COVID Money Debacle

Spending spree: Oversight scarce as billions in COVID aid poured into California schools Photo © Liquoricelegs | Dreamstime.com

By Robert Lewis and Joe Hong, CALMatters.org

When the pandemic closed schools in March 2020 - abruptly ending classes and stranding children and working parents - leaders in Washington and Sacramento scrambled to provide relief.

The result was a series of stimulus measures that allocated $33.5 billion in state and federal funds to California's K-12 schools to address the devastation of the pandemic. It was a staggering amount of one-time funding for the state's cash-strapped schools, equal to a third of all the money they got the year before the pandemic.

Imagine your boss giving you a check equal to four months of your salary and telling you to spend it quickly or risk giving it back. For schools, this was money for things like laptops, air filters and mental health counselors - money to help kids.

But much of the funding has come with limited oversight and little transparency, according to a CalMatters investigation. No centralized state or federal database exists to show how schools have spent this money. And data from the districts' quarterly spending reports provided to the state are so broad as to be virtually useless in tracking this COVID relief money.

Of the $5.9 billion local education agencies have spent so far from the largest of the stimulus funds, more than a quarter went to a category for "other" expenses, according to the state.

CalMatters spent three months examining school COVID relief spending across the state, reviewing thousands of pages of records obtained through more than 45 public records requests. That includes state spending reviews as well as accounting ledgers from two dozen school districts, including many of California's biggest.

The records reveal pandemic winners – companies that reaped millions as overwhelmed districts, suddenly flush with cash, started writing checks. Some are established firms well-positioned to fill massive orders

Some districts refused to provide CalMatters records showing where their money is going. That includes San Francisco Unified, which got more than $186 million in federal stimulus funds.

Taken together, the reporting shows the differing decisions local leaders made trying to keep teachers, kids and their communities safe from a deadly disease while also addressing the learning loss and mental health impacts of prolonged social isolation. Some of those spending decisions were made behind closed doors and with little scrutiny, making it difficult for the public to determine whether districts used the money as effectively as possible or as lawmakers intended.

The stakes of such decisions could not be higher. The pandemic hurt California's kids. More than half the students who took the statewide standardized test last year scored below grade level for English Language Arts. Nearly two-thirds of those students tested below grade level for math. Attendance is down. And federal data shows the number of students considering suicide is up.

Local educational agencies still have billions of dollars of COVID relief left to spend. If they don't spend it by various deadlines, they may have to return it.

In a written statement CalMatters, the state Department of Education said it is "encouraged by the impact that stimulus funding is having on the students and schools of California," and that overseeing the funds is a top priority.

"The department has a robust monitoring system to ensure that (agencies') expenditures are in accordance with all applicable federal and state requirements," according to the statement.

The state auditor's office criticized oversight in an October report, saying the state is not using the limited data it receives to identify abnormal spending patterns and scrutinize local educational agencies.

"The state Department of Education has not taken a very active role in managing how the money is Continued on page 3

Top Six Pollutants that Degrade California's Water Quality

Caltrans Press Release

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - As part of its "Let's Change This to That" public education campaign, Caltrans is sharing the top sources of stormwater pollution and ways to prevent them for contaminating California's waterways. As stormwater travels into storm drains, it captures pollutants from highways, streets, sidewalks and yards that flow into waterways. The top six pollutants have an outsized impact on the water quality of lakes, rivers, streams and the ocean, plus many are preventable through small actions Californians can take.

The following lists the top six pollutants and actions to stop them at the source:

Trash and litter: Properly secure items in truck beds and put trash and recycling in the correct bin; Sediments: Prevent soil erosion by using mulch in the garden, planting trees and shrubs, and sweeping driveways instead of hosing them off; Nutrients: Avoid overfertilizing lawns and plants and limit vegetation waste by keeping fallen leaves out of storm drains; Bacteria: Limit pet and RV waste by picking up after your pet and using appropriate RV dumping stations; Metals: Regularly check tire pressure, change oil and fluids, and use commercial car washes to prevent metals generated from vehicle, tire, and brake wear from ending up on highways; Pesticides: Use organic pesticides and properly dispose of unused portions.

Caltrans is tasked with managing stormwater runoff and mitigating pollution within its 350,000 acres of right of way, which includes more than 15,000 centerline miles of highways. This effort involves picking up roadside litter and clearing out storm drains to preserve roadway safety and drivability during all types of weather conditions.

Unlike water that goes down the sink or toilet in a home, stormwater is untreated and flows directly into lakes, rivers and other waterways. Stopping pollutants at the source is critical Caltrans' efforts to keep stormwater runoff clean

"Preventing stormwater pollution requires the help and support of every Californian, and it starts with keeping highways and roadways clean," said Steven Keck, Acting Director of Caltrans. "Californians must work together to take necessary steps to prevent pollution at the source and keep our waterways clean."

Summer is the peak season for recreation in and around local waterways. This year, as hot, dry weather is expected to intensify drought conditions throughout the state, Caltrans is amplifying water quality as a

During a drought, the state's lakes, rivers, and streams have lower water levels, which leads to a higher concentration of pollutants. By preventing a buildup of metals, trash and other pollutants on highways and roadways in dry conditions, Californians can help keep pollutants from traveling into local waterways during rainstorms.

The "Let's Change This to That" stormwater public education campaign is calling on Californians to pledge to do their part to keep stormwater clean. Visit CleanWaterCA.com to take the pledge and learn more about the sources and pathways of stormwater pollution.

"Let's Change This to That" is a threeyear public education campaign led by Caltrans to raise awareness and increase understanding of the sources and pathways of stormwater pollution throughout California. For more information, visit CleanWaterCA.com.

DWR Offers Grants to Protect Communities, Support Fish Populations and Restore Streams

DWR News Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) The Department of Water Resources (DWR) on Wednesday, June 1, released the final Guidelines and Proposal Solicitation Package for the Riverine Stewardship Program, which provides funding to plan and implement projects that will reduce flooding, improve water quality, and restore streams, creeks, and rivers to enhance the environment for fish, wildlife, and people.

