Rally to Support CHPD

By Elise Spleiss

CITRUS HEIGHTS, CA (MPG) - A flag rally to show support for the officers and staff of the Citrus Heights Police Department will be held on Saturday, July 17, at 10:00 a.m. at the Citrus Heights Police Department at 6315 Fountain Square.

All are invited to participate in this grassroots event to show support for the officers and staff who work every day to protect the residents of Citrus Heights. These words say it all:

“When you come to work after

Police Memorial Week and find (your building) covered with blue ribbons and balloons, and this sign greeting you at the back gate...reminds you it is worth it. He does bless us every day. With our safety and these citizens. Thank you, Citrus Heights.”

These words from CHPD Sgt. Shaefer in May echo the appreciation felt by the department for the work a handful of volunteers have been doing to bolster the spirits of their officers.

For almost a year Jacqueline Shields of Citrus Heights has been quietly showing up at the Citrus Heights Police Department with a few friends and leaving behind blue ribbons, balloons and signs with words of encouragement every few months. They maintain and keep a fresh, clean look to the signs and decorations they leave.

With all that had been going on with the riots in other states and the large “defund the police” movement, Shields and her friends want to make a difference.

County Updates Climate Action Plan

By Ken Casparis,
Sac County Media

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - Sacramento County Planning and Environmental Review (PER) staff are hard at work on the final draft of the Communitywide Climate Action Plan (CAP), which aims to significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions and prepare the County for climate-related impacts for decades to come.

PER staff expects the final draft CAP will be available for public review sometime in mid summer. You can be among the first to see it by signing up for email or text alerts.

Climate change is expected to affect the region in a variety of ways: hotter temperatures and more extreme heat events; increased wildfire risks; unpredictable rainfall and flooding; reduced snowpack and impacts to the water supply, among others.

The CAP will serve as a policy and technical document that will be used to update other plans and codes – such as the Sacramento County General Plan and County Building Codes – to help the County reach greenhouse gas reduction targets.

“The Climate Action Plan is an extremely important project so we are really taking our time and listening to our residents and the experts to make sure that we get it right,” said Todd Smith, Principal Planner. “Our goal is to have an implementable communitywide plan that reduces Sacramento County’s contributions to climate change while addressing its impacts.”

Following public review, PER staff hopes to get the CAP before the Board of Supervisors for approval in late fall 2021.

Presentations from past public workshops and Board of Supervisors meetings that give examples of some of the concepts under consideration are available on the Planning and Environmental Review website.

For questions about the CAP, email ClimateActionPlan@sac-county.net.

N-95 Masks Available at Citrus Heights Chamber of Commerce

Citrus Heights
Chamber of Commerce

CITRUS HEIGHTS, CA (MPG) - On June 17, Cal Chamber contacted all local Chambers of Commerce to help distribute N95 respirator/masks for businesses expected to comply with a new Cal/OSHA COVID-19 Emergency Regulation N95 mask requirement.

Governor Newsom announced that the State would be providing the N95 masks to ease the economic and logistic burden with masks that the State already had prior to the reopening. CalOES asked the Small Business Network, local Chamber of Commerce, as well as some local government partners to help host this program.

SMUD Wasting No Time in Building a Sustainable, Carbon-Free Future

By Brandon Rose, SMUD Ward 1 Director

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - Following several months of holding community meetings and workshops and soliciting public input, the SMUD Board of Directors approved a Zero Carbon Plan that commits Sacramento’s community-owned electric utility to removing carbon emissions from SMUD’s power supply by 2030.

It’s the most ambitious clean-energy plan of any large electric utility in the United States. There are many reasons why we set such an ambitious schedule.

Sacramento’s poor air quality and the growing effects of climate change through drought and wildfires prompted us to act as quickly as we can. In the American Lung Association’s “2020 State of the Air” report, Sacramento was ranked the sixth-most polluted city in the country based on days of unhealthy levels of air pollution. The public health implications are real - the Sacramento region’s childhood asthma rates are more than 20 percent higher than the national average.

That’s unacceptable. SMUD’s Zero Carbon Plan provides a road map that outlines how we’ll decarbonize our power supply. It focuses both on proven and new clean technologies, new business models and partnerships, the remodeling and retirement of our natural gas plants, and regulatory and financial strategies. While SMUD is one of the greenest utilities in the country, we currently rely on natural gas for a significant amount of our power generation. We plan to close two of our gas plants by 2025 and re-tool the others.

