

Pension Poison – How It Happened

by Lou Binninger

Politicians and government unions have had an exciting incestuous affair since the day public workers were given the right to organize. Public employees are tapped for dues that are used to fund political campaigns and ballot propositions benefitting unions. Union members are pressured to vote the union way. Union leaders then have politicians by the short-hairs when salary negotiations come around.

These negotiations are done in secret with no one representing those who are stuck paying for the majority of the pensions, the taxpayers. Union members' retirement pay now is more than the gross income of over half the households in California. The affair is working.

The total public pension liability for all state, county and municipal governments is $106,848 for every household in California, according to Stanford University's Pension Tracker. Even if pension managers at California Public Employees Retirement System (CalPERS) experience a miracle by earning a 7 percent annual return without any loss over the next 30 years (CalPERS gained 2.4 percent in 2014-15 and 0.6 percent in 2015-16) every household in California will still owe $28,507.

Without any financial smoke and mirrors California has a politician-produced crisis of over 2 trillion dollars in unfunded pension debt. And up until June 25, 2012, legislators 'cooked the books' to hide their deviant doings. They allowed government entities to leave the unfunded pension debt off their balance sheets further deceiving taxpayers, slow-thinking board and council members and financial institutions that might be solicited for loans.

The pension problem has been growing due to legislative corruption, union greed and CalPERS mismanagement. The current crisis started in 1999 with Governor Gray "Experience money can't buy" Davis. Davis was elected in 1998 with more than $5 million in campaign contributions from public employee unions. He would take good care of his donors.

Up until then, CalPERS and other pension funds had a major surplus bolstered by double digit profits in their investment portfolio.

San Diego – A Model of Pension Reform

by Lou Binninger

San Diego may be one of the most visited cities in California and certainly a most beautiful and entertaining place. However, in 2008 the New York Times called it 'Enron by the Sea' as it wrestled with bankruptcy caused by employee pension debt. Deals made between city leaders and powerful unions created a massive financial crisis for the eighth largest city in America.

Today, San Diego is the only jurisdiction in California that does not offer defined benefit pensions. The city succeeded with a proposition to change pension plans and overcame multiple lawsuits and union prophets of doom to switch to 401(k) investments for employees.

With San Diego heading for bankruptcy in 2005, voters took charge by electing Republican Jerry Sanders, former commander of San Diego's SWAT team, as Mayor. Despite being a former member of the police union, he stopped all pension spiking, and pushed the passage of Proposition B, which required all non-police employees hired after July 19, 2012 to receive a funded 401(k) contribution instead of the right to an unfunded defined benefit pension, the California Public Employees Retirement System (CalPERS) model.

Unions screamed that the city would suffer economically and would be unable to attract sufficient public employees and fire fighters. The proposed combined wage and benefit compensation would be 30 percent below the average of the 17 cities in San Diego County that offer a CalPERS defined benefit program. Unions said the city would become a training ground for other fire departments nearby.

The fire department reported an increase in retention losses the first year but has returned to the typical annual turnover. The city gets several thousand applicants a year to join the fire department and has no problem filling other city job openings.

The University of San Diego's Index of Leading Economic Indicators says that since converting public pensions to the 401(k) system the local economy has expanded for 58 of the last 60 months. In April, the Index reached its highest level since February 2006. However, in spite of the city's pension woes the unions waged a four-year legal assault to turn back the voters' will in Proposition B to reform the lavish and unsustainable CalPERS plan.

Finally, on April 11, a three-judge panel ruled in favor of voters. The taxpayers of San Diego still must pay $2.7 billion in unfunded pension liabilities for employees that joined the city folio. However, unions wanted that surplus for bigger pensions and SB-400 was passed by democrats and signed by Davis to do just that.

SB-400 increased pension benefits for all levels of public employees based upon the false assumption that the stock market would continue to achieve record levels. The up to 35% in pension increases stoked the governor’s upcoming bid for re-election. The democrat – controlled legislature and Davis had done the unions a solid. SB-400 was the largest issuance of non-voter approved debt in the state’s history.

SB-400 made more than 200,000 civil servants eligible to retire at 55 — and in many cases collect more than half their highest salary for life. California Highway Patrol officers could retire at 50 and receive as much as 90% of their peak pay. Other police departments got this benefit, as well.

Pension-spiking was the rage. Soon retiring employees were promoted to boost their retirement pay-out. The financial barn-door was ajar and public employees ransacked the place to get ‘what was theirs.’

Proponents sold the measure in 1999 with the promise that it would impose no new costs on California taxpayers. They said the state employees’ pension fund would grow fast enough to pay the bill in full. Were these optimists, fools or liars, maybe some of each?

When the law took effect in 2000, CalPERS investment values collapsed with the bursting of the ‘dot.com’ bubble. Eight years later, the housing market crashed and the recession set in. All this combined with poor investment decisions by the corrupt and unaccountable CalPERS management led to citizens paying the highest taxes in the nation while getting the poorest services.