As communities and wildlife alike face challenges posed by climate extremes and California's ongoing drought conditions, the program will award up to $15 million in competitive grants to implement projects that help reduce flood risk, increase water supply, and enhance and restore fish populations and habitat. The funding will be delivered through the Riverine Stewardship Program and its two subprograms the Urban Streams Restoration Program (USRP) and the San Joaquin Fish Population Enhancement Program.

All three programs will help support watersheds, local wildlife, and aquatic habitat. Eligible projects include habitat restoration, bank stabilization, water temperature improvements and habitat enhancements to increase water supply reliability to help fish adapt to climate change. "Climate change is driving multiple threats to California including the severe drought conditions that challenge our communities and fish populations alike," said DWR Director Karla Nemeth. "This funding supports a local and state partnership to make our communities and their streams more drought resilient for people and fish."

Both the Riverine Stewardship Program and San Joaquin Fish Population Enhancement Program are funded by Proposition 13, while the Urban Streams Restoration Program is funded by Proposition 68, 84, and state budget general

During the 2019 solicitation, DWR awarded $54.4 million in competitive grants to 20 projects that improve habitat and spawning conditions for fish species, reduce flood risk to property and local communities, and more. The Urban Streams Restoration Program, which has funded projects for 35 years, recently celebrated ribbon cutting ceremonies for previously completed restoration projects located in Santa Barbara, Berkeley, and Santa Rosa.

Applications will be accepted starting June 1, 2022, and funding is available for Tribes, local public agencies, and certified non-profits as specified in the program guidelines and proposal solicitation package. Other applicant types such as community groups will be considered on a case-by-case basis. For-profit corporations, non-public entities, and individual landowners are not eligible. The released guidelines will also address future funding that may become available to DWR through the 20222023 Budget Act to address drought resilience and aquatic habitat improvements.

The Urban Streams Restoration Program also provides funding and technical assistance for public engagement, outreach, and underrepresented community support. DWR encourages community participation in project design and implementation to promote educational opportunities to community members of all ages and increase understanding of the project's benefits.

For more information about upcoming grant opportunities, visit DWR's Grants and Loans webpage.

Cause of Death and Identity Determined of Dead Body Discovered in Marysville

Yuba County Sheriff's Department News Release

MARYSVILLE, CA (MPG) - On April 26, 2022, at around 1:52 p.m., Recology discovered a dead body in the Material Recovery

Facility at 3001 N. Levee Road in Marysville.

Based on the deceased's location, it appeared the body was brought in with a cardboard recycling truck sometime during the previous week.

The Sheriff's Investigations

Unit, along with neighboring agencies, conducted an investigation, but the exact location of pickup and date of arrival could not be determined.

The deceased was identified as Ron Lamp of Magalia, CA. An autopsy revealed physical injuries, however, they were non-life threatening and did not contribute to Mr. Lamp's death. A toxicology analysis showed Lamp was under the influence of a controlled substance. The cause of death was determined to be "probable asphyxia due to entrapment in a recycling truck."

Anybody with information regarding this investigation is encouraged to contact the Yuba County Sheriff's Department at (530) 749-7777.

the Life of Richard Webb

MPG Staff

GAINSVILLE, FL (MPG) -Richard Everett Webb, 91, longtime Yuba-Sutter resident, passed away January 4, 2022, in Gainesville, Florida, due to a massive stroke.

Richard was born on July 7, 1930, to Everett and Louise Webb in Dayton, Washington. He is survived by his wife, Ruby Marie Webb, daughters Patrice (husband Steve) Crabtree and Sherrill (husband Daniel) Fisher, son Gordon (wife Devon) Webb, and grandchildren: Colin and Ben Crabtree, and Abigail, Hannah, Caleb and Esther Fisher.

Richard was raised in Pullman, Washington, with sisters Betty and Dorothy, and beloved cousins. His father was a professor at Washington State University. He graduated in 1952 from WSU as a TKE fraternity member with an Agriculture Degree and on a whim took the Air Force pilot qualification test and passed! He joined the Air Force in 1953 and in Enid, Oklahoma, became one of the youngest ever pilot instructors. On Nov 1, 1955, he married his wife of 66 years, Ruby Koehn, a hospital nurse from Enid.

His military career took his family to Texas, California, Maine, North Dakota, and Beale AFB, California, where he retired in 1972. He flew B-47s, B-25s, B-52s, 24-hour missions around the world, was part of the Minute Man Missile program, flew C-47s and bombers for a year in Vietnam, instructed in B-52s, and was part of the Strategic Air Command. He earned a Master's Degrees in Industrial Management and Aerospace Systems. After retiring, he was a financial planner, bus driver, Certified Flight Instructor. and aircraft owner. He was a founding board member of Faith Christian School (serving 25 years), a faithful church leader Rotarian Gideon, and a Reclamation District President working with US Army Corps of Engineers. In 1997 Richard and Ruby invited their daughter, Sherrill, and family with new twins to share a home and live intergenerationally, which Richard loved for the next 23 years.

Until his late 80's, Richard continued flight instructing and many he taught became good friends. In 2018,

Richard received the prestigious Wright Brother's Award for pilots with 50+ years of accident-free flight. At the age of 91, he purchased and drove a large RV with Ruby to visit family and friends from Washington to Florida, to once again live with the Fisher family. In Florida, on December 22, he suffered a stroke and joined his Lord Jesus Christ on January 4.

Richard loved God and read through the Bible every year. As an active Gideon, he passed out Bibles at High Schools and faithfully gave God's Word to all he encountered. He was a family-oriented, supportive father and grandfather, who dearly loved his three kids and six grandkids, and rarely missed events or games. He valued people, never knew a stranger, was diligent in keeping up with others, and could/would chat with anyone. He never lost his child-like spirit and love for life, had a mild and endearing personality, and loved giving others a "hard time" in fun. Many called him their "second dad," including for 40+ years, Louis M. Luu, a Vietnamese refugee, and Ricky Foster, a foster son. He lived a life faithful to his wife, family, country, and God. All who dearly loved him miss him terribly. His was a life well-lived.

Donations may be sent for Bible distribution to: Gideons International, P.O. Box 1454, Yuba City, CA 95992.