At the same time, we’re committed to maintaining low rates and reliable, around-the-clock service. SMUD’s rates are about 35 percent lower than PG&E’s, saving Sacramento County ratepayers $800 million a year. The cost of renewable energy and storage technologies have dropped by about 90 percent, which, when combined with productivity improvements, will keep any rate increases at or below the rate of inflation. As much as they support our clean-energy efforts, our customers tell us that affordable rates and reliable electricity are their top two priorities. We will not sacrifice either of those.

The electrification of buildings and vehicles is a key part of the Zero Carbon Plan. As SMUD’s power mix incorporates more renewable sources such as solar and wind, powering our homes, offices and cars by electricity will reduce greenhouse gas emissions significantly since buildings and vehicles are the two largest carbon emitters in California. We will have the infrastructure in place to support the clean transition.

One of the biggest strengths of the Zero Carbon Plan is its flexibility. We’re not taking such a large step in any one direction that we can’t pivot quickly if we need to, based on new technologies, market conditions or customer preferences. We know where we are going, in other words, but our path is flexible, and this plan gives us the adaptability to choose the best route.

We realize we can’t accomplish this by going it alone. We need the support of a wide range of players, including our residential and business customers, elected officials, local business groups, community leaders, technology companies, car manufacturers, start-ups, solar companies, and more. We’re committed to full transparency and to making sure that all of our customers, including those living in historically under resourced communities, reap the full benefits of our effort.

I encourage you to visit CleanPowerCity.org to learn more about the Zero Carbon Plan and how you participate and stay informed.

Together, we can lead the way to a cleaner, healthier, more sustainable future. ★ aren’t helping them, Shields said the officers know many people support them but that many are afraid to come out to help because of the violence that has been going on in other cities following incidents with their police.

Fortunately, this is about to change. Recently John Freer with Law Enforcement Officers (LEO), offered to help

Shields with her vision. LEO, established in 2019, is a non-political organization which holds flag rallies for fallen officers and supports other law enforcement entities.

Shields and Freer will be working together to organize flag rallies to help grow support for the police. Members of the Citrus Heights community and supporting organizations are invited to gather at the Citrus Heights Police Department on July 17, at 10 a.m.

Hopefully, the presence of members of LEO will encourage more of those in Citrus Heights who do support their police to show that support more openly.

SJUSD Faces Lawsuit and Push for Board Expansion

Story by Shaunna Boyd

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - The San Juan Unified School District (SJUSD) Board of Education held a special meeting on July 1, to resume the transition from at-large elections to trustee-area elections. They heard public input and discussed their preferred criteria for the creation of a trustee-area map, which will be used in the November 2022 election.

The process began in February 2020, when the SJUSD received a demand letter from attorney Scott Rafferty alleging that the current at-large election system could violate the California Voting Rights Act (CVRA) by impairing the ability of minority voters to influence the outcome of board elections. The CVRA has a “safe harbor” provision, which gives the agency 45 days to voluntarily decide to transition the election system; a lawsuit cannot be filed during that time. Safe harbor allows another 90 days after the resolution for potential maps to be drafted and to conduct the necessary public hearings.

On March 10, 2020, the SJUSD board adopted a resolution stating their intention to transition to trustee-area elections. They held the first required public hearing on March 31, 2020, through teleconference in accordance with the stay-at-home order in effect at that time. An executive order from the governor in April 2020 allowed agencies to pause the transition timeline in an effort to ensure public safety during the pandemic. The board chose to pause the transition until public meetings could be held in person, citing low engagement at the March 31 meeting.

Folsom Cordova Unified School District (FCUSD) also received a demand letter from Mr. Rafferty in February 2020. Despite the executive order allowing a paused timeline, FCUSD instead voted to continue their process by holding the public hearings through teleconferences. FCUSD approved a trustee-area map last summer that was used in the November 2020 election.

As a result of the SJUSD board’s decision not to move forward with the transition ahead of the 2020 election, Rafferty filed a lawsuit in Sacramento County Superior Court in October 2020. The lawsuit alleges that the SJUSD never intended to comply within the safe harbor timeframe because even while holding the first hearing through teleconference they were also submitting a letter to the governor requesting the timeline be paused on the assertion that compliance wasn’t possible due to COVID restrictions. The lawsuit stipulates that the executive order did not prohibit teleconferenced public hearings and that SJUSD should have moved forward as planned. Among other allegations, the lawsuit states that the board wanted to wait until after the 2020 election in order to protect the incumbents who were up for reelection.

The transition timeline restarted when the governor’s order expired on June 30, 2021. The demographer explained that draft maps will be drawn using 2010 census data, and then later adjusted when the 2020 data is released. When drafting the trustee-areas maps, certain criteria must be met. Areas must be compact, contiguous, and nearly equal in population. The boundaries cannot be gerrymandered to dilute minority votes. Boundaries should also respect geographical features, neighborhoods, and communities of interest (those who share economic and political interests).

