Yuba Water Partners with Scripps Institution of Oceanography

by John Mistler

Marysville, Ca.

The Yuba Water Agency is partnering with U.C. San Diego Scripps Institution of Oceanography's Center for Western Weather and Water Extremes on atmospheric river research specific to the Yuba River watershed. This research will give data that Yuba Water needs to change the way they operate New Bullards Bar Dam and Reservoir (the 5th tallest dam in the United States), to maximize the use of the existing infrastructure and significantly reduce flood risk, with potential water supply benefits as well. The research is looking at both the Yuba and Feather river watersheds, as Bullards and Oroville dams are operated in a coordinated way to minimize impacts downstream.

Other partners in this project are CA Department of Water Resources (which operates Oroville Dam), the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and the National Weather Service California Nevada River Forecast Center.

On Thursday, December 12th Scripps scientists launched the first of many weather balloons that will reach a height of 80,000 ft to record moisture, temperature and wind speed. "This data will be helpful in updating the procedures for flood control, forecast information and the flexibility of using the planned secondary spillway." Discussed by John James of Yuba Water Agency and Anna Wilson from Scripps.

Atmospheric rivers are relatively long, narrow regions in the atmosphere – like rivers in the sky – that transport most of the water vapor outside of the tropics. These columns of vapor move with the weather, carrying an amount of water vapor roughly equivalent to the average flow of water at the mouth of the Mississippi River. When the atmospheric rivers make landfall, they often release this water vapor in the form of rain or snow. Sometimes called a Pineapple Express.

Scripps recently released a study that shows atmospheric rivers are responsible for approximately $1 billion in damage annually in western states.

DeDe Cordell, Yuba Water Agency communications manager said, "In Yuba County, we know that financial cost far too personally, having lived through devastating flooding in both 1986 and 1997. Our economy has never recovered."

The California Court of Appeals Has Approved the Joint Motion to Expedite the Measure K Case

The California Appeals Court approved the joint request to expedite the Measure K case. This could still take another 9 months or more.

12/03/2019 Order filed.

The "Joint Motion for Calendar Preference and to Expedite Briefing" is granted; the appeal will be accorded priority pursuant to statutory provisions.

What does this mean?

It means the case will be fast-tracked. The California Court of Appeal is not a fast moving process. Traditional appeals can take up to 18 months or more. Expediting means more like nine months or more. No briefs have been filed yet. We will post the briefs after they are filed.

Meanwhile, Yuba County is collecting on the tax that was ruled as invalid. Total collected so far - over $3 Million

Keep in mind that no new evidence can be submitted. The appeal is basically to make sure that Judge Berrier followed the law, and made the correct ruling: To INVALIDATE MEASURE K.

Welcome to Panda Express

by Lou Binninger

Last Saturday night, Panda Express in Marysville had two street guys welcoming customers at the front door. Another sojourner was snoozing along the east window like a big fish in an aquarium, just inches away from diners woofing down Orange Chicken inside. Under California's Gig Economy law these 'volunteers' should be considered employees of the Chinese fast food outlet.

With 'homeless campers' being shot, stabbed, beaten with blunt objects, overdosing and found floating in the Feather River our communities have become more colorful and culturally diverse than ever before, a Leftist dream come true. Hippies rejoice, this is the back to nature movement you longed for 50-years-ago.

Taxpayer-funded addiction does wonders. This is the ultimate photo-op for smiling and back-slapping 'humanitarian' judges, legislators and local officials. However, small business owners tiring of government oppression, shit on their doorsteps and arguing with reclining vagrants are moving.

Even California's Oracle Corp. just announced it is moving its annual San Francisco (SF) technology convention to Las Vegas. The tech giant signed a three-year agreement to bring its OpenWorld convention to Las Vegas, citing rising hotel rates throughout the Bay Area as well as poor street conditions in SF.

The relocated convention — the third-biggest held in SF in recent years based on room nights — will be a substantial loss to the city. The loss comes to a minimum of 62,000 hotel room nights and a $64 million negative impact. OpenWorld events have been located at the Moscone Center for the past two decades.

The rising cost of hosting events in SF has become an increasing concern among hospitality professionals. The average hotel rate in the metro area was nearly $264 a night in October, according to data from hotel analyst STR. According to Cheaphotels.org, Las Vegas is one of the most affordable cities for hotels, with rates averaging about $69 a night.

Another factor was the SF street drama. There were more than 30,000 car break-ins in 2018. Human waste, used needles and SF's 'finest' leaning and lying around, drooling and vomiting was finally a deal breaker.

Meanwhile in other communities, a Los Angeles (LA) family visiting Seattle was stuck by a 23-year-old female transient driving high on meth as they exited their hotel. Two siblings died and the father injured. The driver, of course, fled on foot and

Pensions and Benefits Snuff Schools

by Lou Binninger

There have been hundreds of local tax increases proposed throughout California to deal with one problem – government employee pension debt. This debt was never authorized by voters but was incurred by politicians desiring the contributions and voting clout of employee unions.

As a former local government administrator said privately last weekend, "Government takes very good care of its own." Its 'own' does not include the taxpayer.

Of course, in no ballot argument and rarely even in news articles will you read that tax hikes or bonds are for pension debt. The voter is routinely deceived by government bureaucrats and their Deep State mouthpiece, the mainstream media.

School districts have joined the flurry to tap the taxpayer by passing school bonds, many of them. You may be thinking "Heh, we just passed some school bonds or we're still paying off those bonds on our property tax bill!" Good memory.