His Celebration of Life will be Saturday, July 9, 2022, at 2:00 p.m. at Hope Point Nazarene Church, 600 N. George Washington Blvd., Yuba City, CA. ## COVID Money Debacle being spent," said Kris Patel, supervising auditor who led the team behind the October report.

Patel said lack of oversight is particularly concerning as spending deadlines approach.

After the pandemic shut down the world, lawmakers in Washington, D.C, passed six major pieces of stimulus legislation worth more than $5 trillion. The money was spread across myriad programs including business loans, funds to government agencies and checks directly to citizens.

California got yet another infusion of cash when higher-than-expected tax revenue created a massive budget surplus – more relief for beleaguered local governments.

While much has been written about emergency spending at the state level, including fraud targeting the state's Employment Development Department, less is known about the money that poured into the nation's

The federal stimulus measures created the Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Fund and the Governor's Emergency Education Relief Fund - two large pots of money allocated to schools and state education departments in multiple Ultimately, California public schools and charters got almost $29 billion in federal stimulus money. Billions more came from state programs lawmakers in Sacramento created.

Each program has its own spending requirements and categories - steering money toward things like instructional materials, school breakfast programs, purchasing educational technology and implementing public health protocols.

But some of the spending categories are broad. There's money for principals "to address local needs," and a catchall category described in state records as "other activities to continue school operations and employment of existing staff."

California has about a thousand public school districts and hundreds of public charter schools that received COVID relief funds.

To get a cross-section of the stimulus spending, CalMatters asked more than 30 school districts for their accounting ledgers. Those districts included the 20 biggest and 10 random agencies across a geographically and demographically diverse swath of the state.

San Juan Unified in the Sacramento region used funds to hire an instructional aide for every classroom in its early grades and a new teacher at every school. Such hiring has been difficult because of a widespread teacher shortage, but the stimulus has also allowed the district to pay hiring bonuses, said Melissa Bassanelli, the district's deputy superintendent of schools and student support.

One common area of spending was technology. Some districts spent heavily on laptops, hot spots and other hardware, as well as computer programs and support in order to make the switch to virtual schooling when buildings shut down.

Districts threw COVID relief money at a menu of technology firms offering services like remote tutoring, online assessments, cybersecurity and virtual lessons.

It wasn't just technology companies that reaped massive paydays from districts flush with stimulus cash. Personal protective equipment vendors and businesses selling indoor air quality products got lots of deals. Firms touting COVID testing-related services also were in high demand.

Most districts and schools will face little scrutiny for their pandemic spending decisions, outside local administrative offices and boardrooms.

Yes, some funds do require a public spending plan. The state also required a special report on how districts are using their one-time funds.

"But it was a very, very general document," said Victor Leung, director of education equity for the ACLU of Southern California. "It was extremely unclear how those districts spent the money."

Such documents also aren't always easy for parents to find on district websites.

The state Education Department does review a selection of districts annually as part of the Federal Program Monitoring process. During such reviews, state evaluators look to make sure district policies are up to date and scrutinize a sampling of expenditures to make sure they're appropriate.

Last fiscal year, the department reviewed stimulus spending at 15 local educational agencies – less than a percent of the roughly 1,700 agencies that got stimulus funds. This year the department is reviewing 50.

Those reviews turned up numerous red flags. Six of the 15 reviews from last year had so-called "findings" while 19 of the 37 so far this year flagged potential problems. The issues range from poor recordkeeping, to outdated conflict-of-interest policies, to outright misspending.

Some districts were able to resolve findings simply by providing more information to the state.

The state Education Department, for example, last year ordered the Sacramento-based charter school St. HOPE Public School 7 to justify much of its stimulus spending. Among the questioned costs was $11,000 the school spent on attorneys fees, records show.

In response to the findings, St. HOPE provided the state with accounting ledgers, invoices, written descriptions of spending and other records. The material showed, for example, the attorneys fees were for negotiations with the teachers' union regarding the return to school and therefore justified.

Quantitative Tightening

Although the markets have halted their markets and economy in general. brutal day after day erosions on occasion, the brutal sell off on June 9th and 10th seemed to confirm the general direction is still downward.

Obviously there is still plenty to be concerned about. The markets fall has been attributed to the Feds increasing of the overnight interest rates, which also effect borrowing rates economy wide. The rate increases to date and the expected rates to come have had and will continue to add trepidation to investor mindsets. The rate increases are implemented to rein in the worst inflation in 40 years.

The Feds have a two part plan to address inflation. The first part is the aforementioned interest rate increases.

The second part is called Quantitative Tightening (QT). Although the counterpart to QT is Quantitative Easing (QE), which encompasses the Feds buying debt instruments from the banking institutions which floods the banking system and hence the overall economy with cash, QT does the exact opposite. In QT, the Feds dump the debt instruments they have on their books onto the bond markets.

Being larger than the stock market, what happens in the bond market, effects everything else. Bonds are debt from public and private companies, financial institutions, governments and home mortgages to name a few. The bonds the Feds own include government debt and mortgages.

The Feds QT program they will soon implement includes the sale of 95 billion worth of bonds a month until further notice. No small amount to be sure. The Feds have been on the buy side of bonds over the last few decades or more, totaling in the area of a trillion dollars.

Now on the rare sell side of things, the markets have yet to see the effects of what the Feds selling bonds will do in the short, medium and long term.

What we do know is when the Feds were buying, it was in response to a multitude of economic whirlwinds which included the Dot.com crash, 9/11, the 2008/09 crisis and the CoVid-19 virus. As a result of their buying, the markets plowed through these events only to end up much higher soon thereafter. Now having to instead sell debt, going forward it will likely be a huge negative for the

This analyst is of the opinion that the bond sales (OT) will not go over well with the bond and stock markets once the selling begins. After all, the markets and economy are already under stress from supply side issues, labor shortages and inflation. In essence the Fed may be tightening into a weakening economy. A double whammy to

In the early 80's, the Feds faced a similar situation. High inflation coupled with a stagnating economy. Called Stagflation, the Feds choose to address the inflation part of the equation and left the markets and the economy to twist in the proverbial wind.

Paul Volcker, the Federal Reserve chief back then, raised interest rates 3% in one day. The world did not take it well and it put so much strain on the consumer, they burned him in effigy on the streets of Washington.