When Yuba County Administrator Robert Bendorf offers a budget review lately he usually says “we are bringing in more money but the cost of doing business is going up.” That means that the taxpayers are being screwed by rising pension and health benefits for county employees. Yuba City’s finance director Robin Bertagna gave the most transparent and ominous comments recently to the council about the pension and health cost debacle. She basically said this problem will eventually consume the city coffers thus further crippling services. Auditor-Controller Nathan Black says that Sutter County’s unfunded pension debt has risen to $150 million.

Can anything be done? Yes, but most politicians lack the backbone to grasp the nettle.

before 2012, but that number is now decreasing.

As San Diego is on the mend financially other jurisdictions are embracing pension reform as well in order to survive. Jacksonville, Florida, began switching all new employees, including police, into 401(k)’s last year. Pennsylvania’s Governor signed a bill to move all new state employees and teachers into a similar plan. And Michigan’s governor is expected to sign a bill to move new teachers into 401(k)s.

Yuba and Sutter County citizens have witnessed a steady decline in services, roads and infrastructure as a greater portion of the general fund is needed to pay extraordinary salaries and benefits. San Diego is an example of how a local government can change their pension system to avoid bankruptcy. And, because of their court battle, a legal precedent has been established for change.

There have been numerous ideas offered to reform the state system but there is little chance for that to occur with a union and democrat-controlled capitol. The hope is at the local level.

LEE TOSSES SHUTOUT AND WINKLER HITS .500rr

Chico Heat pitcher Austin Lee and Yuba City third baseman Josh Winkler are the Great West League Co-Players of the Week. Lee went 2-0 in two starts, while Winkler hit .500 with seven RBIs.

Lee, coming off his sophomore season at Spokane Falls Community College, made two starts, going 2-0 with no walks and 13 strikeouts in 15-1/3 innings of work. The 5-9, 195 right-hander pitched a 5-hit complete game shutout versus Marysville on June 12 and went on to defeat Portland on June 17. Lee had a 1.17 ERA for the week, dropping his season ERA to 2.39, 4th best in the league.

Along with his 7 RBIs, Winkler went 12-24 with a home run. The 6-2, 180 infielder, who just completed his freshman season at Folsom Lake College, had a big game June 14 at Lincoln, with three hits and 4 RBIs. Winkler did not strikeout in his 24 at bats during the week.

FISHIN’ TALK

by Boots Johnson

Dan “Boots” Johnson has fished and hunted in California for 73 years. Anyone with questions or comments can email him at boots3@syix.com

The business of fishing has gone out of sight. We have lures that talk, swim and shudder when a real fish approaches. We have baits that smell any odor you wish to extend to the end of your line. In fact, the next generation of lures...or should I call them “something to catch a fish on”...will probably be a way to entice the fish population we have, as of this time, because some have never been seen in the water.

Now, let us go back a ways...way back to the good old days...when lures were first invented. Take the hula popper (which by the way was a killer for small and large mouth bass). Then let us discuss the famous jitterbug. Wow, what a lure. It was invented by a guy who made his name famous. Of course that was Fred Arbogast. His prototype was placed on the market in the 1930’s. This lure was deadly late in the evening and after dark. In fact the inventor of this lure suggested an angler use it after night fall. With the right retrieve and the right jerk it was deadly and of course it made its own noise and gurgle as it was pulled through the water. The jitterbug was a surface lure just like the hula popper. Then we have the lure which changed the way we fish and made us realize the value of sound in the water. I am referring to the famous Rat-L-Trap introduced by Bill Lewis back in the 1960’s. This lure was a huge success and is still available today. Try one and see what you will put in your live well or on your stringer.

I could go on and on about some of the famous lures, some of which have disappeared and those which are still available. Keep in mind however that same lure today will be different, not only in what it is made of, but also what it will cost. One more thing to discuss before we go to the next subject. I am referring to the Mirror-Lure which was a fantastic lure in its own right. This lure, when used the way the manufacturer suggested, was so great at enticing fish to strike, that some higher-ups in the world of fishing almost decided to outlaw the lure.

This is old news for some folks, but we decided to report on the release of almost a half million small steelhead into the American River. The little guys came from the Department of Fish and Wildlife’s Nimbus fish hatchery which survived the drought and the high water problem the past two years.

Free Fishing Days

July 1 and September 2

The California Department of Fish and Wildlife (CDFW) encourages all Californians to give fishing a try for free on July 1 and Sept. 2.