At the July 1, 2021, public hearing, many community members spoke in support of expanding the board from five trustees to seven as part of the transition process. They argued that in a school district as large as SJUSD, lower income areas – such as Arden Arcade and Citrus Heights – are underserved, resulting in low rates of student achievement. Proponents of a seven-trustee board stated that having local representation would allow those areas most in need to have a stronger voice in board decisions.

Others spoke in favor of maintaining the five-trustee board, asserting that too many cooks in the kitchen can make it more difficult for the board to make decisions. They worry that with seven trustees, each might put the interests of their own area ahead of what is best for the district as a whole.

Some even stated they believe the expansion effort is driven by individuals who have run failed campaigns for seats on the board, viewing it as a way for disgruntled would-be politicians to further their own political agendas. Such comments could be a reference to Magali Kincaid, a vocal supporter of expanding the board, who unsuccessfully ran for a seat in 2018. She is also one of the plaintiffs in the CVRA lawsuit filed by Mr. Rafferty against SJUSD. “We need seven trustee areas,” said Kincaid at the July 1 meeting. “It’s time to put aside your personal interests...and bring greater accountability and empowerment into the hands of the community.”

Proponents of board expansion believe that it will create more fair and equitable governance. If each trustee serves a smaller area, they say it will improve focus on the concerns of that area—giving greater representation to those in underserved neighborhoods. Many residents from Citrus Heights support the expansion, pointing out that the city makes up approximately 25% of the district population but hasn’t had a representative on the board in almost 20 years. The Citrus Heights City Council also recently passed a resolution supporting the expansion of the board to seven seats.

Attorney Scott Rafferty spoke at the meeting as well, stating that if the board agreed during the meeting to move forward with seven seats, “we’ll settle the lawsuit; it’ll be over.”

Board members thanked everyone for their input and assured the audience that draft maps for both five and seven trustee areas would be created for consideration. Through board consensus, they advised that each trustee area should have at least one high school within its boundaries. They also removed residency of current incumbents as a consideration, stating that should not be a factor.

Draft maps will be presented at a special meeting on July 13, for review by the board and more public input on the trustee-area boundaries. ★

Pastor Ray's Encouraging Words

What You Can Count on In A Crisis

you live for him and make the kingdom of God your primary concern.” That’s a promise that you can count on.

“I’m feeling depressed, does he care? Does God care about what I’m going through?” 1 Peter 5:7 says, “Give all your worries and cares to God for he cares about what happens to you.” That is a promise of God that you can count on. I don’t know if you can count on the economy. I don’t know about your job security. I don’t know when your stocks and your retirement account are bouncing back. But I can tell you that you can count on God’s promises. He has a track record of thousands of years in fulfilling His promises.

Every day you put your trust in something, in someone. Why not trust in somebody who’s not going to let you down? Somebody who will never disappoint you. You can depend on Jesus to never let you down, to always keep his word. Jesus offers you promises you can depend on. 2 Corinthians 1 says “For no matter how many promises God has made, they are all Yes in Christ.”

In a practical sense, how do you depend on God’s promises? You depend on the promises by focusing on them. What if you took these promises (and others) and you put them on a little 3x5 card and you kept that in your pocket or your purse, the dashboard of your car, next to the toilet paper rack – wherever. And you focused on those promises instead of your circumstances or situation. You focus on the promise instead of the problem(s). Do you think that would help? I think so! In fact, I know so. Focus on God’s promises today. Claim them as His personal promise to YOU, because they are. And share them with a friend. Send this article to a friend, co-worker or family member that you think could use encouragement today.

Dave Ramsey Says

it’s not something you’d do. Let her know, too, that she’s never to ask for anything like this again.

If she needs $2,000, she should be talking to her husband about the idea. They should be living with combined finances anyway. So, it sounds like they’ve got issues to straighten out between themselves.

It’s time folks started laying their cards on the table and stopped sneaking around. That’s no way for a husband and wife to live, and your mom has no business trying to drag you into all of it behind everyone’s back!

– Dave

They’ll Play on your Emotions

Dear Dave,

I’m on Baby Step 2. I’ve paid off almost all my debt, and I’m living on a monthly budget. Recently, I got a call from a debt collection company about an old medical bill. They threatened to garnish my wages, and from the way they talked I’m afraid they may actually do it. How should I handle this situation?

First of all, they won’t garnish your wages. They can’t. For that to happen, they would have to go through all the formal, legal steps of suing you, and then they’d have to win the case. Debt collectors like to play with people’s emotions because, many times, folks will give in and do whatever they want—whether they can afford it or not.