Just one bond isn't enough. The upcoming bond blitz will include two, three or more bond measures on the ballot. If passed, the taxpayers' will pay their 'fair share' with their property taxes. The problem is that most property owners won't see what hit them. Their tax bill is hidden in their mortgage payment.

Every CA school bond is for pensions and benefits. Pension obligations (and pay increases) are devouring more and more of school budgets. Employee costs in the San Diego Unified School district recently exceeded the entire district school budget. But not one bond measure will tell you that and neither will the media.

California's State Auditor recently concluded that the Sacramento City Unified School District (SCUSD) with 41,000 students and 2,200 teachers is facing insolvency next year.

Cyber Monday not Black Friday?

Black Friday stores are not so well lit lately. Thank cyber Monday for that. Another American tradition may be fading into history as online shopping in slippers lures shoppers away from strip malls and to stay home and eat turkey. Consumers spent 11.3 billion Thanksgiving and Black Friday online however so the tradition may be still there but instead of venturing out, shoppers are just staying home munching on turkey getting their keyboards greasy. In a new twist about 2.9 billion of the online shopping came from the trusty mobile platforms, in other words phones.

A few diehards did hit the malls driving up mall sales 4% but much of that I suspect is just higher prices and not necessarily an increase in actual units sold. Adobe Systems meanwhile projects Cyber Monday sales north of nine billion. Lots of greasy keyboards on Monday as well.

Is the mall rat dead with four feet up, caught once and for all in the online shopping roach motel?

We will see in years henceforth but my guess is eventually yes.

Meanwhile likely not much shopping done by a group of New York City construction workers in the solar industry who happened to follow Representative upstart Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (AOC) down another one of her rat holes. They likely couldn't afford to shop anywhere. The workers, after being convinced to unionize by AOC, witnessed something unexpected happen. The company Bright Power fired them all, saying among other enlightenments: "it makes business sense to return to a fully sub-contracted solar installations market".

Welcome to free markets boys and girls. This is still America and private companies still have the right to turn a profit and do what is necessary to accomplish that task. Nice going AOC and welcome to the real world X-Bright Power employees now joining the lines at the unemployment office. That union idea sounded good at the time. Now its coal for Christmas. No harm no foul for AOC. She tweeted a nasty response then retreated to her swank condominium to shop online. So goes the rumor anyhow.

The Federal Reserve also wants to get into the game of lengthening unemployment lines. They are looking for a new inflation target for the U.S. economy. Already setting the inflation rate at 2%, where it's been since 2012, this rate will erode your paychecks purchasing power 18% every ten years. Yikes.

And they want to make it worse?

Yes they do. Failing to hit the 2% target in recent years consistently, they are debating jacking the target higher to make up for lost ground. How would they go about raising inflation? Do what they always do: print more money and firehose it into the system. Unfortunately the hose points mostly into the banking lobby doorways. Oh, and Wall Street gets drenched as well. After all, the Feds ain't so good at hitting targets now are they?

Great stuff, a great financial commentary newsletter, made a hilarious observation about the exercise bike company Peloton. You know the one. They have the most prominent exercise bike ad on the television today. Picture a healthy young stud or muffin riding to a TV screen with an interactive coach via the internet egging them on. You've seen the ads. The bike is not cheap compared to what I paid for my Schwinn sting ray in the 60's. Try 800% higher. Somewhere in there. You do the math. Anyway Great Stuff notes that to buy a Peloton, seeing the ad you apparently also have to have a big room with a large picture window. Like I said, you've seen the ad right?

The Democrats are up to their usual shenanigans in response to the GOP's usual shenanigans. Plowing forward with impeachment hearings, it's no wonder the U.S. government is about to hit the debt ceiling again. What's the debt ceiling? Apparently it doesn't matter anyway so we're told so never mind.

Now for something new and entirely different. The Dems are also trying to raise taxes again. This time they've targeted social security. No, not the fund itself but the people that pay into it. They are proposing to raise the cap on the income exclusion. Basically once you make so much in income, the amount over a certain number is no longer subject to social security taxes. Can't have that can we?

Actually since the trust fund called Social Security had little trust in its management over the years (they spent it all and some), you have to get more money somewhere. So let's tax the rich. Like I said, time for something new and entirely different.

FISHIN' TALK

by Boots Johnson

Dan "Boots" Johnson has fished and hunted in California for more than 75 years. Anyone with questions or comments can email him at boots3@syix.com

Bullard's Bar Reservoir is slow at this time, very slow due to the kokanee done for the season. A few bass are being caught, but nothing spectacular.

The trout bite at Collins Lake has slowed some but fish can still be taken either on the bank or from a boat.

A few nice rainbow trout have been taken at Englebright Reservoir. Best bet is to troll in the top 15 feet of water around the houseboats or near the dam.

Folsom Lake has begun to fill up but even with a couple trout plants the last couple of weeks it is still slow going here.

Salmon fishing has closed on the Feather River above the Live Oak Diversion Dam and the salmon fishing below Live Oak is closed December 16th. As usual, a few striped bass have been caught below Yuba City.

Lake Davis is basically free of ice at this time but colder weather can change this on a daily basis. Not much action here.

We advise all to stay away from Black Butte Reservoir due to low water levels and the wind at this time. Not only are the fish not cooperation but it is downright miserable weather wise and dangerous on the water.