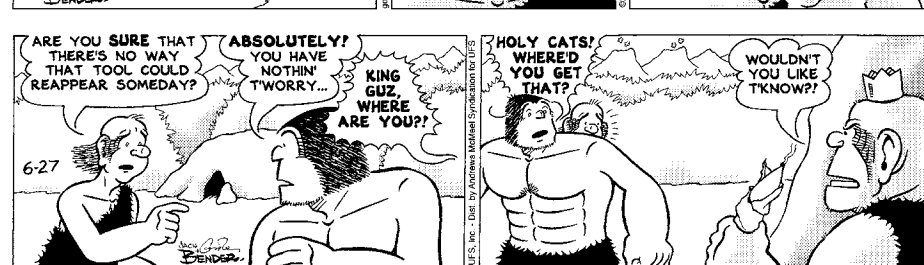

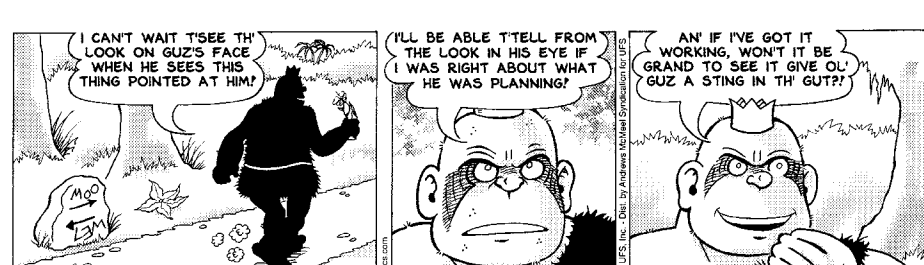

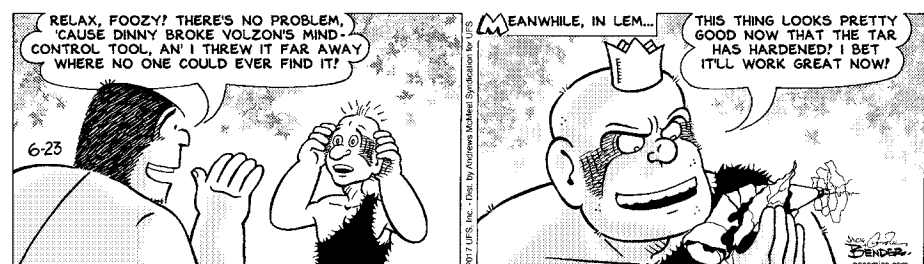

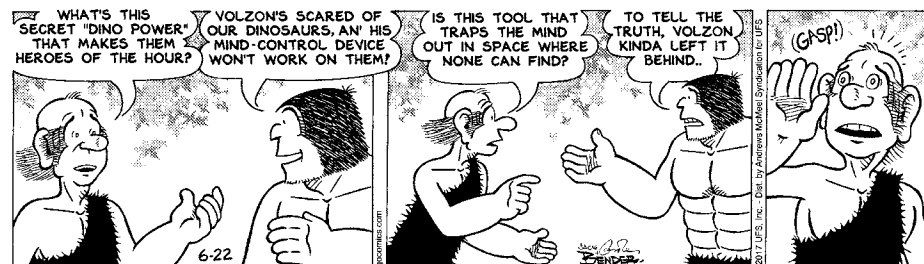

CDFW annually offers two Free Fishing Days, typically around the Fourth of July and Labor Day weekends. On these two days, people can fish without having to buy a sport fishing license. Free Fishing Days also provide an easy opportunity for licensed anglers to introduce non-angling friends and children to fishing and the outdoors.

All fishing regulations, such as bag and size limits, gear restrictions, report card requirements and fishing hours and stream closures, remain in effect. Every angler must have an appropriate report card if they are fishing for steelhead, sturgeon, spiny lobster or abalone anywhere in the state, or for salmon in the Smith and Klamath-Trinity river systems.

Anglers residing in urban areas also have opportunities to fish close to home. Some CDFW regions also offer Fishing in the City, a program that allows children to learn to fish in major metropolitan areas. For more information on the Fishing in the City program, please visit www.wildlife.ca.gov/fishing-in-the-city.

All anglers should also check the rules and regulations at www.wildlife.ca.gov/regulations for the waters they plan to fish because wildlife officers will be on duty to enforce them. In addition, information on fish planting is available at <https://nrm.dfg.ca.gov/fishplants> and a fishing guide can be viewed at www.wildlife.ca.gov/fishing/guide.

High School Students Conduct Mock Council Meeting

Yuba City, Ca – After three weeks immersed in the inner workings of local government, 11 Yuba City high school students graduated from a summer program after conducting a mock city council meeting. Since early June, students from Yuba City and River Valley High Schools have spent their weekdays at Summer @ City Hall (S@CH), learning from employees and elected officials about government’s many career opportunities.

S@CH concluded at 1 p.m. 6/22/17 with a mock council meeting in the Yuba City Council Chambers, followed immediately after by a graduation ceremony. During the mock meeting, the students ruled on three issues while serving in the assigned roles of city administrators, council members and citizens.

The students are incoming juniors and seniors who applied and interviewed for the opportunity to learn about government careers. From 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. each weekday, they have spent nearly 100 hours at City Hall and at City facilities to learn all that encompasses a job in government and the path it takes to achieve such a career.

“We are honored to support our local students by demonstrating a career pathway in government,” said Yuba City Councilmember Preet Didbal, who has been instrumental in building and running the program. “For those of us who do the job every day, we know the varied ways individuals can turn personal interests into lifelong and rewarding careers that are also of service to their community. It’s great to share that with the next generation.”

The S@CH program is funded by a Northern California Science Technology, Research, Engineering, Arts and Math (STREAM) Grant through the Sutter County Superintendent of Schools Office. Yuba City Unified School District partnered with the City of Yuba City to provide a teacher and curriculum.

River Valley High School teacher Sandy Richmond administered the daily classes, which included tours of every City facility, from the Water Treatment Plant to a Yuba City Fire Station;; presentations by the majority of City department heads; and meetings with county officials and State Assemblyman James Gallagher. Each student also experienced three, three-hour job shadows with City employees in jobs ranging from our waste water treatment facility and animal services to finance and the city manager’s office.