The worst thing you can do in these situations is react with panic or fear. Talk to them calmly and rationally, and explain your financial situation. You may be able to reach a compromise that works for both of you. If they get nasty, or continue to lie to you, let them know you’ll file a complaint with the FTC (Federal Trade Commission). Pushy debt collectors have a habit of getting polite and reasonable in a hurry when faced with the possibility of the federal government stepping in.

Do everything you reasonably can to pay your debts, Gwen. You owe the money, and that means you have a legal and moral obligation to pay them. But you don’t have to put up with a collector’s lies and harassment!

Data Undercut Newsom's 'Roaring Back' Claim

By Dan Walters
CALMatters

Virtually any utterance from Gavin Newsom’s mouth these days, as well as those from his press office and other outposts of his administration, contains the phrase “roaring back.”

When, for example, the Legislature passed a state budget to meet the June 15 constitutional deadline, Newsom issued a statement declaring that “California’s economy is coming roaring back.”

Not surprisingly, it’s also the key slogan in his resistance to a campaign to recall him, something voters will decide later this year.

“Gov. Gavin Newsom has California roaring back,” the announcer in one of his campaign spots declares. “Newsom is delivering money to your pocket. Plus an extra $500 bucks for families with kids – $4 billion straight to small businesses through the nation’s largest grant program – cleaning up our streets and getting 65,000 homeless Californians into housing – and free pre-K for every California child, regardless of income.”

To some, it might appear somewhat unseemly that Newsom so obviously merges his official actions – and taxpayers’ money – with his political campaign, but the once-discernible line between politics and policy vanished long ago.

That said, do the facts support Newsom’s repetitive “roaring back” claim?

To be sure, some Californians have prospered in the 15 months since Newsom declared a public health emergency due to COVID-19 and imposed restrictions on personal and economic activities.

Those who could continue to work at home maintained their incomes and those on the top rungs of the economic ladder were enriched as the values of their investments such as stocks expanded, thanks largely to the Federal Reserve’s cheap money policies.

Newsom has a multi-billion-dollar revenue surplus mostly due to taxes on the affluent, money he’s now spending on the wide array of new benefits he’s touting in his campaign ads.

However, broader economic data offer scant support for the “roaring back” mantra the governor is chanting these days. It’s more like creeping back – slowly.

The state’s monthly report on employment, issued on June 18, frames the glacial pace of improvement. The state lost nearly 3 million jobs after Newsom ordered widespread business closures in March 2020, and since then we’ve recovered roughly half of them. Our 7.9% unemployment rate is still twice what it was before the shutdown and is the third highest of any state, slightly under Hawaii and New Mexico.

In addition to the official unemployment rate, the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics makes other calculations, including an important one on underemployment, called U-6, which includes not only workers without jobs but those who are only marginally attached to the labor force and those working part-time.

California’s U-6 rate through the first quarter, 18.4%, was four percentage points above the national figure and the third highest of any state, behind Hawaii and Nevada. Even more disturbingly, the U-6 rate in Los Angeles County, 24.1%, is higher than that of any state.

The federal Bureau of Economic Analysis reported this month that during the first quarter of this year, California’s economic output increased by 6.3%, slightly lower than the national rate and in the lowest third of the states.

The federal bureau also reported that California’s personal income grew by 42.8% during the first quarter, which sounds impressive until one looks at the nation as a whole and learns that California’s growth was the second lowest of any state. The bureau notes that nationwide, “transfer payments” – mostly federal aid programs rather than earned income – accounted for virtually all of personal income growth.

California’s economy is recovering, to be sure. But “roaring back?” Hardly.

Trump’s Huge 2023 Decision

Sometime in 2023, Donald Trump will presumably make the most momentous decision by a single person affecting the fate of the Republican Party in decades.

He will decide whether to run for president again, and that will determine who’s the frontrunner (Trump, if he’s a race) and the contours of the race.

If Trump runs, he will, one assumes, blot out the sun. Everything will be about him – his record, his pronouncements, his animosities. Much of the conservative mass media will get on board, while the mainstream media – inadvertently aiding him, yet again – will be even more intensely hostile.

The choice between this and a more “normal” nomination battle is Trump’s alone.

Perhaps not since Dwight Eisenhower turned aside Harry Truman’s entreaties to run for president as a Democrat and threw his hat in the ring as a Republican has someone had such “yea or nay” influence over the nation’s politics.

Trump’s continued sway has been a boon to his most hardcore cadre, but it is a problem for Trumpism, at least if that term is to mean anything more than personal loyalty to him. In particular, his staying power risks overshadowing and distorting the development of the populist wing of the party, which should be about more than “Stop the Steal” and adherence to one man, even if that man has defied political gravity.

