform, an opening day parade, the crack of the bat — produces a rebirth of the spirit, a sense of pride in your number and uniform and what they represent.

As bad as they may be for you, a hot dog or two smothered in an excessive amount of condiments eaten at a ball game are good for your soul — be it a Frank Gore Dog, that will bore a hole right through your stomach lining; a Stephen Curry Combo, that is a basket of skinny dogs that come in threes; or a Barry Bonds Dog, an abnormally oversized dog that squirts juices out all over you when you take a bite.

We watch stars be born and grow, while others crash and burn in the Ever-Expanding Sports Universe — a universe perpetually in flux, as in the departure of a "variable star," Pablo Sandoval to Boston shortly after another Ruthian postseason performance during the Giants' third World Series run. Giants fans must find some inventive uses for those old, sweaty Panda hats, while dealing with the "jilted-lover syndrome."

The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse — Conquest, War, Famine, Death — rode in and dominated the local pro football scene.

Commissioner Coverup announced the addition of a new expansion franchise to the National (Embarrassment) Football League — the Fire-Breathing Chickens, featuring quarterback Dick the Dog Killer, the Galloping Gangstas, Phil the Philanderer, Max the Axe-Murderer, Billy Bob Brassknuckles, Igotta Gunn and Whutami Infor, among others, with Coach Denial at the helm.

We should've known that the oh so sad saga of the so-so sod at new Levi's Stadium was a bad omen of things to come for the Forty Niners. We didn't need the now-departed coach Jim Harbaugh to tell us, "We're working through something." But we hope he was right when he said, "It's sometimes darkest before the dawn."

An equally ominous memo went out the Sacramento Kings players and fans from general manager Pete D'Alessandro after coach Michael Malone was fired that read, "It wasn't about wins and losses."

A new sign is going up in the Oakland Athletics' locker room... "Land is the only thing that lasts."

Many things came in threes this past year: Yes! Yes! Yes! The Giants win! No, no, no, The Panda's gone. It's The Team, The Team, The Team, except for The Money, The Money, The Money.

One of the most-divine treasures in all of sports is the Do-Over — very uplifting. But the DVR is the Ninth Wonder of the World — if only we could replay our own lives (those that say, "I'd do it all exactly the same way," are undoubtedly lying).

There was much more, but we've gone on too long. So, let's just say, that when it comes to sports, simply enjoy the play, because, after all, tomorrow is another day.

Remember what the Rhode Island Little League coach said, "The lessons you guys have learned along the journey, you're never going to forget. We're going to be friends forever." ★

INSIDECOLLEGE BASKETBALL

A WEEKLY SPIN AROUND THE WORLD OF COLLEGE HOOPS

THE 10 MOST IMPORTANT THINGS IN COLLEGE BASKETBALL

1. KENTUCKY KEEPS FINDING WAYS TO WIN

Winning conference road games is tough, and we’re sure Kentucky’s not going to get enough credit for answering the call each game in an otherwise mediocre SEC. The Wildcats’ 68–61 win at Florida is a perfect example of why Kentucky remains undefeated. Andrew Harrison was a non-factor (no field goals, three turnovers), and the Wildcats shot 3-of-14 from 3-point range. Still, Kentucky won because it was 21-of-22 from the free throw line while Florida went 7-of-14. Karl-Anthony Towns played his best game of the season with 19 points and eight rebounds, and Aaron Harrison rebounded from a one-point game against Georgia to score 23 against the Gators. We’ve known this for a while, but taking out Kentucky is going to take an outstanding effort from a darn good team.

2. DUKE LOOKS SCARY GOOD

Time to stop worrying about what’s wrong with Duke and try to figure out how anyone is going to slow down the Blue Devils. On Jan. 28, Notre Dame beat Duke 77–73 in South Bend for the Blue Devils’ third loss of the season. Duke hasn’t been defeated since. The rematch against the top-10 Irish was a thorough 90–60 beatdown. Notre Dame took a 6–0 lead, and from there, Duke went on a 43–7 run during the first half. This came with Jahlil Okafor playing only eight minutes in the first half due to foul trouble. Meanwhile, Justise Winslow continued his hot streak, flourishing in transition for 19 points. Guard Matt Jones obliterated his career high with 17 points (3-of-5 from 3) off the bench. And when Okafor was in the game he simply went 9-of-11 from the field for 20 points with 10 rebounds in 23 minutes. Quite the statement for Duke.