“This isn’t your standard summer school. These students recognized an invaluable learning opportunity and volunteered their time to study up on what could be their future,” Ewert said. “It was incredible to witness a spark with every realization of the magnitude of possibilities.”

Helipad at Rideout Authorized

Marysville, Ca – On June 22, 2017, the roof top helipad at Rideout Region-al Medical Center (RRMC) was authorized for use by the California Department of Public Health (CDPH).

The hospital’s helipad is used primarily to re-ceive trauma patients or those needing immediate care from throughout the region. This now includes a broad catchment area extending to Colusa, Butte, Yuba and Sutter Counties. In addition, the new he-lipad enables us to more quickly transport our most critical patients to special-ty centers when needed.

“This is very exciting news as prompt treatment for trauma patients can often mean the difference between life and death.” said Gino Patrizio, CEO, Rideout Health. “With our new helipad, not only will the trip from the scene of an accident or severe ill-ness to the hospital be quicker but if needed, we will be able to take a patient straight to the sur-gery suite from our secure roof-top elevator.”

While in flight, patients are treated by a regis-tered nurse and a medic. As soon as a helicopter lands, the patient is taken to where the trauma team can begin life-saving, criti-cal medical care – giving patients the best possible chance for survival and recovery.

The Trauma Center at RRMC is designated as a Level III Trauma Cen-ter by the American Col-lege of Surgeons. Our multidisciplinary trauma team includes specialists in emergency medicine, anesthesiology, trauma surgery, orthopedics, and neurosurgery, specialized nursing staff, radiology, lab, intensive care and physical rehabilitation. Trauma specialists are on call 24/7 to treat traumatic injuries of all types and all staff has received in-tensive, hands-on patient safety training.

Indian Tradition Which Quench Thirst & Create Friendship

By Surinder Mehta

An Indian Religious Tradition Combined with American holiday On Tuesday, 4th Of July to cool down travelers at 1829 Franklin Road Yuba City.

The Siri Narayan-Hindu Temple in Yuba City will pass out Free Soft drinks & Fruits in observance of Nirjal (without water) Akashdi (first day of the time taken by Moon for rotating around its axis) day an Indian Religious tradition.

In the old days in India when people used to travel on foot, that time the transit system was not so good like United States of America. The people used to walk from one place to another in hot summer day of scorching heat. When Travelers used to go through villages the village people used to have a stall of cold water and something to eat on the outskirts of their villages. They used to offer cold water and something to eat to the passersby that good gesture used to create a friendship between the people and good name for the village community. That time not too many people were educated, but they knew how to create a bond between communities, So they started this tradition, the fore fathers set that day in June and name the NIRJAL-AKASHDI DAY

To carry out the good tradition set forth by our Fore Fathers to create friendship and good name for the Indian community we celebrate this day. This is the 20th year we will be celebrating this good tradition. We invite all the community members to join us in celebrating this day and create a bond of Friendship so that we can care for each others.

Keeping Fireworks Legal

With the thrill of celebrating Independence Day, it's important to keep in mind that fireworks can be dangerous. According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), more than twice as many fires are reported on the Fourth of July than on any other day of the year in the United States and nearly 90% of emergency room fireworks injuries involve fireworks consumers are permitted to use. The National Safety Council advises that the best way to safely enjoy the Fourth of July is to watch a public fireworks display administered by professionals.

When using fireworks, it is critical for you to stay alert and be aware of your surroundings. The Yuba City Fire Department offers the following safety tips:

- * Read and follow all fireworks label directions. Used improperly, fireworks can be dangerous.

- * Light only one firework at a time, outdoors, in a clear and open space.

- * Always maintain a safe distance from people, structures, vehicles, and any flammable materials.

- * Keep a bucket of water and a garden hose or fire extinguisher nearby in case of fire or to fully extinguish a malfunctioning firework.

- * Never attempt to re-light or fix a "dud" firework.

- * Children should be closely supervised around fireworks. Never allow children to handle or ignite fireworks.

According to the NFPA, the tip of a sparkler burns at more than 1200 degrees! Glow sticks are a safer alternative. Animals tend to become frightened by the lights and sounds of fireworks. Keep animals in a safe and secure location, away from firework activity. Properly dispose of fireworks. Douse spent fireworks with water. Act responsibly, follow the laws, and use common sense.

The following pertains to the jurisdictional boundaries of the City of Yuba City: The use of "safe and sane" fireworks is limited to the time period from noon June 28th through midnight on July 4th of the same year. Fireworks booth operating dates and hours are June 28th (1200-2200 hours), and June 29th through July 4th (0900-2200 hours).

The sweet treats from Bangor Bake Shoppe are selling well at Books & More. There is a very limited supply, but lemon bars are a favorite. There are also cookies and fudge. If you have a need to have us pick up something, we always make a run on Wednesday morning, so just call the week before (675-3275) and we'll bring it in. We tried an apple pie last week, but did not sell it all (buy by the slice) so it went home with Yvonne.

Look Back in Time – In 1925 residents of Dobbins voted to double the road tax from 50 cents to one dollar a year to fix the roads (there are some potholes that could be fixed now, too).