There is little argument that an interest rate increase of that magnitude would flatten world markets and the US economy due to the much higher debt levels that exist on all platforms, both in the consumer and business arena alike.

The current economic environment unfortunately reeks once again of the dreaded stagflation which once again reflects inflation amidst a weakening and increasingly stagnant economy.

Although Jerome Powell is the current Fed chief saddled with the unenviable job of putting the pieces back together this time around, I hope he can resurrect the spirit of Houdini to assist him. Otherwise our "problem" might seem more like a predicament.

For those of you that don't know, problems have solutions. Predicaments only have

California's Sham Budget and Unintended Consequences

By Dan Walters CALMatters.org

The "law of unintended consequences" is a tenet of classic economics - essentially a warning that an action meant to have a positive effect can often bring a negative outcome.

The political version is an oft-voiced admonition: "What goes around comes around."

California The Legislature's frantic effort this week to approve a 2022-23 budget – or at least its unfinished version of the budget - exemplifies the principle.

For many decades, the state constitution has required the Legislature to pass a budget by June 15 but for many decades the requirement was routinely violated – sometimes for months.

During those decades, the budget required a two-thirds vote in the Legislature, which meant the minority party - usually Republicans - could hold up passage until its demands were met. The syndrome reached a climactic point in 2009 when one Republican state senator, Abel Maldonado, refused to vote for the budget until Democratic leaders agreed to place a measure on the ballot to change California's primary election process to what's called a "top-two" system.

Leaders of both parties despised the proposed new system, but Maldonado, with backing from then-Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger, held out until they agreed to his demand. The top-two proposal, in which all candidates appear on one ballot and the two top finishers face each other in the general election regardless of party, was approved by voters in 2010. Last week's election was its latest employment.

Maldonado's holdout had a consequence that neither he nor Schwarzenegger intended - motivating Democrats to make sure it never happened again. Their labor union allies spent millions of dollars to qualify and pass another measure in 2010, lowering the budget vote to a simple majority.

To make the measure more attractive to voters, its sponsors included a passage that said legislators would lose their pay if a budget was not enacted by June 15.

That proviso, however, had another unintended consequence a year later when Republican Schwarzenegger's successor, Democrat Jerry Brown, and his fellow Democrats in the Legislature deadlocked over details of the state budget.

Brown vetoed the placeholder budget that the Democrats passed by the June 15 deadline, saying it was not balanced, and Controller John Chiang declared that since that left the state without a balanced budget, legislators would have their pay – about $400 a day - suspended until there was one.

Chiang said the Democratic budget was, by his reckoning, $1.85 billion out of balance. "The numbers simply did not add up," said Chiang, drawing the ire of his fellow Democrats, who sued, contending he had overstepped his authority.

Fundamentally, the courts later said, the Legislature is the sole judge of whether it has met the June 15 deadline. Consequently, the penalty for noncompliance that was ballyhooed to voters in 2010 is a fiction.

In subsequent years, the Legislature has always passed a budget by the June 15 deadline, sometimes a real one in agreement with the governor but often merely a placeholder.

The 1,000-page budget being passed this week is another sham, drafted largely in secret with minimal public exposure and many blanks to be filled in later. Democratic leaders and Gov. Gavin Newsom are still at odds on multi-billion-dollar issues, including the size and form of payments to Californians to offset inflation.

There's also a big gap over how much of the state's projected surplus to spend on permanent commitments, with Newsom's Department of Finance warning that overspending could create problems in the future if, as many economists suspect, a recession is on the horizon.

That could be a truly important consequence of budgetary gamesmanship.

The Brownsville Bailiwick & Beyond

There are a few book groups that meet be holding their monthly Event Day on at Books & More. One has been together since the 1960's. As Bullard's Bar was being built, this was a booming place. Yuba Feather School was twice as large, Challenge had a busy store that carried almost everything, there was even a gas station. The Forest Service had employees living in Challenge. And so a book group was developed. This group still meets on the last Wednesday of the month at 10 am. Each year they develop a list of suggested books for the year, then there are usually some goodies and a good discussion. Currently this group is meeting at the bookstore and newcomers are welcome. Then there is a study group that chooses one book to read and discuss. They meet each Wednesday (except the last one of the month) at 1:00 at the bookstore. We are trying to start two book clubs for the vounger set. They both met on Friday mornings, but the attendance was so limited, we had to drop the program. Anyone interested?

Next weekend we will celebrate our Independence Day. The volunteer Fire Department will have fireworks on Monday evening, July 4. We need a reporter to find out the details: time, is there a meal, etc. Books & More will Saturday, June 2. Hopefully, a few vendors will set up booths, Next Step will sell watermelons and baked goodies and the bookstore will have a hot dog lunch.

I went to the bank today and noticed the bulletin that said they would be closed, Monday, June 13, for Juneteenth. I wondered, so I asked Shanna what it commemorated. She said it was the day slavery was abolished and it was made a federal holiday last year. Now to get rid of the hatred and angst. Wars and shootings are sure not caused by guns but mental illness, severe depression, need of power and hatred. However I would like to put limits on the military style rifles

I will be putting this column together by myself now. Christine just got too busy. Is there another "reporter-to-be" out there that would like to help? I need to know the local "happenings", details like hours, location, dates and more. Just give me a call or drop in to Books & More  $(530\ 675-3275)$ .

Drought Picture Grows More Bleak for Agriculture

Water supply challenges for farmers are worsening as the drought deepens. Unlike in other dry years, farmers are facing troubles finding water to acquire in secondary transfer markets, says Ellen Hanak, director of water policy for the Public Policy Institute of California. "I don't think we're going to see a whole lot of that this year," she said. Tim Johnson, president and CEO of the California Rice Commission, said growers will plant just 250,000 acres this year, half of the normal 500,000.

Spring Winds Add to Farming Challenges in Klamath Basin

Already facing sharp curtailments in irrigation supplies, farmers in Northern California's Klamath Basin are dealing with additional challenges after a cold and windy spring. The winds further dried up crop fields at planting time and blew dust from fallowed fields across vast parts of the agricultural landscape. Farmers there are getting 15% or less of their allotment of water from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation through the federal Klamath Water Project.