Closing thought: "The best place this time of year for us old folks is right next to the fireplace."

was found in an alcove changing clothes. While being arrested, she was singing, dancing and blaming the police. Yep, she just needed a tiny house.

Last month, LA Police shot and killed a transient who chased an officer into the street with a foot-long machete. This ‘poor fellow’ robbed an auto parts store at knifepoint, then car-jacked a vehicle from a fast food drive-thru and clipped two police cars. People say the guy was ‘troubled.’

Also in LA, an 11-year-old was walking home from a soccer game in Westchester when a male transient grabbed him by the neck and said, “You’re not going to see your parents after I kill you.” The child escaped. His father said when the suspect was arrested that he resisted and had to be taken away by ambulance. This is just another day for an 11-year-old in a city run by kooks.

In Santa Rosa, out for a walk behind a high school, a woman was attacked by dogs living at a homeless camp. Bitten and dragged, the lady suffered tendon, bone and nerve damage resulting in emergency surgery and a three-day hospital stay. Camps with aggressive dogs now rule many California communities.

Yuba-Sutter residents report similar attacks while walking the levees or trying to approach the rivers.

A male transient in North Sacramento threatened to kill a man with a hatchet, and when police officers made contact, the suspect threw a large rock at one officer, injuring him, and fled. When found, he was uncooperative even when ‘tased.’ The transient’s dog then began biting one of the officers, forcing him to kill the dog.

Earlier that same day in downtown Sacramento, a transient punched a woman in the face in an attempt to take her purse. A citizen intervened, detaining the suspect until police arrived. The day before, a man was shot and killed at a homeless camp in the backyard of a residence in the suburb of Rancho Cordova.

The liberal answer is more and more money for shit patrols, needle retrieval, nonsense, and bigger government. This is the utopia, or haven’t you noticed?

Food Access

Holiday Food Distribution

During this month’s Food Access Saturday on December 14th, holiday dinner fixings were included along with the regular bags of food. Every family deserves to share a holiday meal together...this food helped our neighbors, who are facing hard times, enjoy a meal during the holiday.

The program was formed two years ago for working individuals who need help putting food on their table, but are unable to pick up food at local food distributions during the workweek.

The program has grown to encompass a larger population; welcoming others to the table, including anyone who needs food but is unable to make it to the food distributions Monday through Friday. Over 6100 bags of food, including fresh fruit and produce, have been given to more than 2800 people in need. United Way partner agency, Interfaith Food Ministry, and the Food Bank of Nevada County provides food at five locations throughout this month.

United Way of Nevada County strives to assure individuals and families in Nevada County are able to meet their basic need for food, emergency shelter and access to health care. Interfaith Food Ministry works to reduce food insecurity in Western Nevada County. They feed the hungry, helping to sustain good health and human dignity. The distributions take place at 440 Henderson Street, in Grass Valley, from 10am-noon on the 2nd Saturday of each month. For more information contact United Way at 274-8111 or admin@uwnnc.org.

Food and Farm News

Vote nears on agricultural immigration bill

With Congress poised to vote on immigration legislation affecting agricultural employees, the president of the California Farm Bureau Federation says the bill would benefit farmers, their employees and rural communities. CFBF President Jamie Johansson urges approval of the Farm Workforce Modernization Act, which he says would improve agricultural visa programs and accommodate immigrant agricultural employees already in the United States.

Christmas tree farmers report strong sales

Their season got off to a soggy start, but farmers who operate choose-and-cut Christmas tree farms say sales remain brisk. Farmers say their customers have taken advantage of breaks in the rain or braved soggy weather to maintain the tradition of a fresh-cut Christmas tree. Reports of a nationwide tree shortage may also have prompted shoppers, but that relates more to farms that produce trees for wholesale rather than choose-and-cut operations.

Three earn honors for Farm Bureau service

A farmer who has served on the San Benito County Farm Bureau board for more than 70 years has been honored for distinguished service by the California Farm Bureau Federation. Ninety-four-year-old Al Bonturi of Hollister received the award at the CFBF Annual Meeting. The organization also presented service awards to retired CFBF Administrator Rich Matteis and retired San Diego County Farm Bureau executive Eric Larson.

UCCE Offers Citrus Preservation Class in Sutter County

by Sue Mosbacher, UCCE Master Food Preserver Program Coordinator, Central Sierra

I am pleased to offer a citrus preservation class to the community in Sutter County: Wednesday, January 22 from 1 – 4pm, at the Sutter-Yuba County UC Cooperative Extension Office, 142A Garden Highway, Yuba City.

Join UC Master Food Preservers as they step through canning, dehydrating and freezing as methods of preserving citrus to use throughout the year in your family's meals. Learn how to make citrus-based marmalade and jelly, and how to can citrus sections. See how you can use almost all parts of citrus by making candied citrus peel, preserved peels, citrus salt, powdered citrus peel, and edible potpourri. Get tips and tricks to make your frozen citrus maintain top quality in the freezer. Throughout the class you'll receive suggestions on how to incorporate preserved citrus in meals. You'll leave with lots of recipes and ideas to try on your own at home.

The class is $15. Pre-registration is required at <http://ucanr.edu/citrus-jan22>. Contact Robin Cleveland at rk-cleveland@ucanr.edu or 530-621-5528 for more information.

THE Brownsville Bailiwick & Beyond

We hope you really enjoyed Christmas in the Foothills. All of the businesses put out an effort to have something special to help you enjoy the season. Shopping locally helps us all as these small businesses can't compete with the box stores down town, but they do have unique and one of a kind items. Many second hand items make great gifts. You put a "basket" together with related items. Get a good glass pie plate from the thrift store, buy a secondhand cookbook, and put a new utensil in the package. Children's books make good gifts, and we can always find useful items at the hardware store.