Hope to see you in Brownsville soon.

Farmers monitor effects of heat wave

Record high temperatures will have implications for California farms, but the full impact won't be known until after the heat wave breaks. Farmers implement heat-safety protocols to protect themselves and their employees on hot days. Growers of grapes, walnuts, tomatoes and other crops say they're monitoring their crops carefully for signs of sunburn or stress. Farmers provide crops with additional irrigation to help them withstand the heat.

Livestock, poultry owners protect their animals

To keep livestock and poultry as comfortable as possible during heat waves, farmers and ranchers provide shade, cooling mist, well-ventilated barns and plenty of fresh water. Dairy farmers say cows tend to produce less milk during hot days, even when under shade and misters. Poultry producers say they adjust their birds' diet during the summer but the birds still eat less, meaning they take longer to reach market weight.

Walnuts, other foods may help in appetite control

Eating foods such as walnuts, salmon and canola oil may help people control their appetites, according to new research. Walnuts, salmon, tuna and other foods feature polyunsaturated fats. The study indicated that eating foods rich in polyunsaturated fats may change appetite hormones, so people feel fuller for longer. The California Walnut Commission helped pay for the study.

Program certifies farms that help pollinators

A new nationwide program will certify farmers whose growing methods benefit bees. Known as "Bee Better Certified," the program judges the amount and quality of bee habitat farms create, and their use of pollinator-friendly pest-management strategies. The U.S. Department of Agriculture provided a grant for a pilot program in Oregon, and used the occasion of National Pollinator Week to announce the program's nationwide availability.

School is out for the summer and summer is for enjoying your yard and all the effort put into it. The most important thing to be done, of course, is keeping things adequately irrigated during the hot summer months we have. Irrigating is best done early in the day for maximum growth and health of your plants. Drip systems offer the careful use of water by delivering the water just to the targeted plant and not all the surrounding area, and is therefore a system that keeps weeds down as well. The problem we find with them is that they must be carefully monitored to be sure they are working properly and are not clogged. The use of mulch around and between plants help to keep the areas moist between watering. A really efficient system takes a bit of planning and altering as plants grow larger and require more water. Usually that is done by adding emitters when needed. Having it all on a timer makes your irrigating so simple it's easy to forget about it, but it should be checked, especially if you notice any plants looking stressed.

It is necessary to know the flow rate on emitters – how much water per minute - or is it per hour? It makes a world of difference. Knowing how much water the emitters produce will let you accurately decide how long they should run to do a thorough job of watering.

We sometimes have calls about the advisability of planting a tree in the middle of the July heat, and it is obviously not the optimum time, but it can be done if you are going to be there to be sure that the tree will be watered adequately. It would need a deep watering about three times a week through the heat of the summer. Deep watering requires a basin around the base of the tree. It should be just deep enough that a very light stream of water can be left on for several hours without overflowing, insuring that the water is soaking in around and into the tree's roots. Another easy way is to accomplish this by using a piece of 2" plastic pipe that is long enough to reach the bottom of the planting hole and extend several inches above ground level. About three sets of four or five ½" holes need to be drilled in a vertical line in the lower end of the pipe to allow the water to drain. Put that pipe in vertically to the bottom of the hole as you put the planting mix in around the tree. Hang the hose into the pipe and turn the water on slowly, leaving it for several hours to deep water the tree. One added precaution to insure a good result is to add a capful of 'Superthrive' to the irrigation water the first time or two. Put some rocks into the bottom several inches of the pipe to help to keep mud from clogging the pipe.

For those folks in the foothills dealing with the rapid growth of wild blackberries, poison oak, poison ivy, and other bushy and woody unwanted growth, this is good time to spray them with a brush killer. It must be done while they are growing vigorously for the best result. Using a product labeled as "brush killer" will do a better job than a general herbicide like Remuda or Roundup. These pesky plants it might require more than one spraying.

Do you like Monarch butterflies? Most of us seem to, and there is a plant available that will attract them. Asclepias curassavica, a variety of milkweed. It is quite an attractive annual plant with vivid red or bright yellow clusters of small flowers. The Monarchs lay their eggs on the stems which then hatch into caterpillars. They then feed on the foliage of the plant for nourishment. Nature has more interesting, clever and amazing ways of doing things than any of us will ever know, but it is fun to watch when you see it.

Mower blades should be set at 2" of height during the hottest months. It may not give as smooth a finish as a lower setting, but it will take less water to maintain a nice green lawn. The higher setting helps the longer grass to shade the ground beneath which helps to retain moisture, thus keeping the grass green with fewer waterings.

Fertilize your summer vegetables and annuals to keep them flowering and/or fruiting. Use B.T. on the big green worms that defoliate tomato plants. Don't neglect those pretty hanging baskets. They need thorough watering to keep them pretty and that tends to wash nutrient right out of the bottom of that basket. It is probably easiest to use a 3 or 4 month slow release fertilizer on them. Annuals that you may have planted for all the color they provide will bloom longer if you have the time to dead head them frequently, and give them a bit of fertilizer.

Enjoy the pleasures of summer.

The Mummy

Starring: Tom Cruise, Sofia Boutella, & Annabelle Wallis. Rated: PG-13, Runtime: 110 minutes.