Survey of Organic Farmers Shows Concerns About Weed Control, Labor

A new survey of 1,200 organic farmers and ranchers across the U.S. cites concerns over accessing labor and controlling weeds as key issues. According to the report by the Santa Cruz-based Organic Farming Research Foundation, managing production costs, controlling insect pests and maintaining soil fertility and crop nutrients are also key concerns. Some 144 organic farmers from California participated in the survey.

Nursery Demand Remains Strong, After Pandemic Inspired Home Gardeners

California's nursery operators report that demand for nursery products remains robust. Home gardeners began buying up nursery plants and supplies at peak levels during shut-in days of the pandemic in 2020-21. Sales have fallen since then, but nursery operators say business remains above pre-pandemic levels. Part of the reason is that younger customers have stepped up purchases, building a strong new demographic in the nursery market.

Life During the Depression

By Dick Marquette

"Oh God! Put back the Universe and give me yesterday." Silver King-Jones.

When I was a child the celebration for remembering our ancestors and veterans was called Decoration Day. People cleaned the graveyards and decorated the graves. Many churches had a graveyard on church property. Family and friends prepared the body, made a wooden casket, dug the grave and had a funeral. Some people had a private family burial ground.

All labor and material were all donated. During the depression many people lived on small self-sustaining farms. Today we call it Memorial Day when we remember those who went before us.

The stock market had crashed during the "Great Depression" of the 1930's. Prohibition was in effect. They called it "The Hard Times." There were some 250,000 men, women and children "Riding the rails" in search of work. I had been sent east to live with Grandma on her farm in the Prairie Lands. Grandma's farm was a step back in time, there was no electricity, no phone, water from the "crick" or from the windmill if there was wind. Farmers called those windless days "Blue days." Grandma's farm was self-sufficient. We only went to the general store to buy rope or harness leather. Grandma baked all of our bread, donuts, biscuits, rolls and apple and berry pies. Each day was set aside for something. We washed on Monday. I used a big cone shaped plunger to dash clothes in the big washtub using big bars of Fels-Naptha soap. However, we also made our own soap from renderings and lye. Every Saturday we took baths in that big wash tub, we bathed in the kitchen. There was no privacy at all but being a total farm family there were no secrets about anything because we had to deal with all those things every day. Grandma always scrubbed and made sure I was clean. On the farms the women bathed first then the men folk.

Later there would be "threshing crews" with their massive steam tractors or the great horse teams to pull the threshing machines. There were the door-to-door peddlers... the donut man, Jewel Tea, Watkins. Grandma always bought carbolic salve, and horse lineament, they were for our livestock, but we used them on the farm because they were stronger than the "people medicine." In those days you had to hide the Vanilla for it would make a man mean, ugly and dangerous. During prohibition they used sterno (canned heat), bathtub gin. There were "speakeasies" in many cities of America.

The German farms knew how to make beer too. Milwaukee had Pabst, Schlitz, Miller, Foxhead and others. Our town seemed to be full of working men all the time.

There were those "bare knuckle" prize fighters who came to town and usually challenged a town leader to a fight for money. Most of them chickened out and in doing so sometimes the wife and children would leave not wanting to see their husband as a coward.

The tavern owner had boxing gloves hanging on a post so when loggers came to town on weekends, they could have boxing matches in the vacant lot behind the tavern.

Life on the farm was hard, but if you would think about it... it was fulfilling.

We had a big "cyclone cellar" where you went in a tornado. It was filled with hundreds of quart glass Mason jars of vegetables, fruit and even meat. There were sacks of potatoes too.

Grandma was always busy. She could do all the farm work. On Saturday a 10-year-old Amish girl "Ellie" came to help Grandma clean house and bake for Sunday guests as was the custom at that time. Ellie would come through Grandma's swamp. She would wear an apron with two pockets. On her way she would pick wildwood herbs and berries and put in one pocket. She gathered wildflowers and put in the other pocket.

It was awful to think about, but there were many diseases in those days. I remember a bitter cold winter with a diphtheria epidemic when it was 30 degrees below 0. Permafrost had set in. The mortician would have to use dynamite to open the graves and bury the children. We heard the blasts at school and the students counted the charges on their fingers. Some cried and some ran out into the snow shrieking and screaming.... they were our classmates. Such was life on the prairie during the Great Depression. One of my friends died of polio. He died in an iron lung and I can barely remember it. It looked like the cockpit of a fighter plane. We walked three miles to the funeral parlor and I touched his hand and it was like ice. I placed a little glass bluebird under his pillow. I tried to forget it ever happened. And so, it was 85 years ago ...I stood silently at the old graveyard, and I saw the marble pillar with great grandfather's name on it. I saw the shadows weaving to and fro as our National Colors fluttered overhead .. and I felt my heart beat a little faster.... and I saw old men with fife and drum and little girls bedecked in "frilly" dresses and I saw the director wave her baton and we played "The Old Comrades March." I saw old men tear up and reach out to one another, we then saw a Civil War Flag raised upon the flagstaff and the band played "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and when it came to "Glory Hallelujah," two Civil War canons thundered. This valley echoed across Duck Creek, and the smoke of black powder drifted over the crowd. The flag "Old Glory" fluttered through the smoke in a beam of sunlight and at the end of time, "The truth goes marching on" another thunderous that rattled windows and at that point we were to play "America the Beautiful" and at that part that said "Oh beautiful for spacious skies, the smoke cleared away and I knew then that would be ingrained within my heart and soul forever. I felt a shiver in my spine and I know that something had happened that day ...but I know not what. As it was for all farm towns, there would be free food all day, a Band Concert, bare knuckles prize fights, wrestling, gambling and free movies at night. It was to take our mind off of the "Great Depression" .... if only for a short while. Childhood is a kingdom where no one dies, how dear to my heart are the scenes of my

And now I can remember summer on the farm... the soft plodding of the horses through the field... the smell of new mown hay. I remember the dinner bell in the distance, the dipper of cold water from the old hand pump and how good it tasted. I remember lying on a hillside watching the soft fluffy clouds passing overhead, and I imagined they were flying carpets and they would carry me to strange exotic land and I would float forever and ever. I remember riding my new sled under the Northern Lights and skating at night in the old Mill Pond. I remember how it was. and remembering, I am happy indeed, I am very happy.