Now is the time to look around and enjoy all of the work you have gotten done so far this month. Each family has unique customs and traditions; to each his own. Enjoy what you can as you get ready for the holiday. Some decorate the tree, some send out cards, some bake cookies. No one can do it all, pick and choose and enjoy.

School will be out for the Christmas break from December 23 until January 6. The excited little munchkins will be out and about. Keep an eye out for them as they have been known to not pay attention to traffic. We wish them all a wonderful break from school and a Christmas filled with surprises..

Look Back in Time – In 1927 Charles Adams' car went down the road with a large Christmas tree on the running board (I remember recognizing who went down the road because I recognized their car).

Hope to see you in Brownsville soon.

$150,000 Awarded to Local Center to Support Medication Assisted Treatment Efforts

Harmony Health Clinic and Family Resource Center working to increase treatment and recovery service activities for people with substance use and opioid use disorders

Sutter and Yuba Counties –

Harmony Health Medical Clinic and Family Resource Center is pleased to announce an award from The Center at Sierra Health Foundation for $150,000 to support patients enrolled in their Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT) program. The Center at Sierra Health Foundation through the MAT Access Points Project has distributed more than $16.4 million awarded to 120 organizations at more than 270 sites/access points throughout California. This funding will ensure that the delivery of MAT facilitates positive treatment outcomes, safe management of care transitions and long-term recovery for people with opioid and other substance use disorders.

Harmony Health funding will support three case manager positions, one at each of Harmony Health's sites. Harmony Health has five providers who have obtained the DATA waiver and in the past year, has assisted about 50 patients with Opioid Use Disorder transition from narcotics to Suboxone.

"We are embracing the needs of patients with substance use disorder as another opportunity to serve the underserved patients in Yuba and Sutter Counties," said Rachel Farrell, CEO of Harmony Health.

In addition to MAT, Harmony Health offers pain management treatment modalities including Cognitive Behavior Therapy, Living Well (substance use support group) and neurofeedback treatments as well as complementary medicine including meditation class, acupuncture and chiropractic services.

"Expanding MAT access points is a critical step forward in California's effort to address the opioid epidemic taking place across our great state," said Chet P. Hewitt, president and CEO of The Center at Sierra Health Foundation, which manages the MAT Access Points Project. "A critical component of our effort is building the capacity of partners who have the commitment and relationships required to reach people and families in communities that are disproportionately experiencing poor access to MAT substance use disorder treatment and high opioid-related mortality rates."

MAT Access Points Project is funded through the Department of Health Care Services California MAT Expansion Project and administered by The Center at Sierra Health Foundation.

CRITIC'S CORNER

Midway

Starring: Ed Skrein, Patrick Wilson, and Woody Harrelson. Rated: PG-13. Runtime 2 hrs, 18 min

A telling of the events that lead up to the battle that turned the tide of the war in the Pacific during World War II. From a glimpse at the policies that started the war to the tactics that were employed during battles that lead to defeat and the tides of fate that brought victory. The bravery of the combatants on both sides shines through to bring understanding of their plight and show how alike they are in sharing the horrors of war.

Midway, earns four out of five, Torpedo Monkeys. The story is laid out in a succinct Style that clearly shows events as they happened. The acting is excellent and very well performed. The cinematography relies heavily on computer generated graphics that are noticeable but not too distracting. This is an entertaining movie that will keep you engaged until the very end. Certainly worth a look see on the big screen.

While watching this I couldn't help but think of how great a loss each and every one of their lives were. What great things they could have accomplished if their efforts were not turned to destruction and death had not taken them. Thinking of how easy it is to forget the value of the individual in the scape of the fiery carnage on the sea.

Pensions and Benefits Snuff Schools

City Board members learned that “91 cents of every dollar is spent on salary and benefits,” with only 9 cents going to programs. The SCUSD Board acknowledged that the Sacramento County Office of Education had warned the District for 14 years that their practices were unsustainable.

After the SCUSD ended the 2017-18 fiscal year with an $11 million deficit and just days after Superintendent Jorge Aguilar submitted the 2018-19 budget projecting another $22 million deficit (which was rejected by the county), Aguilar and seven other administrators spent more than $35,000 to attend a six-day conference at the Harvard Business School. This is typical going-broke-spending in government.

Yuba College is asking voters to approve another $228.4 million bond that will cost taxpayers $412 million. Taxpayer's still owe $190 million on bonds approved in 2006.

The Yuba College Board has buried the district in debt in the past. The Yolo County Daily Democrat reported, “The ‘ugly circumstance’ began in April 2011, explained Chancellor Douglas Houston, when the district board sold $4.6 million in bonds under Measure J, approved by the voters in 2006.”

“Because they were a lesser-known form of general obligation bonds called capital appreciation bonds that $4.6 million will result in an eventual $54.2 million interest payment — costing the district nearly $59 million to pay down.”

“In the case of the Yuba Community College District, no payments on the $4.6 million will be made until 2038, with final payments due in 2048, 2049 and 2050. The Yuba College district’s $4.6 million in capital appreciation bonds will ultimately cost it about $12 for every $1 borrowed,” the Daily Democrat reported.

Houston and the Yuba College Board that hired him worked to reduce the damage done to the district by previous financial mismanagement. In the end, taxpayers still pay for all the financial misdeeds.