An Egyptian princess is raised to be not only a queen, but a living god. When her ascension to the throne is threatened by the birth of her little brother she resorts to killing her family and trying to raise the god of death to accomplish her aspirations. She is thwarted by the priests of Egypt and their mystic ways, if only for several thousand years. Once re-emerged she is a bit grumpy and hungry. Grungry.

This is more of a re-boot of the Mummy movies from the first years of this millennium than it is a stand alone. It also sets the stage for more monsters and movies to follow. However judging by box office sales that seems unlikely. Tom Cruise gives his standard high intensity performance with his thoughtful head tilt look that implies action is about to ensue.

The Mummy, earns two out of five, Eye Splitting Monkeys. This not a horrible movie. There are some funny elements that entertain and the action is pretty darned good as is the performance of the actors. It falls short with the dreaded shaky camera work. Why spend a hundred and twenty five million dollars to make visual art and then shake the camera to obscure the subject?

After 9,000 Columns, I’m Still Watching California – Now From a New Perch

by Dan Walters, CalMatters

So here I am again, beginning the third incarnation of my running commentary on all things California, but particularly its politics.

Having written more than 9,000 California-centric columns over the last 36-plus years, first for the late Sacramento Union and then for 33 years for the Sacramento Bee, I and the column have moved to CALmatters.

Four times a week, I will conjure up about 500 words of observation about California politics, and also will travel throughout the state for longer articles about the challenging issues it faces in the coming years and decades.

Why CALmatters? The name really says it all: California matters, not only to Californians, but, because of its unique attributes, to the larger world.

CALmatters is a non-profit organization founded on the principle that such uniqueness requires journalism that looks far beyond the daily churn of political maneuvering and delves deeply into its underlying issues.

That credo meshes completely with my own abiding interests in California’s continuous economic, cultural, demographic evolutions and the difficult challenges – even dilemmas – they present to its political system.

One current conflict illustrates the syndrome.

California has evolved into a blue state whose voters overwhelmingly support Democratic Party politicians, giving them virtually total control over state government, and generally support the party’s liberal goals, which require more spending.

At the same time, however, those voters have demonstrated repeatedly that they are somewhat averse to paying higher taxes themselves to pay for those goals, even as they embrace taxing others, such as smokers or the rich.

After years of ignoring the deterioration of California’s vital roadway network, Gov. Jerry Brown and his fellow Democrats in the Legislature mustered the will, and the votes, to raise gas taxes and other auto-related fees to increase spending on transportation by more than $5 billion a year.

Despite the demonstrated need, a subsequent poll revealed that most Californians dislike paying the new taxes and, in effect, endorse the Republican opposition, even though they almost never vote for Republicans.

It’s entirely possible that voters will pass an initiative repealing the new road taxes, which would not only put the issue back at square one, but make it politically radioactive and thus even more intractable.

That sort of dichotomy – the clash between reality and politics – permeates California and explains why issues, such as the deterioration of roads and highways, often simmer for years, or even decades, without resolution.

One finds similar dynamics in countless other important matters, such as education, water and housing, whose outcomes will determine whether California’s spectacular history will continue, or whether it, like ancient Rome or Detroit, will see its societal position crumble.

They are the kinds of issues – those central to California’s fate – on which this column has focused in years past and will continue to explore in the future, with a minimum of inside-the-Capitol gamesmanship, although some is inevitable, and a maximum of outside reality.

Recall Effort Stymied by Sacramento

by Jon Coupal, President of the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association

Members of the California Legislature apparently believe they have the power to change outcomes they don’t like. This is like awarding the NBA Championship to Cleveland by retroactively mandating that all of Golden State’s three point baskets be counted as only two.

While basketball is not on the minds of lawmakers, they are working to interfere with something of much greater value to average Californians, their constitutional right to recall elected officials. The Sacramento politicians think they have found a way to derail what appears to be a successful grassroots effort to recall state Sen. Josh Newman, who cast a key vote imposing a new $5.2 billion annual gas and car tax on already overburdened taxpayers.

The power of recall is a powerful tool of direct democracy. The secretary of state’s website says, “Recall is the power of the voters to remove elected officials before their terms expire. It has been a fundamental part of our governmental system since 1911 and has been used by voters to express their dissatisfaction with their elected representatives.”

In the 29th Senate District, covering parts of Orange, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties, voters have been busy exercising their right to recall their tax-raising representative Josh Newman. Much to the surprise of Sacramento insiders, it looks like the campaign will succeed in gathering enough signatures to force the senator to be held accountable in a special election — already the secretary of state has instructed county registrars to begin counting the signatures. The chance that the recall of one of their own will be successful has lawmakers panicking. Their solution is to surreptitiously change the recall rules that have been in place for over a century.

With little notice, the Legislature amended Senate Bill 96, as it was about to pass in connection with the state budget on June 15, for the purpose of changing the rules governing the current recall effort. The purpose of the bill is shamelessly transparent: “It is the Legislature’s intent that the changes made by this act in the Elections Code apply retroactively to recalls that are pending at any stage at the time of the act’s enactment... .”