Trump lost last November and contributed more than his share to the Georgia Senate losses that have added trillions of dollars to what Joe Biden can plausibly spend.

He no longer has any formal power, whereas six months ago he could move aircraft carrier groups.

He’s off social media and is not nearly as omnipresent on traditional media as when he was holding impromptu press conferences on his way to Marine One.

And yet, his grip on the party has barely loosened, if at all.

Why?

Most important, he avoided the stigma of a loser by falsely claiming he really won.

He connected with his voters at a cultural level deeper than any of his policies, creating an enduring bond.

His voters still think he’s the only one who truly gets the threat from the left, and the only one willing to fight with the requisite ferocity.

Finally, they think Trump is being persecuted by social media companies and worry they could be next.

The lesson of the defenestration of Liz Cheney is that you can’t run headlong into these sentiments and expect to survive in leadership.

Mitch McConnell, who has made his disdain for Trump clear, has taken the more prudent course of declining to elaborate on his well-known views, and isn’t going anywhere.

But there’s no doubt that what it means to be a populist in the Trump mode is overly determined by Trump himself.

Until recently, Elise Stefanik was a moderate Republican from New York state. She became the alternative to Cheney for the party’s populists by toeing the line on Stop the Steal, an issue that isn’t liberal, conservative or populist, but pure Trump.

The Trump effect is stark in Ohio Republican politics. One would think Rep. Anthony Gonzalez, a featured speaker last year at an event of the populist policy shop American Compass, would have more populist credibility than Senate primary candidate Josh Mandel, a run-of-the-mill establishment Republican. Yet Gonzalez voted to impeach Trump, so Mandel is earning populist points by calling him a “traitor.”

On the other hand, another likely Senate candidate, J.D. Vance, who represents a sincere, thought-through populism, will have to answer for his lack of enthusiasm for Trump in 2016.

If Trump does decide to run, even if he’s less dominant than advertised, he’ll squeeze out potential candidates like Missouri Sen. Josh Hawley, who are most determined to run as his direct successors.

They, like most everyone else in the party, will have to hold their breath until Trump comes down one way or the other in 2023.

The Components of Happiness

What constitutes happiness is a very individual matter. However, there are several identifiable components that contribute to an overall feeling of happiness. In essence, happiness can be thought of as satisfaction with one’s life. Your degree of stress, frustration, and anger will fall as your happiness increases.

Read through the following and consider the role they play in your happiness. Think of ways to maximize the positive effect of each factor.

Self

Your degree of satisfaction with yourself is the foundation of your happiness. It's not uncommon for a person to be lacking in this area and not even realize it. When this component is deficient, you won't be able to improve your feeling by compensating in other areas.

When you are happy with yourself, other aspects will respond much more readily to your efforts. When you are right, your world feels good. When you are off, your life can feel as if you are attempting to build a structure on quicksand.

Family

Next to yourself, your family has the strongest influence. They are the people you may be closest to. Some of your strongest emotions, good or bad, can be tied to family. Feelings about family tend to be intense. There are far too many instances of bitter feuds lasting for years. But when relationships are good, they are a source of immense joy. To be able to count on family is certainly invaluable.

Friends

Next to a supportive family, true friends are a genuine source of happiness. A true friend is one who likes you for who you are and is available in good times and bad. Realization that a friend isn't the person you thought, is one of life's greatest disappointments. If this happens, don't feel deficient, the problem is not you.

Career

More time is spent on your job than any other single activity. So it's no surprise that any dissatisfaction in this area spills over into your personal life. Conversely, a rewarding job enhances your overall happiness. If you spend an inordinate amount of time and effort career building, you risk undermining the other components.

Physical

Your physical condition influences your mood. It's difficult to be happy if your body doesn't feel right. Taking proper care of yourself enhances your overall health, reduces your susceptibility to illness, and boosts your overall quality of life. You don't have to go overboard. Consistently paying attention to diet and exercise will make a world of difference.

Recreation

Engaging in activities just for fun and entertainment is extremely beneficial. It's necessary to have fun often. Recreation is your opportunity to restore your energy level. Just like a battery, you will run out of power without recharging. This facet is much more significant than many people realize.

Community

Being part of a community is a tremendous source of joy and satisfaction. There are many groups you can participate in: town, religious, school, charitable, clubs, etc. Community involvement is an excellent method of giving. When you help others, your level of happiness rises.