Opponents of the current bond proposal are wondering why the college is leasing administration offices for $310,000 annually on Plumas Street in Yuba City and why new buildings need to be added if enrollment is stagnant or decreasing. Others are asking why we need to borrow money for maintenance work and whether the district is top heavy with administrators. As usual with government, transparency is not its strength.

Mathews Disavows Attacks

I'm Charlie Mathews and I am running for the Yuba Water Agency Board. I disavow any and all personal attacks, by anyone, on my opponent. Campaigns must be run on ideas and issues. Mr. Nicoletti and I have a long and friendly relationship and neither of us would stoop to such vial and hateful rhetoric. We disagree on many issues but never would resort to, or condone, personal attacks.

It Must Be Raindrops

by Richard Crist, OMD

Raindrops is a 1961 hit by Dee Clark that's descriptive of what's being said recently from Billionaires Cooperman, Gates, and Bloomberg. The 607 billionaires that makeup this Class in the United States are mainly comprised of WORMs (Wealthy Old Rich Males), and the hypocrisy of their crying about the programs that Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders are proposing needs to be questioned.

These WORMs seem scared that one of them might be elected President, those programs will get enacted, and they will have to pay for them. As they should, because these "Social Programs" will help reduce the wealth gap by providing needed help so that working/nonworking class families will be able to live sustainable lives. Like back in the 1950's. Those were the peoples "The Golden Years," which took the WORMs 50-years and billions of dollars of corrupting the government and the media to change it back for themselves; and it could all be coming to an end.

What's really causing raindrops is the 2% wealth tax. WORMs can remember back to 1916 when their predecessor WORMs promoted the 2% income tax to pay for the "National Debt," which hadn't been created yet by the newly created Federal Reserve Bank that the WORMs got in 1913 by supporting Wilson for President. These WORMs know that what worked for them back then could work again, but this time it would work against them.

As a side note, this shows you who writes the history books. Woodrow Wilson created the FED, income tax, and got us into WWI; and he's been portrayed to have been an excellent president. Those three things were very good and profitable for the rich, but they were disastrous for the working/nonworking class. It was the beginning of enslavement to the future National Debt, and the loss of the "Gold Standard" in 1933 and 1971, made that debt impossible to pay back. Locking the people into servitude, forever. The WORMs profit from war, get bailouts, and the people pay.

The Social Programs that Warren and Sanders are proposing are not a Right vs. Left battle, as these WORMs would like everyone to believe. This is a "Class Battle For Power," one between the WORMs (super rich 1%) with their minions (rich 19%) against all of you, no matter who you are. The majority of wealth, who owns practically everything against the majority of people, who when united own the vote, the WORMs worse fear.

If you will sit down and think about what has been happening to you politically, you will discover that all of you have been pitted against each other on issues that don't effect you economically. This is so you won't realize what's really happening with deregulation, tariffs, foreign policy, global warming, and the damage to your environment. Things that affect you economically, and the things that keep WORMs rich. It also totally neutralizes your power to rise up against them. WORMs are smart.

What about the other side of the "Greatest Wall Street Economy In History" that their having, and things your being distracted from? Like your cost of living (rent, food, utilities, bills), your menial job(s), low wages, no job security; the cost of education and health-care. What about the rising homeless problem and the people who are working and still can't make ends-meet? Do you see WORMs crying about these issues? Issues that can be addressed with Social Programs paid for by WORMs, as they should be.

There never seems to be enough money to address your problems that of the working and non-working class. For government to make ends-meet Social Programs are often cut to offset tax cuts for the wealthy, like what's happening now. Where does all that wealth go that's being generated by the great Wall Street economy?

They may be crying on the outside, but those WORMs are smiling on the inside. What's that called besides "they're happy worms?" (Hint: hy _ _ _ _ _cy)

THINK About It!

By Charlie McNiff

The following are tidbits from three news sources, in part, paint interesting pictures of impeachment.

Impeachment has blown up in the faces of Democrats, and it's their own Fault by Eddie Scarry, Washington Examiner, December 12, 2019.

Rick Wilson, the anti-Trump political consultant most famous for his 2016 meltdown, believes Democrats have really screwed up their freak show of an impeachment. He's right about that, but not for the reasons he gives.

Wilson wrote this week in a column for the Daily Beast that Democrats are “blowing” impeachment because they don't “fight.” He is specifically unhappy that they took a moment to reach an agreement on the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, which, in addition to being good for American workers, may have the added benefit of being politically good for President Trump.

To start, the USMCA deal was as good for Democrats as it was for everyone else. Labor unions, which usually support Democrats, got everything they wanted. And second, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi would rightly take issue with the notion that House Democrats don't know how to fight. Having initiated the most drastic measure constitutionally possible against a sitting president of the U.S., based on what he said in a phone call, she knows how to fight.

If that's not fighting, then Rick Wilson isn't bald.

The real issue, as the polls show, is that impeachment has not at all gone the way Democrats hoped. Support for it in swing states has fallen since the hearings last month, and it has done nothing to help the flailing cast of Democrats running for president.

But it's not as if Democrats slipped on a banana peel while dribbling toward a slam dunk. This impeachment effort was always going to be a sticky mess for them, and a big reason they're in it is precisely because of hysterics from people such as Wilson.