US Already Descending Into Recession: Economist

As credit gets tighter, a lot of 'dream' ventures will prove to be unfeasible and fail

PETR SVAB

The U.S. economy is already in the process of entering a recession, according to an economist who specializes in how sentiment affects markets.

Peter Atwater predicted that a large amount of malinvested capital will be wiped out and areas of the economy that have historically been resistant to crises may not be so this time. His research indicates that the economy is under the influence of "confidence cycles" and when consumer sentiment shifts toward the expectation of a recession, the market will actually enter one.

"I think the cake has been baked from the sentiment perspective where people are now acting on the assumption that a recession is coming. And remember, it's that action that actually causes a recession to come," Atwater, a former hedge fund manager who's now a lecturer at the College of William & Mary in Virginia, said during a recent Wealthion interview.

Atwater says thousands of companies have fudged their earnings with easy cash because of the ultra-low interest rates set by the Federal Reserve.

"With free money, the ability to financially engineer your earnings results is unlimited," he said.

such companies will start having trouble rolling over their loans. "It's sucking the air out of the room," he said, anticipating that "thousands" of such companies may go under.

As credit gets tighter, a lot of "dream" ventures will prove to be unfeasible and fail, he predicted, noting that overconfidence in the market has caused investors "to buy promises of even the most ridiculous things."

"There was so much capital irresponsibly deployed to capture dreams that the volume of equity destruction is going to be massive."

The financial elite is, so far, failing to appreciate the direness of the situation because their lifestyle has become extraordinarily insulated from a commoner's reality, he said, calling it "work from home blindness."

"The financial elite are spending so much time sequestered away from the real world that I think they've lost sight of the fact that the folks who are delivering things to them—who live in the real world—have to buy gas."

During previous recessions, some parts of the economy were usually spared major losses and could thus serve as safe havens for investors. Those would include government bonds and businesses serving high-end clientele, such as luxury goods producers. In recent years, big tech companies have also been treated as safe bets.

All of those, however, may get pummeled this time too, according to Atwater.

"What I don't think investors quite appreciate is we're having an unwinding in both fixed income and equity simultaneously here. And there's not going to be any place to hide in that."

Businesses serving the rich, meanwhile, may find that their clientele is in worse financial shape than expected.

In recent years, there are indicators that the rich have taken on large amounts of debt, following the mantra of "don't sell it, borrow against it," in order to avoid taxes, Atwater said.

"It's a masterful tax strategy, but it is completely devoid of a connection to reality."

As a result, he noted, "nobody has contemplated that the biggest potential losses could be among the customers that have heretofore been the safest."

He has also noticed an unusual phenomenon in which market actors are getting worn down by prolonged market instability without actually hitting a bottom.

"Everybody, they sort of feel like, 'Are we there yet? Is it done?' People are tired. It's not fear, it's fatigue. And I've never seen a market bottom on whining in the sense that we're just all tired of it."

Missouri Attorney General Subpoenas 7 School Districts Amid Worry Over Student Surveying

JULIETTE FAIRLEY

Surveys in Missouri schools that collect information from students and create a perceived need for a so-called social-emotional learning curriculum have drawn the attention of state officials.

We'd like him to obtain information regarding where these surveys are coming from and enforce federal and state privacy laws.

Kimberly Hermann, general counsel, Southeastern Legal Foundation

Attorney General Eric Schmitt issued subpoenas last week to seven school districts that allegedly employ student surveys—created by education companies Panorama and Project Wayfinder—that gather data about parents' political beliefs and income levels, as well as racial identity, sexual behaviors, and mental health.

"Those same groups come in and sell that curriculum to the schools," said Kimberly Hermann, general counsel with Southeastern Legal Foundation, a national nonprofit law firm that defends liberty.

"The contracts with these companies are public record, so they're supposed to be approved during school board meetings, but the surveys are happening without parental consent and parental notification."

In response, Schmitt has opened an investigation into the use of student surveys in Mehlville, Webster Groves, Jefferson City, Lee's Summit R-7, Park Hill, Springfield, and Neosho schools—with an eye on violations of Missouri's Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, or the Protection of Pupil Rights Amendment.

"Subjecting students to personal, invasive surveys created by third-party consultants, potentially without parents' consent, is ridiculous and does nothing to further our children's education," Schmitt said in a

Hermann details in a May 1 letter to Schmitt that Webster Groves requires middle school students to take a survey on "LGBTQIA+ Struggles!" that asks: "What are your preferred pronouns, what struggles have you experienced related to LG-BTQIA+, and what would you like to see in the school in order to be more inclusive?"

"There are federal statutes that they're not supposed to ask these questions," said Andy Wells, the Missouri chapter president of No Left Turn in Education, a national education advocacy

"The problem is that school districts, and some of the companies that are being hired by school districts, don't care. They just ignore it. They do it anyway and if somebody doesn't like it,

Missouri Attorney General Eric Schmitt (C) talks to reporters with Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton (2nd L) in Washington on April 26, 2022.

you'll have to sue them."

Second-graders were asked, "When is the first time you noticed that people can be different races from you, what did you notice, and do you feel more comfortable around people who look like you?"

"The goal here is to teach these kids that America is a white country of white supremacy and to destroy the nuclear family," Hermann said. "If bad actors in the progressive left are not stopped, then we're just going to have a further divide in this country among our kids."

Neither Panorama nor Project Wayfinder responded by press time to requests by The Epoch Times for comment.

Schools often create partnerships with third-party vendors to secure grant money, according to Jill Carter, a candidate for the Missouri Senate's 32nd District, and by accepting the grant, they are bound to allow the surveying. "If it's a platform that's providing software or technology, especially with the technology in our school's increasing, there's less and less ability for the school to even really know what is being asked," Carter told The Epoch Times.

"They are giving over that oversight, and the teachers sometimes don't even know, because the kids are online or on a tablet, and that's part of the software or implementation of some of these programs."

Among the concerns identified is confidentiality.

"There's a lot of danger by it,"
Wells told The Epoch Times.
"The biggest of which is who has access to the data and whether it follows students to college. How is the data being used?"