Finances

Feeling financially secure certainly contributes to happiness. The amount of money required to feel secure can't be defined. Ironically, many who feel insecure have greater assets than those who are very comfortable and happy. Financial security is more of an attitude than a bank balance. You can always find examples of people that are more content with less than you have.

Happiness is not a destination; it's a way of life. Although living a happy life requires effort and energy, it is a lot less effort and energy than you will expend being miserable.

By Russell Gloor, AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: My husband and I were only married 5 years before he passed away from cancer. I am 61 and was told by SS that I don't qualify to receive his survivor benefits because we weren't married long enough, and because I made more money than him when he was alive. I still work fulltime and plan to continue until my full retirement age. Am I able to collect any of his benefits? Why can his daughter collect his benefits, but I cannot? Signed: Frustrated Widow

Dear Frustrated: You were given partially incorrect information by Social Security because you were married long enough to collect a survivor benefit, but there are also other rules which might affect your eligibility:

- You cannot have remarried before age 60 and be currently married.
- You cannot collect full survivor benefits if you exceed Social Security's annual “earnings limit.” That you made more money than your husband (and are presumably entitled to a higher personal SS benefit) isn't material, but your earnings from work could be.

If you didn't remarry before age 60 and remain married, and if you don't earn too much money, you are eligible to collect a survivor benefit as your husband's widow. You can even claim your survivor benefit (only) while allowing your personal SS benefit to grow (if desired, up to age 70 when it reaches maximum). So, you may be eligible to collect a survivor benefit from your husband now, but if you're working full time, you may make too much money to be able to collect it at this time.

Social Security has an “earnings test” which applies to those collecting early benefits and which limits how much you can earn before they take benefits away. For 2021, the annual earnings limit is $18,960 and if you earn more than that they will take away benefits equal to $1 for every $2 you are over the limit. That could mean you'll owe them more than you're entitled to in benefits, which would mean no benefits would be paid. Here's an example: Say you make $60,000 per year working full time. If you collect the survivor benefit and because you haven't yet reached your full retirement age (FRA), you'll be subject to the earnings limit of $18,960. At this earnings level you would exceed the limit by about $41,000. Half of that amount would be about $20,500, and SS would require you to repay them that amount from your SS benefits. Depending upon your survivor benefit amount, that could disqualify you from receiving monthly benefits.

As you can see from this example, if you work full time but do not significantly exceed the annual earnings limit, you may be able to collect at least some of your survivor benefits, but I cannot answer that without knowing your annual earnings and approximately what your survivor benefit would be. For clarity, the earnings test no longer applies once you reach your full retirement age.

Regarding your husband's daughter collecting a survivor benefit from him: a surviving minor child of the deceased can collect a survivor benefit until they are 18 (or 19 if still in high school). An adult disabled child who was disabled before age 22, is also eligible to collect a survivor benefit from a deceased parent.

So, let's recap: you were married to your husband long enough to be eligible for a survivor benefit, but you may have significant earnings which disqualify you from receiving those benefits right now. There is no longer an “earnings test” once you reach your FRA (66 years and 10 months), so at your FRA you could collect your full survivor benefit. And you could collect your survivor benefit only first and allow your own personal SS benefit to grow until you are 70 when it would be more than your survivor benefit. At that time, you would switch to your own benefit which would be about 25% more than your FRA benefit amount.

Opportunity Among Chaos: Pandemic Startups

Commentary
by Marcus N. DiBuduo

In tough times like these, courageous entrepreneurs strike boldly ahead with innovative ideas, often finding success when the future looks bleakest. It doesn't take a historian to know that notable companies forged their legacies when times were toughest: General Electric, Disney, and IBM, to name a few.

Rather than spending extra time on "honey do" lists that now surround you 24/7, spend the time and money working on your passion project: that novel business idea you've had, that product line you've been tinkering with, or teaming up with coworkers to start a new business in a known field.

Before cashing out your savings in hopes of achieving economic and emotional wealth, two steps are needed: identify your idea and develop a plan.

Step 1: Identify your winning idea

If you are going to be successful, you can't just focus on an idea that has the best return on investment (ROI).

The founders of all successful businesses have at least one thing in common: they had a personal interest in their business. If you are curious about running a restaurant, then talk to other restaurateurs. If you have an interesting idea for a mobile phone application, learn what it takes to develop an application from start to finish. If you have always been intrigued by electronic gadgets, take some online hardware or software development classes.

You can't successfully launch a business in an industry you know nothing about. During this "Great Reset," take time to find what you truly enjoy outside of the confines of the default hamster wheel.