The push for impeachment started among Democrats and liberals in the news media literally on Inauguration Day, and it hasn't quit since then. Democrats took the House and thought they'd have their chance with the Mueller report, but then that turned up nothing. Then September came around, and with the party's presidential candidates embarrassing themselves, and with the Wilsons of the media calling Trump the Antichrist, Pelosi knew she needed to do something fast.

Unfortunately for her and the rest of the Democrats, the issue they picked for impeachment was stupid. It's also proving nearly impossible to explain to the average voter without a flowchart, timeline, and an intermission.

The “Trump called for Ukraine to interfere in our election” slogan is ridiculous on a bumper sticker, and it also raises a million questions, none of which have answers that are good for Democrats.

Why Ukraine? Because it appears Joe Biden and his adult son were involved in some corrupt business there. Anything else? Yeah, Ukraine also directly influenced the 2016 election for the purpose of hurting Trump's campaign. Its government is basically responsible for landing Trump's former campaign manager, Paul Manafort, in prison.

If Democrats, with a big assist from people such as Wilson, hadn't been so eager to impeach, we wouldn't be here right now. But “shoulda, coulda, woulda.”

Rick Wilson has no one to be mad at but himself.

CNN's Toobin Concedes Trump Win in 2020

by Madison Dibble, CNN, December 12, 2019.

CNN legal analyst Jeffrey Toobin acknowledged that President Trump is landing some victories as the impeachment process continues in the House.

On Thursday, the House Judiciary Committee debated the two articles of impeachment filed against Trump. House Democrats believe Trump abused his power and obstructed justice in connection to his phone call with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy.

During a recess, Toobin offered his analysis on the situation and revealed that Trump had several wins throughout the hearing. He noted that Republicans on the committee had successfully pivoted the conversation away from impeachment and toward Trump's defense, especially when it came to discussing Hunter Biden and possible corruption with Burisma Holdings.

“What struck me about this hearing was how Donald Trump, in a way, has already won,” said Toobin. “How much did we hear about Hunter Biden? Over and over again, about Hunter Biden. That's what the Republicans are talking about constantly.”

He added, “There are questions about Hunter Biden's behavior, and so, mean, this incredible shift of emphasis.”

Toobin claimed it would be difficult for journalists to focus on impeachment while covering the topics being discussed by Republicans. He explained, “I just don't know what our responsibility is as journalists because it's not the point, but this is the news. And this is what's there.”

During the phone call that is now the cornerstone for impeachment, Trump asked Zelenskyy to look into Biden's high-paying board position at Burisma. Republicans have claimed he was justified in doing so because of Biden's controversial past.

Why Steele and Ohrs never should have become DOJ sources

By John Solomon — 08/15/19

The views expressed by contributors are their own and not the view of The Hill

One of the inevitable outcomes of the Russia case will be that the Department of Justice (DOJ) almost certainly will need internal reforms.

The first reform is the most obvious, given the unraveling of the Russia collusion narrative: a new set of rules governing when the FBI can investigate or spy on a First Amendment-protected political campaign during an election.

The FBI never should have been allowed to sustain a counterintelligence investigation into Donald Trump's campaign based on hearsay from Australian diplomat Alexander Downer, who helped to arrange a $25 million Australian government donation to the Clinton Foundation, and on a “minimally” verified dossier written by British spy Christopher Steele, who was working on the Hillary Clinton opposition-research team.

The second reform may be less visible but becomes painfully obvious, thanks to a series of internal DOJ investigative memos released this month that expose glaring issues with the handling, vetting and weighting of “confidential human sources.” That's a fancy term for people — sometimes called “snitches” or informants, in street vernacular — who secretly provide evidence to law enforcement.

Farm Bureau President Pledges Sustained Advocacy for Agriculture

In welcoming Farm Bureau members to the first meeting of the second century of the California Farm Bureau Federation, CFBF President Jamie Johansson said the organization would continue to advocate on behalf of science, improved state and federal policies, and unity in agriculture. Johansson spoke today during the 101st CFBF Annual Meeting in Monterey.

Noting the recent 75th anniversary of the D-Day invasion that led to the end of World War II, Johansson pointed to the crucial role farmers and ranchers had played in the immediate aftermath of the war.

“When it came time to rebuild the world, re-establish stability, agriculture was where they turned,” he said, adding that scientific and technological advancements had made that possible.

“We have succeeded because agriculture has defended the change science has brought, and adopted it and adapted to it, in the last 75 years,” he said. “The challenge before Farm Bureau now is defending the science on our farms.”

Johansson noted Gov. Gavin Newsom’s veto this year of Senate Bill 1, which sought to preserve state environmental and labor standards from federal changes initiated by the Trump administration.

“We’re not going to freeze the science,” he said. “We’re going to move our science forward.”

Johansson expressed optimism about a planned House of Representatives vote this week on the Farm Workforce Modernization Act, which would address short- and long-term shortages of agricultural employees, and urged the House to vote before the end of the year on the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement on trade.

He counseled farm groups to work together in assuring production of nutritious food products.

“It’s not about whether you eat an organic carrot or a conventional carrot. It’s about eating the carrot and not the Cheeto,” he said.

Johansson said Farm Bureau would maintain the active advocacy that drew farmers and ranchers to the organization.

“At the core of what makes a California Farm Bureau member is not an individual who accepts the current politics of our state and nation, but an individual who wants to change the politics and the direction of our state and our country,” he said.