Their end game is delay. They want to delay the ultimate vote on ousting Newman for as long as possible, despite the constitutional guarantee to have the vote as quickly as possible — between 60 days and 180 days from the recall petitions having been certified.

Here’s how they do it: First, they try to delay the petition review process by requiring the county Registrars of Voters to check the validity of every signature submitted. Normally, the registrars are permitted to check a random sample of the signatures, saving both time and money.

Second, and more disturbing, is the provision buried deep in the text that states, “Notwithstanding any other law, the Secretary of State shall not certify the sufficiency of the signatures [on the recall petitions] until the Legislative Joint Budget Committee has 30 days to review and comment on the estimate [of recall costs] submitted by the Department of Finance.”

Here’s the kicker. The Department of Finance is part of the governor’s office and the bill does not require the governor’s office to prepare that analysis under any time limit. Gov. Brown, who has already come out against the recall, can simply delay that report indefinitely, which, in turn, would hold up certification of the recall effort and the ultimate election.

Perhaps it should come as no surprise that those in power in Sacramento will stop at nothing to retain their power and influence, putting their own interests ahead of those of average Californians. But lawmakers who disrespect voters should be wary. Polls show that nearly 60 percent of Californians oppose the new gas tax. The higher taxes will kick in just before the beginning of next year’s election season. Voters are very likely to remember who is responsible and choose to retire multiple representatives, not just a single senator, in the regularly scheduled 2018 election.

Democrats Have Sold Your Votes Without Your Consent!

The National Popular Vote Interstate Compact (NPVIC) is an agreement among several U.S. States plus the District of Columbia to allocate their presidential electors to the winner of the national popular vote under certain conditions. As of June 21, 2017, the compact has been joined by eleven states and the District of Columbia. Now Oregon has passed HB2927 which will make it State Law to give all Electoral College votes to the Popular Vote Getter in all future presidential elections. This Treasonous action by these leftist States will destroy the will of the voters of those states involved and make them a slave state to the populace vote. Thus ringing in the age of Democratic Democracy, something our Founders hated.

(CA, DC, HI, IL, MA, MD, NJ, NY, RI, VT, WA & Oregon) Have all now passed legislation to overthrow the will of the voters in those states. Article 2 section 2 clauses 2 and 3 and the Twelfth Amendment of the US Constitution require States to establish electors that will choose the president and vice president of the United States. These States have sneakily eliminated the vote of the people by making it law to give all their electoral college votes to the national popular vote getter. They are eliminating the voice of their citizens and eliminating the legitimacy and relevance of their State’s involvement in the political process... Eliminating the vote and voice of an entire State.

The electoral college was established for a reason. To ensure smaller populated States had the same vote as all the other States. Otherwise they would have become slaves to the will of the larger populated States and therefore would have no say in a Presidential Election. Because we have allowed Schools to teach communism, for generations, and forsake the Constitution, many people like Oregon Rep. Alissa Keny-Guyer believe that the electoral college is “flawed and outdated.” Rep. Keny-Guyer told Oregon Live, “The Electoral College does not fit the ‘We The People’ and ‘One person, one vote’ style of democratic government. OF COURSE IT DOESN’T Our Founders Hated Democracies! That is why they formed a Constitutional Republic!

What will be the point in voting if you don’t live in New York, Texas, California, or Florida, where the majority of the voting population resides? Every presidential election will be chosen by these few States if we allow this treasonous skullduggery to move any further without a fight!

I didn’t see any ballot initiative about this, did you? So how can they give our votes to someone we didn’t vote for? I think we need to rally the masses against this tyranny and quick or everyone in America will be at the mercy of the larger States. Our Constitution is being dismantled before our eyes and we are not even aware of it!.... It is being done behind closed doors and it is those who want to be your slave masters doing it!

Sadly, Civil War maybe our only way out soon. It is better to die fighting tyranny and enslavement, than it is to live enslaved under the thumb of the tyrants.

- The New York Times cares not a whit about the lives of our diplomats. The so-called “newspaper of record: told the world, and our enemies, that Michael D’Andrea, who led the hunt for Osama bin Laden, will now be in charge of the CIAs operations in Iran.

- Would you believe that anyone in today’s state Democratic Party would honestly try to teach students how to determine fake news? “Crafting a comprehensive curriculum for media literacy education is essential to combating fake news” is the name of legislation to introduce media literacy education into school curriculums approved by the Senate (Sen. Bill Dodd, D-Napa).

- Guess who caused the problem in the first place some 75 years ago? Government. But now the taxpayers are on the hook for more than $1 billion to reverse government policy regarding water to restore the San Joaquin River system. The Natural Resources Defense Council filed suit to achieve this result some 18 years ago. Speedy justice? Of course the project won’t be concluded until around 2030. By that time the fish will be too old to swim upstream. Maybe a high-speed rail system for the finny fellows?

- Mike Bloomberg is an idiot. He is worth $8 billion and wants to donate $15 million to the United Nations make up for the billions Trump has cut from the corrupt organization. Frankly, why doesn’t he really show how he feels and give the UN all his money. If he wants to combat climate change $15 million will only fund a month or so of bureaucrats’ salaries. He should also stop using private planes and fly coach– if he has to fly at all. Perhaps use a mule.