Another anxiety is whether the information gleaned is creating a profile that flags a need for intervention.

"It's definitely a force of government and the intervention would be, 'If we don't like the way you respond on these surveys, we're going to recommend intervention,' and Panorama offers intervention activities and questions," said Missouri-based Mary Byrne, who holds a doctorate in education from Teacher's College in Manhattan.

"There's a menu that you can access for teachers to implement different activities."

The use of surveys isn't new, according to Byrne.

"It was done years before, and that's why the Pupil Privacy Act was put in place," she said.

The Pupil Privacy Act, also known as the Protection of Pupil Rights Amendment of 1978, prohibits children from participating in surveys and other analyses without parental consent and includes a provision for parents to opt their child out of such evaluations.

But there is no cause of action to file a lawsuit for a violation of federal privacy laws.

"The way Congress wrote the law is you can file an administrative complaint, but under the Biden administration, we know that's not going anywhere," Hermann said.

The subpoenas delivered by Schmitt demand documents and information to determine the extent of the surveys and whether parents consented to the surveys prior to distribution to students.

"We'd like him to obtain information regarding where these surveys are coming from and enforce federal and state privacy laws," Hermann said.

"He has numerous different avenues that he could go based on the law and his investigatory power. So we're going to leave it to his office to make determinations about what they think the best avenue is."

Man Sentenced to Life for Killing His Daughters and Brother-in-Law

Butte County DA News Release

BUTTE COUNTY, CA (MPG) - A Sacramento man, who drove his truck into a local canal on Easter 2020, killing his two infant daughters and brother-in-law, was sentenced to a life term on June 16 in Butte County Superior Court.

Judge Corie Caraway sentenced Colby Brookman, 29, to the maximum term of 37 years to life in state prison for felony Gross Vehicular Manslaughter While Intoxicated. Brookman also admitted that this was his fourth "strike", which resulted in the life sentence.

Butte County District Attorney Mike Ramsey said on April 12, 2020, Brookman drove his truck into the canal at the end of Grand Avenue in Oroville. Brookman's wife, J'lynne Stothers, was a passenger in the front seat and their two infants - Arianna, 17 months; Ava, 7 months; and Smothers' autistic brother, Matthew Stothers, age 32 – were passengers in the rear of the quad cab truck.

Ramsey said Brookman was drinking numerous beers throughout the day and had been told multiple times not to drive. A blood test taken two hours after the crash showed his blood-alcohol level to be

California Highway Patrol's Multidisciplinary Accident Investigation Team (MAIT) investigated the incident. The MAIT team was able to determine through the truck's internal "black box" computer that Brookman was driving at over 80 mph just before the road ended at the canal. The truck launched over the canal's levee into the waters below. The children were strapped in their car seats in the rear seat with Matthew Stothers between them.

Brookman and his wife got out of the truck and swam to shore. Ramsey said Matthew was also able to get out of the truck but struggled to swim. Family members said Matthew did not know how to swim and was deathly afraid of water. A witness saw Matthew treading water next to Brookman. The witness, who was standing on a levee overlooking the water, told Brookman to help Matthew, but Brookman refused. The witness said he then saw Matthew struggle and sink below the water's surface. Ramsey said the evidence showed Brookman also never made any attempt to save Arianna or Ava.

Butte County Search and Rescue later recovered the bodies of Matthew, Arianna, and Ava from the canal waters.

Ramsey said the courtroom was filled with family and members of the law enforcement community. Matthew's sisters, aunts to Arianna and Ava, read victim impact statements in court. They described Matthew as the "type of person that would light up the room." They shared stories of his goofiness and his love for his family. The family described the innocence of Arianna and Ava and their disappointment that the girls never got a chance at life.

Ramsey said Brookman read a statement to the judge but showed no emotion. After the family spoke, the assigned prosecutor, Ashley Furry, provided a statement to the court outlining Brookman's lack of remorse. Brookman interrupted her at one point and yelled "were you there, b***h!"

Furry continued that "Brookman lacks insight, empathy, and accountability. He cannot be fixed. The only person who has ever mattered to him - is himself. The only way to protect the community and prevent him from committing more atrocious acts is to incapacitate him."

Before ultimately handing down the sentence, Judge Caraway told Brookman, "I share Ms. Furry and the family's concern that you don't have remorse. That is on you."

Brookman will be housed in the Butte County Jail until he is transported to the California Department of Corrections to begin serving his life sentence.

Farm Bureau President Praises Signing of Ocean Shipping Reform Act

California Farm Bureau News Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - California Farm Bureau President Jamie Johansson on Thursday, June 16, applauded President Joe Biden for signing the bipartisan Ocean Shipping Reform Act into law.

Passed by the House of Representatives on Monday by a vote of 369-42, the measure seeks to address export backlogs and supply chain disruptions that have severely impacted agriculture.

"These disruptions have severely impacted the lives and livelihoods of our farmers and ranchers. Last year, port congestion cost California farm producers $2.1 billion in lost export income between May and September alone, and port problems continue.

"It is the California Farm Bureau's hope that the enactment of this bipartisan legislation reinstates fair trade practices for our farm producers. We look forward to quick action in coming weeks that brings greater transparency to fee charges and, in the coming year, redefines what it means for an ocean shipper to decline an agricultural shipment. We urge the Federal Maritime Commission to employ tools under this act to ensure fair practices by ocean carriers and accelerated shipping for California's vast array of agricultural products.

Former Church Administrator Arrested in Oklahoma, Charged with Fraud and Identity Theft

United States Attorney's Office News Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - An indictment was unsealed following the arrest of Chanell Easton, 36, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. On May 19, 2022, a federal grand jury in Sacramento returned an indictment, charging Easton with 22 counts of wire fraud and two counts of aggravated identity theft for a scheme to embezzle church funds, U.S. Attorney Phillip A. Talbert announced.