3. CAVS NEEDS TO ADJUST WITHOUT JUSTIN ANDERSON

On the court Saturday, Virginia played yet another stifling game against a quality opponent. The Cavaliers defeated Louisville 52–47, holding the Cardinals to 13 points in the first half and 0.85 points per possession overall. The rub, though, is pending hand surgery for Justin Anderson, arguably the team’s most important player. The injury may sideline him for 4-6 weeks — through the first week of March or into the first weekend of the NCAA Tournament. The Cavs face only three KenPom top 100 teams (North Carolina, Pittsburgh, Syracuse) before the finale against Louisville, but Anderson’s absence will be a key speed bump for a team that’s had trouble closing out games in recent weeks.

4. OKLAHOMA STATE MAKES A MAJOR STATEMENT

Oklahoma State is quietly picking up quality wins in the toughest league in the nation. On Saturday, the Cowboys defeated Kansas 67–62, giving the Pokes a key win for their NCAA Tournament résumé. O-State is now 6–5 in the Big 12 after winning three of its last four games. Kansas did not have a great game, turning the ball over 18 times, but the key for Oklahoma State has been the emergence of secondary scorers. For most of the season, the Pokes could count on only Le’Bryan Nash and Phil Forte to produce. That’s changed. Four Cowboys scored in double figures against KU. Point guard Anthony Hickey is averaging 12 points over the last four games.

5. ANOTHER RED FLAG FOR ARIZONA?

On first glance, Arizona’s 81–78 loss to Arizona State shouldn’t be a major warning sign. The season is long, and this was a road game against a capable rival. The Sun Devils got hot from 3 (7-of-15) and were able to pull off the upset. But this is also the third loss of the season for Arizona against a team that won’t be in the NCAA Tournament. The other two were to UNLV and Oregon State, both on the road. Arizona may still be a title contender, but these losses may cost the Wildcats a No. 1 seed.

6. VILLANOVA EXACTS REVENGE

Okay, Villanova, we’re believers again. On Saturday, the Wildcats made a statement in their rematch against Georgetown — a team that beat the Cats by 20 points in January — defeating the Hoyas 69–53 on the strength of an elite defensive effort. Georgetown averaged 1.18 points per possession and shot 51.1 percent from the field in the first meeting. In the second game, Villanova held Georgetown to 0.79 points per possession and 30 percent shooting from the field, including 1-of-17 from 3-point range.

7. TIME TO START BUYING BAYLOR

There are plenty of Baylor — and Scott Drew — skeptics out there. Some of that is earned, for sure. Dare we say this is a year to start buying the Bears? Baylor demolished West Virginia 87–69 on the road for its fourth win in the last five Big 12 games. Victories in bunches don’t come often in this league, so Baylor’s hot streak must be noted. Baylor went on a 21–0 run in the first half and took advantage of West Virginia’s struggles in the halfcourt. Against the Baylor zone, West Virginia shot 6-of-23 from 3-point range. Meanwhile, Rico Gathers was a beast as always on the glass with 16 rebounds to go along with his 17 points.

8. TIME TO START SELLING WEST VIRGINIA?

The other side of Baylor’s rout in Morgantown: Maybe West Virginia is a team to start looking at a little more critically. The Mountaineers’ elite pressure defense helped turn around the team this season, but West Virginia doesn’t do much of anything else very well. Now, the Mountaineers’ other deficiencies are starting to catch up to them. Their last three Big 12 losses — to Texas, Oklahoma and Baylor — have been routs. West Virginia has only two top-50 RPI wins, and one of those is over Wofford.

9. SHORTHANDED ILLINOIS IS MAKING A MOVE

On Jan. 24, Illinois was 13–8 overall and 3–5 in the Big Ten, thanks in part to an injury to guard Rayvonte Rice, the team’s leading scorer. Rice and fellow guard Aaron Cosby are still sidelined, each serving a suspension. That hasn’t been a problem for Illinois, which won its third consecutive game with a 59–54 road win over Michigan State on Saturday afternoon. Malcolm Hill, who scored 19 points against the Spartans, has become Illinois’ best player as the Illini have quietly become an NCAA bubble team. Even before the win over Michigan State, Illinois had a 2–3 record against top-20 RPI teams, with wins over Baylor and Maryland.

10. A TURNAROUND AT TEMPLE

The consistently underrated Fran Dunphy has led a remarkable turnaround in Philadelphia, leading the Owls to a 17–7 record and an 8–3 mark in the American Athletic Conference. The Owls, who went 9–22 (4–14 AAC) a year ago, are back in the discussion for an NCAA Tournament bid after posting a 61–60 comeback win at Memphis. The final shot, a Josh Brown jumper off a bounce pass from Will Cummings, deserves attention, especially since Dunphy elected not to take a timeout. But the real story is that Temple is back to defending at a high level after a three-year slump. According to KenPom, the Owls rank eighth in the nation in defensive efficiency and 13th in defensive effective field goal rate — both the best numbers for Temple since the 2009-10 season.