Farm Bureau Happy with Immigration Bill

Thursday, December 11, 2019 vote by the House of Representatives to pass agricultural immigration legislation offers hope to farmers and their employees, according to the California Farm Bureau Federation. CFBF President Jamie Johansson said passage of the Farm Workforce Modernization Act of 2019 represents a significant milestone.

“This is a huge step toward addressing problems that have harmed farmers, ranchers and their employees for more than a generation,” Johansson said.

He thanked the bill’s sponsors, Reps. Zoe Lofgren, D-San Jose, and Dan Newhouse, R-Wash., and representatives from both parties who voted to advance the legislation to the Senate.

“Immigration issues are complex, but we thank the members of Congress who saw clearly the need to address current and future workforce needs for agricultural employers and employees,” Johansson said. “We look forward now to working with the Senate to finalize this long-needed set of reforms.”

The Farm Workforce Modernization Act of 2019 would improve agricultural visa programs and accommodate immigrant agricultural employees already in the United States, while enhancing border security.

“Though we’re heartened by the House vote, we realize there’s a lot of work still needed to advance this legislation to the president,” Johansson said. “We will put in that work in order to deal fairly with the existing farm workforce and their immediate families, to make the H-2A guestworker program more valuable and flexible, and to ease the chronic employee shortages that have troubled so many farms and ranches around the country.”

Nine Graduate from Leadership Farm Bureau Program

An intensive, months-long training program concluded for nine Farm Bureau members from California who participated in the Leadership Farm Bureau program. The LFB Class of 2019 graduated during the 101st California Farm Bureau Federation Annual Meeting in Monterey.

The class acquired enhanced background in communication, team-building, advocacy and the Farm Bureau organization during more than 250 hours of instruction in seven sessions. Participants advocated on behalf of Farm Bureau in Sacramento and Washington, D.C., took field-studies trips to Northern California and the Pacific Northwest, and participated in training on agricultural issues, governmental policy and personal development.

Graduates of the 2019 Leadership Farm Bureau class included:

Jocelyn Anderson of Willows, who works on the family farm growing almonds, walnuts, alfalfa and corn, and who serves on the Glenn County Farm Bureau board and the Young Farmers and Ranchers State Committee;

Shane Bickner of Lemoore, crop manager for Woolf Enterprises who grows pistachios, wine-grapes and cotton, and serves on the Kings County Farm Bureau board of directors;

Cody Dodson of Tulelake, who farms his own property, custom-farms for others and serves on the Modoc County Farm Bureau board of directors;

Alana Fowler of Penn Valley, a Nevada County Farm Bureau member who with her husband owns a contract-grazing business and a pasture-raised meat business;

Anna Genasci of Oakdale, Farm News editor for the Stanislaus County Farm Bureau and a member of its board, and safety and compliance coordinator for Stanislaus Farm Supply;

Brian Greathouse of Sutter, who grows walnuts and raises cattle, works as grower service manager for Sacramento Valley Walnut Growers and serves on the Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau board of directors;

Amber McDowell of Walnut Grove, whose family farms pears and alfalfa and runs a pheasant-hunting preserve, and who works as program assistant for the San Joaquin Farm Bureau Federation;

Brian Medeiros of Hanford, who operates a diversified farming operation and serves as vice president of the Kings County Farm Bureau;

Ian Vietti of Visalia, staff agronomist for Innovative Ag Services and past chair of the Tulare County Young Farmers and Ranchers Committee.

TIP Responders – Angels at Tragedies

People don’t make plans to cope with the worst day in their life. The experience is unthinkable.

When something terrible happens, those arriving to assist are usually total strangers—firefighters, law enforcement, ambulance medics, doctors and nurses. People welcome them hoping for a miracle.

The surreal world of traumatized people often has them surrounded by friends but feeling totally alone. They describe it as being under water, in a bubble, going out of their mind, chaotic. The world they knew has been shattered, never to return to what they remember. Emergency responders and good neighbors want to help, but are unsure what to do or say.

Closure is a myth. What people eventually strive and hope for is to get back a sense control and to one day arrive at a “new” normal. The traumatic feeling is partly due to the fact that whatever happened undermined the control, future plans and assumptions they had about their life.

For the last 25 years, Yuba, Sutter and South Butte Counties have benefited from a program that few communities in America have. It’s called the Trauma Intervention Program (TIP). Approximately 300 cities have TIP or a TIP-like program.

Trained citizens are used by the 911 system to come to emergency scenes to provide emotional and practical support to those traumatized by a devastating loss. TIP people are scheduled around the clock, every day of the year, to get to the incident within 20 minutes.

They enter the survivor’s world of loss and chaos to hold onto them emotionally, listen for their immediate needs, and stay with them during the first hours of the crisis. They are a shoulder to lean on, a person there just for them, someone that can get any question answered by emergency personnel.

TIP has been included in the emergency system (fire, law enforcement, ambulance, hospital) and used on more than 11,000 calls here since it began in December 1994. TIP responds to every kind of call where an emergency worker sees a need for them. About 65% of the responses involve a death. House fires, auto or other type accidents, needy senior citizens, attempted suicides, overdoses, medical emergencies and more, fill out the wide array of responses.

Now in its 26th year, TIP is preparing for its 2020 training academy to be conducted in Yuba City on Feb 27, 28, 29, Mar 1, 3, 5, 6, 7 to equip new volunteers.

“TIP is looking for people at least 14-years of age, who have a cool head and warm heart and can follow directions,” says Lou Binninger, director. The academy is a screening process and all students must clear a Department of Justice background check.