According to court documents, from June 2013 to February 2018, Easton worked as an administrator at a church in Yuba City. During her employment, Easton stole over $360,000 from the church, including from its food pantry and youth ministry, during a years-long embezzlement scheme. Without the church's knowledge or authorization. Easton opened five business credit card accounts in the church's name. Easton used these five credit cards, as well as a credit card used by the church's youth pastor, to make personal purchases including at a hair salon, retail stores, online retailers, a vacation rental service, and to buy concert tickets—and then paid off the resulting balance with the church's money. Easton also transferred money directly from the church's bank accounts to her own personal account, paid down the balance of her own personal credit card, and paid her cellphone provider for her personal bills and for new phones.

According to the indictment, Easton also stole money from the church by writing checks to others for personal expenses and by writing checks to herself, on which she forged the signatures of the church's treasurer or the head volunteer of the church's food pantry.

This case is the product of an investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorneys Elliot C. Wong and Christopher S. Hales are prosecuting the case.

If convicted, Easton faces a maximum statutory penalty of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine for each count of wire fraud, and a mandatory two-year sentence on each count of aggravated identity theft. Any sentence, however, would be determined at the discretion of the court after consideration of any applicable statutory factors and the Federal Sentencing Guidelines, which take into account a number of variables. The charges are only allegations; the defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Plumas National Forest Recreation Conditions Varied This Weekend

Plumas National Forest News Release

QUINCY, CA (MPG) - After a week that included hot weather, widespread rain and thunderstorms, landslides and gusty winds, area residents and visitors planning to recreate on the Plumas National Forest this weekend are encouraged to plan their trip and be prepared for changing conditions.

While last weekend's storm only produced three lightning strikes on the Plumas National Forest – all near Belden, widespread rain with heavier amounts in some locations caused landslides in some of the recent fire areas. Forest employees are still assessing slide locations and storm impacts this week.

Some areas of the Plumas National Forest were estimated to have received more than an inch of rain in an hour. There has not been any significant damage to Plumas National Forest facilities or infrastructure as a result of the storm, but assessments are continuing. Priority areas being checked include the 6M40 OHV trail to Tobin Ridge, the Ben Lomond Trail, Pacific Crest Trail up Chips and Forest Road 26N26.

The Feather River received significant sediment, logs and debris. Opapee Creek and Murphy's Creek had true debris flows with a slurry transporting boulders and logs resulting in damage to State Highway 70.

On Sunday, June 12, slides in the Dixie Fire area included Highway 70, closing the highway between the Greenville Wye and Jarbo Gap.

Recreation sites in the Feather River Canyon, including Gansner Bar, Hallsted, North Fork and Queen Lily Campgrounds are still open for those with reservations.

However, the sites can only be accessed heading west on Highway 70, down the canyon from Quincy. Visitors will need to speak with California Highway Patrol or CalTrans representatives at the road closure to travel to the recreation sites.

Feather River Canyon were damaged in the storm. Campers should maintain awareness of the forecast and river conditions in case heavy storms trigger additional landslides.

None of the four campgrounds in the

All recreation sites at Little Grass Valley Recreation Area are open for the season.

Lake levels are low at some reservoirs and some boat launches may not have courtesy docks available for boaters. Boat docks are in the water at Frenchman Boat Launch, Lost Cove Boat Launch at Antelope Lake and Sandy Point Boat Launch at Bucks Lake. Repairs are in progress for boat docks at Gold Lake Boat Launch and Honker Cove Boat Launch at Lake Davis.

Fuel conditions also remain unseasonably dry. While there are not fire restrictions in place yet, care should be taken with anything that can spark a wildfire.

Campfires should never be left unattended and should be dead-out and cold to the touch before leaving. Trailer chains should be secured and not dragging, and spark arresters should be functioning properly on motorized equipment, including off-highway vehicles, generators and chainsaws.

Hot temperatures and widespread gusty winds are forecasted over the Plumas National Forest, particularly at lower elevations and over the eastern side of the forest this Thursday into Saturday. Temperatures are expected to be cooler Saturday with a chance of thunderstorms, before starting to warm up again Sunday.

Those recreating in the forest, whether it is a day hike, fishing trip, camping out, backpack adventure or other activity, are encouraged to be prepared for changing conditions, have the right gear for the trip, and plenty of water and other supplies.

If recreating in an area impacted by wildfire, watch for hazards including trees that can fall with no notice, even when green, unstable soils and potential slides. These hazards increase during and following rainstorms. If in these areas and the weather is changing, move to safer ground and avoid low-lying areas.

Higher elevations still have some snow, and trail and road conditions may still be muddy in some places.

Several forest recreation sites are also seeing an increase in bear activity. Area residents and visitors should ensure that food is secured and that there are not food items or smells that can attract bears to a campsite in search of food.

For more information on the Plumas National Forest, visit www.fs.usda.gov/plumas, follow the forest on Twitter @ USFSPlumas or on Facebook at www.facebook.com/USFSPlumas.

MOSQUITOES ACCUMULATING IN TOWN AREAS

TOWN SPRAYING SET TO BEGIN

When mosquitoes move into town areas, it is important to reduce their numbers and lower mosquito-borne disease risk. Public health insecticides formulated for application in urban and residential environments undergo rigorous safety testing before they are approved for use. For the 2022 season, the District will be using a permethrin product applied at an ultra low volume rate of 0.29 ounces per acre. All applications are predicated on mosquito abundance, disease activity and favorable weather conditions. Although these materials pose a low risk to human health, some people may prefer to avoid or minimize exposure by staying indoors, keeping their windows closed and turning off their window mounted air conditioners, evaporative coolers and whole house fans when spraying is taking place in the immediate area. You can obtain additional information about spray operations by calling the District office at 674-5456 ext. 0 between the hours of 7 AM to 3:30 PM, Monday thru Friday or by viewing our website at www.sutteryubamvcd.org. Residents can also sign-up for email spray notifications by visiting the District's website.

SCHEDULE

Beginning on Thursday, June 30, 2022 and continuing weekly, fogging routes will begin as early as 3:30 AM and continue until 6:30 AM in Olivehurst, Linda, Plumas Lake, Wheatland, East Marysville, Live Oak, Tierra Buena, Yuba City (Hillcrest area) and Sutter. Meridian and Robbins will be fogged on Tuesday evenings. Additional town areas and nights may be added if mosquito-borne disease activity becomes elevated. The program generally ends in mid-September, when mosquito abundance declines.