Step 2: The Two (or Seven) P's

Spend the time and money working on your passion project: that novel business idea you've had, that product line you've been tinkering with, or teaming up with coworkers to start a new business in a known field. Photo courtesy Canva Studio

Many believe that the term "entrepreneur" is synonymous with "inventor." The difference however is significant: entrepreneurs are inventors who have heeded the adage of the "7 Ps" (two of the "Ps" are planning and preparation). Many people get so tied up in the technical aspects of developing their product or service that they forget the end goal – to make money.

From a legal standpoint, the crucial part of planning and preparation are protecting yourself and your ideas. The feudal protective strategies of the past – constructing a hefty castle and moat – have been replaced by modern day acts of forming legal entities, preparing written agreements, and acquiring patents or trademark registrations.

Your first step should be building the castle that protects you and all of your treasures. The castle is the entity you decide to form. This entity, if properly formed, selected, and operated, should protect you from liabilities that may arise in your course of business.

While it may be appealing to use one of the great multitude of low cost online providers of "legal solutions," business attorneys can give countless stories of instances where such providers have sold houses made of straw instead of brick. You should engage legal advisors that can understand the complexities of your personal situation and the liabilities of your business.

Just like inviting visitors in your house during the pandemic, you need to be attentive to those that you invite into your castle. If you plan on having business partners, the rules and expectations need to be clear at the outset. Is the ownership going to be equal? Is the effort going to be equal? Is the compensation going to be fair? Many would-be successful businesses fail because of unclear expectations.

While it may be uncomfortable to have these discussions with your partners, and it may feel as if signing written agreements with your business partners brings an air of untrustworthiness, it is crucial to have defined roles, responsibilities, and financial expectations up front. Frankly, greed, jealousy, and selfishness generally only appear after businesses become successful – and having proper agreements upfront are the best prophylactics to ensuring a stable and successful business.

If your product, service, or brand is unique – at the very beginning stages - you must take steps to protect them. Patents are limited monopolies to make, use, and sell a certain product or service and are designed to restrict competition. Trademarks ensure that customers know from whom they are purchasing a product or service, and help prevent your competitors from taking sales from you. The laws to protect patents and trademarks are complex, and failure to take initial steps to protect them may foreclose protection later. Never disclose your idea to third parties without taking initial steps to protect them. Your hard work will be for naught if you don't take steps to prevent others from taking your ideas and competing with you.

Use the gift of time to contemplate taking a leap of faith and inventing and planning your future. ★

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF NELLIE PALADINI
CASE No. 34-2020-00285985

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, and contingent creditors of and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both of Nellie Paladini, deceased A Petition for Probate has been filed by Ronald Barney, in the Superior Court of California, County of Sacramento, requesting Ronald Barney be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the executor to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the executor will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or have consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows October 20, 2021 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 129. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. # Jenn Galinato Elected to Student Trustee for Los Rios Board

By Scott Crow,
Los Rios Community
College District

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - Sacramento City College student Jenn Galinato has been elected by her Los Rios Community College District peers to serve as the Student Trustee for the District's Board. Galinato's her term of office will run from June 2021 to May 2022.

Galinato was elected during online student elections April 20-21. She is a triple major in business administration and management, communications and marketing, and pre-law at Sacramento City College. She is a passionate advocate for all of the students in the Los Rios Community College District.

Prior to her new role, Galinato previously served in multiple positions within Sacramento City College's Student Senate in addition to serving students on the statewide level through Region II in the Student Senate for California Community Colleges (SSCCC). In her work throughout these roles, she advocated for increasing ethnic studies resources and continuing diversity, equity and inclusion work.

During her time as this year's Student Trustee, she hopes to emphasize the importance of student advocacy, especially with the slow return to normalcy following the pandemic. She is a strong advocate on a number of important student issues: basic needs and financial aid, mental health resources and sustainability amongst all four campuses for students. With students truly being at the forefront of change, she hopes that she can continue empowering and encouraging students to take the lead to inspire the next generation of student leaders.

Following her time with

Los Rios upon graduating, Galinato plans on transferring to a four-year university to continue her studies. She then hopes to attend Stanford University for law school where she wishes to continue serving the people of her community and beyond, either in the courtroom or in public service.

To be eligible to run for student trustee, a student must be enrolled in at least five units at any Los Rios college. Student trustee elections are held during the spring semester every year. The student trustee represents the interests of the entire community and provides perspective to ensure that future students will be well-served. In addition to serving on the board of trustees, the student trustee chairs the Los Rios Student Advisory Committee (SAC), which provides a forum for communication and exchange of ideas, information, and concerns among students.

One key responsibility of SAC is to ensure students participate in district/college governance, and that students have a voice in the development of policies and processes that have a significant effect on students.