Those interested in signing-up for the academy or who have questions can call 530.713.1838. More can be learned about TIP by going to yubasuttetip.org.

TIP is a nonprofit organization funded by contributions. All its services are provided free. Those wanting to support TIP can do so by sending a check to TIP, P.O. Box 645, Marysville, CA 95901 or online at GoFundMe/TIP2020.

California Farm Bureau Welcomes Agreement on USMCA

Rural and urban California will benefit from improved agricultural trade, and the California Farm Bureau Federation said it’s pleased by today’s announcement of a pending vote on the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement. The USMCA will reduce barriers to trade throughout North America.

“We’ve been advocating for months for a vote on the USMCA, so we’re happy the White House and Speaker Pelosi have agreed to move forward,” CFBF President Jamie Johansson said. “As a Californian, Speaker Pelosi recognizes how the USMCA will help most California agricultural products gain improved market access to two top export customers.”

Canada is the No. 2 market for California agricultural exports and Mexico ranks fifth. Combined farm exports to the USMCA partners exceeded $4.3 billion in 2017, according to the California Department of Food and Agriculture.

“California food and agricultural exports to Canada and Mexico support more than 56,000 jobs—and jobs will be added as those exports increase,” Johansson said. “Those jobs will benefit rural and urban areas. Agricultural exports support jobs at ports, marketing companies, food processors, trucking firms and other businesses that prepare and move agricultural products from California farms and ranches to customers in Canada and

He said the USMCA will strengthen science-based procedures to protect human, animal and plant health—known as sanitary and phytosanitary measures—while improving the flow of trade. It also contains specific provisions to benefit exports of processed fruits, milk and dairy products, beef, wine, poultry and eggs, and other products.

“We’re encouraged by prospects for a quick, positive vote on USMCA in the House of Representatives,” Johansson said. “The sooner that happens, the sooner Californians will begin reaping the benefits the agreement will bring.”

Rich Matteis accepting his award during the CFBF Annual Meeting in Monterey.

Rich Matteis

Honored by the California Farm Bureau Federation

Citing his 45 years of advocacy on behalf of California farmers and ranchers, the California Farm Bureau Federation has presented its former administrator, Rich Matteis, with its Distinguished Service Award. Matteis, a resident of Roseville, received the award last night during the 101st CFBF Annual Meeting in Monterey.

Matteis retired in March after serving as CFBF administrator since 2007, overseeing the organization's advocacy and service to members.

"Having grown up on a farm and maintained a love for agriculture throughout his career, Rich channeled his energy into improving the legislative and regulatory landscape for family farmers and ranchers," CFBF President Jamie Johansson said. "He was certainly one of the most respected advocates at the state Capitol, and he guided Farm Bureau successfully during a period of significant change."

Matteis began his career as manager of the Santa Clara and Alameda County Farm Bureaus and as a CFBF field representative. In 1980, he became chief executive officer of the California Grain and Feed Association, which provided management and legislative services for two-dozen other agricultural associations, where he served before rejoining CFBF.

"Rich's distinguished service to Farm Bureau has continued since his retirement," Johansson said, "in his work as a strategic advisor on special projects. His knowledge, experience and expertise continue to benefit California family farmers and ranchers."

The Distinguished Service Award has been presented annually since 1953 to dedicated Farm Bureau members from California. In addition to the award to Matteis, CFBF presented the Distinguished Service Award to longtime San Benito County Farm Bureau board member Al Bonturi.

Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over This Holiday Season National Enforcement Campaign Through New Year's Yuba City, Ca.

The Yuba City Police Department encourages everyone attending holiday parties and gatherings where alcohol may be involved to use a designated sober driver.

This holiday season, from Dec. 13 to New Year's, the Yuba City Police Department will have more officers on patrol looking for drivers suspected of being under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs.

In addition, the Yuba City Police Department will hold a DUI/Driver's License checkpoint on December 20, 2019 from 8:00 pm to 1:00 am at an undisclosed location in the city of Yuba City.

"Unfortunately, this time of year is when we see more people driving impaired," Sgt. Kim Slade said. "There is no excuse for driving after drinking or using drugs that impair. There are many ways to get home safely without driving."

The Yuba City Police Department reminds the public that impaired driving is not just from alcohol. Prescription medications, over-the-counter drugs and marijuana can also impair, especially in combination with alcohol and other drugs.

So if you are hosting a holiday party, offer non-alcoholic drinks for designated sober drivers and monitor how people are getting home. If someone has been drinking and tries to leave, offer to have them stay the night or take ride-share home.

Funding for this program is provided by a grant from the California Office of Traffic Safety, through the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Yuba City Police Department Utilizes Volunteers to Patrol for Porch Pirates Around the Holidays

The Yuba City Police Department has begun sending it's volunteers in policing or "VIP's" out to neighborhoods all over Yuba City in hopes of catching and deterring "Porch Pirates." A porch pirate refers to a criminal who steals delivered packages from the front porch of unsuspecting victims. These crimes are not new, however tend to increase around the holiday season when consumers are purchasing Christmas gifts and having them delivered to their homes.

The VIPs will be in marked Volunteer Police cars and will be in full uniform. If a Volunteer sees something suspicious or out of the ordinary, they will call into Dispatch for an Officer to respond to their location. The Volunteers will not be making direct contact with any suspects.

As always, if you see suspicious activity or become a victim of a theft, please contact your local law enforcement immediately. Getting a good description of the suspect or the license plate number of the suspect vehicle can greatly aid in the investigation by law enforcement.