- Did anyone even know Kathy Griffin before she started cutting off heads? Her crocodile-tear press conference seemed to have more reporters and photographers than her usual audience.

- These are the “cuts” the Democrats are claiming will result in dead children. The Department of Agriculture’s Child Nutrition Programs spent $23 billion in 2017, and Trump’s budget proposes to increase spending to $34 billion in 2027, a 47% increase. The Department of Health and Human Services’ Child Support and Family Support Programs, which Trump suggests an increase from $4 billion in 2017 to $5 billion in 2027, a 25% increase. America has over 90 anti-poverty programs, 17 food-aid programs and 22 housing-assistance programs. The federal debt has tripled from less than $6 trillion in 1997 to almost $20 trillion today.

- Did you note the Associated Press paean to the Summer of Love? Another interpretation would be that this San Francisco event was the start of the nation’s downfall to the snowflakes and violence we see today.

- The Southern Baptists claim the “alt-right” is responsible for all the turmoil we see today. Do you recall any violence by the Tea-Party movement, which is the progenitor of today’s conservative movement?

- The Associated Press claims that there is no evidence linking the baseball field shooter to any radical group. More fake news. Maybe these so-called reporters did not look at the shooter’s Facebook page or the list of potential targets in his pocket.

- Congress can kneel in prayer on a baseball field, but if a similar expression is done on a school field, heads roll?

- Another interesting “fact.” An advertised car lease as “ultra low mileage” means you can leave your new car in the driveway until the lease expires.

- Did you see the security camera footage of a customer attacking a clerk with avocados? California growers of this classic fruit need to be wary as the left may decide that avocados need to be regulated and perhaps have the trees uprooted in the name of “Avocado Control.”

istration rates throughout the state. This pushes the total voter registrations well over the number of eligible citizens in those counties. These Inactive registrants are still qualified to vote.

Why is this important? It’s easy for anyone to claim to be an inactive voter and vote in their name. Voter impersonation is the perfect crime since California does not require voter ID.”

It is easier to vote illegally in California than to steal a package of gum at a convenience store.

Because Your Money Matters!

Marc Cuniberti hosts “Money Matters” on KVMR 89.5 FM Thursdays at noon. His website is www.moneymanagementradio.com

Why do you own the stocks you own

Investors usually tell me they hold a variety of assets which might include stocks, bonds and mutual fund in order to be diversified yet few can give me a specific reason for why they hold each investment. Somehow they believe holding a wide variety of assets is diversified, and while this is a partially true statement, the actual reason why this is true can be elusive.

Having clarity and focus in ones investing is tantamount to reaching financial goals. This means you have to be clear on why you own everything you own and how we reach that awareness is actually quite simple.

For instance, I own my shotgun not as an investment but for protection. I am investing in my safety and the safety of my family in case some bad guys arrive at my house late at night. I own my garden to give me food and own my car for mobility. I own my house for my family and I to inhabit yet many investors think of a house as place to accumulate retirement savings or invest for growth. While this might be true to some extent, during 2008/09 we discovered that perhaps that wasn’t such a good idea. Part of the reason for the housing bust was confusion on the part of investors on why we own our homes. Decades ago most people thought of home ownership as just that, a place to live. In the last decade however, the reason for owning a home morphed into an “investment” instead of a “necessity” and that’s where the trouble may have started.

The reason for holding money in a bank has also changed over the decades. When I was growing up, the banks paid me six percent interest on my savings. My Dad told me to save my money in the bank for the interest payments much like he did. Since banks now pay little interest, the reason for putting money in a savings account has changed. Now we put our money in a bank for safety, not for the interest. When investors complain to me they cannot make money in a savings account, I tell them that is not why we are there, at least it isn’t at this particular point in time. We have savings accounts and similar bank products for safety, not to make money. If we want to make money, we obviously must look elsewhere.

Many people hold stocks for growth. I do not. I hold stocks for their potential income as I usually don’t buy any stocks that don’t pay me money (dividends) to hold them. With the income they pay me, I may get the growth regardless of whether the market goes up or down. If the market does go up, I might do even better. If the market goes down, any payments I might receive takes some of the sting out. Keep in mind, dividends are not guaranteed and. having stocks that pay dividends does not ensure profit or protect against loss

Some investors might hold gold and silver coins in a bank safe deposit box for peace of mind against a possible currency collapse while others might hold gold stocks for speculation on the gold price.

Commodity funds may help guard against rising grocery bills while holding some Cd’s, Treasury bills or cash would tend to help preserve funds in a broad market sell off.

I could pay off my home mortgage, I don’t. I consider my mortgage as a way to help protect against inflation. (Inflation could allow me to pay off my mortgage with cheaper dollars) Others consider debt the devil’s own and avoid it all costs.

By detailing the reason you hold each asset, it may help clarify your portfolio goals and even cause you to perhaps alter its contents. Once you detail and carefully consider why you hold what you do, or at least ask the question, your investing plan might become that much clearer. The thought process of truly knowing why you place money where you do will go a long way in helping you reach your goals and allow you to better allocate your money where it may offer the maximum possible return, the possibility for growth and protection while providing clarity to your reasoning.

California Appears to Invite Voter Fraud