Humble Sky Lets Your Imagination Run Wild

Greenbaum Public Relations

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - If you have never looked skyward into the deep blue yonder and given a second thought to just how far outer space really goes, the new book Humble Sky cautions, you should make more of an effort to let your imagination run wild.

In the 72-page novella such inspired thinking produces astonishing, if virtually incomprehensible, results courtesy of the similarly uninhibited minds of the main characters: Henry Bakersfeld, an ingenious old man living with dementia, and Sherman, a curious young boy living in the Bronx. Together the intergenerational odd couple not only imagine but ultimately discover the essence of farthest outer space.

“The characters are beautifully rendered, and the story unfolds with great wit and pathos,” said Carla Gardini, executive producer of “The Hundred-Foot Journey” and numerous other films and TV shows with “coming of age” themes.

Through the back-and-forth of their life stories readers learn to appreciate the intersection of cosmology and philosophy, as well as that of curiosity, humility, and the range of ages of the uninhibited mind.

“This is a wonderfully thought-provoking, sobering tale that offers plenty of space for interpretation,” said James M.

Berklan, executive editor of McKnight’s Long-term Care News, a leading national source of information on healthy aging. “I was engrossed with every shift of focus and subplot – from authentic to surreal.”

Author Stuart Greenbaum is a veteran public relations professional who has directed numerous statewide and national initiatives to influence public behavior on social concerns involving health, education, environment, safety, and most recently longevity. He is the author or editor of multiple books, including Longevity Rules, Media Takes: On Aging, Before the Age Boom Goes, Educated Public Relations, and Set Straight on Bullies. Humble Sky is his first work of fiction. Additionally, he writes regularly for professional journals, newspapers, and his online culture blog, also titled Humble Sky (www.humblesky.net). He recently concluded his second term as a Governor’s appointee to the California Commission on Aging. Greenbaum, 67, lives in Sacramento, California.

Ask Toni

Why Is My Medicare Premium An Extra $471?

Toni King

Toni:

My husband, John and I need your guidance because I believe I have made a mistake enrolling in Medicare. Last year, John was laid off due to COVID-19 and has lost his employer health insurance and so I have enrolled in Medicare since I am turning 65 in August. John is a Veteran and is receiving his healthcare from the VA, so he did not have to enroll in Medicare and his healthcare is not costing us anything.

Why is my Medicare costing me an extra $471 for Medicare Part A and $148.50 for Medicare Part B? I thought Medicare Part A was free. Is there some form that I did not fill out because I have not worked very much since we married 40+ years ago and was a stay-at-home Mom and now I am the caretaker for our elderly parents? Please explain what I should do to correct my Medicare mistake.

Thank you, Susan from Cleveland, Ohio

Susan:

Most Americans do not realize that they must work a certain amount of time and pay taxes to have Medicare Part A at no cost. This is what your problem is and the Toni Says® Medicare office can help you solve your problem.

For you to qualify for Medicare you must have worked and paid Social Security and Medicare taxes from your payroll check. The Medicare Beneficiary must have worked at least 10 years or 40 quarters (paying taxes) to qualify for Medicare Part A at no additional cost. When you sign up for Medicare Part A, you may want to enroll in Part B, that also has a monthly premium, if you are not working full-time with yours or your spouse’s employer benefits.

The premium for Medicare Part A is $471 each month if you do not qualify for premium free Medicare Part A. If you paid Medicare taxes for 30-39 quarters not 40 quarters, then the standard Part A premium is $259 each month.

Those who did not work or pay into Social Security System for 10 years and are married such as is your situation Susan, should apply for Medicare under their spouse’s Social Security number to qualify (if spouse worked 10+ years or 40+ quarters). If one never married or possibly lived with someone as a domestic partner and they did not work enough quarters, then they will have to pay for Medicare Part A.

My advice to you Susan would be to call your local Social Security office since it is the government office which oversees America enrolling in Medicare. Explain your situation that you have always been a stay-at-home spouse, your husband has worked enough quarters to qualify and that you need to appeal your Medicare Part A premium of $471. Tell the Social Security representative that you are seeking premium-free Medicare Part A due to your husband having enough quarters to qualify.

Social Security will look over both yours and your husband’s Social Security accounts to verify that he has enough quarters. Be prepared to provide a certified marriage license showing you are married and will have to mail the original certified marriage license (not a copy) to that specific Social Security office.

For Medicare enrollment questions either call your local Social Security office specific 800 number or call the Toni Says Medicare hotline at 832/519-8664 for help.

2021 Confused about Medicare and LTC Zoom webinar is Thursday, July 29th at 4:00 PM. Visit www.tonisays.com to sign up for Toni’s new webinar event.
