By Sameea Kamal, CALMatters.org

As the clock struck midnight on Feb. 10, 14 people scattered around California collectively exhaled in relief.

The 14 are members of the state's independent citizens redistricting commission who drew 120 new districts for the Legislature, 52 for Congress and four for the state Board of Equalization that voters will use in this year's election. The commissioners struggled at times to reach consensus, and their mapping was critiqued nearly every step of the way by some experts, advocates, elected officials and the public.

But after all the criticism, the commission approved the maps unanimously in late December, and Feb. 10 – the 45-day deadline for anyone to go to court to block the maps – came and went. No one sued.

There's still one more state hurdle to clear: critics have until March 27 to challenge the maps via a referendum – asking voters to reject them – before the new districts officially become effective. But there's no sign any such costly effort is underway. (The maps could also be challenged in federal court as violating the U.S. constitution or the Voting Rights Act.)

“The absence of a state lawsuit challenging these maps is a testament to the effectiveness of California's open, publicly accessible redistricting process and the design of its independent redistricting commission,” current commission Chairperson Russell Yee said in a statement.

“We worked hard to apply the constitutional redistricting criteria and consider testimony from throughout the state, especially from minority communities,” said Yee, a Republican professor and former pastor from Oakland. “While the maps do not please everyone, we believe they are fair and equitable. We would have confidently defended these maps in court, but are thankful we now won't need to.”

The commission did face litigation earlier: An emergency petition filed on Nov. 30 on behalf of some

Parkway Activists Confront County

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - Fed up with illegal parkland camping, the American River Parkway Foundation has addressed a three-page scold to Sacramento City and County. Following the widely-publicized communication, Foundation leaders have achieved meetings with elected policymakers. “We hope to start a conversation that will result in solutions,” says Foundation executive Dianna Pognotti.

The non-profit last year got vocal about Parkway deterioration. At a public forum, more than 200 citizens learned the beloved County gem was more imperiled than at any time in its 60-year history. Experts revealed that 15 percent of the Parkway's 4800 acres burned in 2021; that river water was polluted; wildlife habitat was suffering; recreational trail users were intimidated; garbage accumulated faster than clean-ups could counter; rampant drug abuse has created further hazards.

The Foundation's letter demanded that Sacramento County agencies and Sacramento City pull their weight and “take action” to stop river and parkland abuse.

In an interview with Messenger Publications, District 3 Supervisor Rich Desmond acknowledged the crisis. “I welcome the Foundation's advocacy and criticism,” he said. “As a kid, I kayaked from Carmichael to Discovery Park and didn't see a single camper... I never expected what we have now. I'm ashamed our children have to experience nature with this backdrop.”

“The Foundation should be relentless in educating policy makers on the harm being done to our beloved Parkway.” Asked what the County was doing to counter damage by the (estimated) 1000-strong camper population, Desmond cited a recent $2 million increase in budget to supply more ranger patrols, fire fuel reduction, a new Environmental Impact Team (to assess restoration needs) and more social workers to connect the homeless to assistance. “What's missing is alternative shelters, transitional housing and treatment options,” he admitted. “The County and City are working closely to acquire more shelter locations.”

The Foundation letter's must-do list for policymakers includes:

Formulating plans for removal of illegal Parkway campers; Providing

California Releases Extreme Heat Action Plan

California Natural Resources Agency
Press Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - With climate change driving greater extremes in weather, the California Natural Resources Agency and Governor's Office of Planning and Research, together with state agency partners, today released a draft Extreme Heat Action Plan to protect communities around the state. This action plan outlines a strategic and comprehensive set of state actions to adapt and build resilience to extreme heat.

California's best climate science projects that every corner of the state will be impacted in years and decades to come by higher average temperatures and more frequent and severe heat waves. Extreme heat threatens public health and safety, economic prosperity, and communities and natural systems, with profoundly disproportionate consequences for the most vulnerable Californians.

The development of the draft action plan was initiated through the state's 2021 update to California's Climate Adaptation Strategy, during which the need for an up-to-date comprehensive, interagency approach to extreme heat was identified early on. To meet this need, the state committed to updating the 2013 report “Preparing California for Extreme Heat Guidance and Recommendations.”

The substance and organization of the Extreme Heat Action Plan was guided by extensive public engagement. In addition to input received through ten regional workshops and numerous consultations with California Native American tribes, the state held an Extreme Heat Workshop Series to gather recommendations on priority state actions and areas of focus for the action plan. The final workshops in this series will be held on January 24, 2022 to solicit feedback on this draft.

The draft action plan identifies existing and recommended state actions to address extreme heat, and identifies eight areas of near-term focus: Implementing a statewide public health monitoring system to identify heat illness events early, monitor trends, and track illnesses and deaths; Cooling schools in heat-vulnerable communities and support for climate-smart planning; Accelerating heat readiness and protection of low-income households and expanding tree canopy in communities most impacted by extreme heat; Protecting vulnerable populations through increased heat risk-reduction strategies and codes, standards, and regulations; Building a climate-smart workforce through training partnerships and apprenticeships in jobs and careers that address extreme heat; Increasing public awareness to reduce risks posed by extreme heat; Supporting local and regional extreme heat action; Protecting natural systems, including fish and wildlife, from the impacts of extreme heat.

Information on how to provide feedback on the draft through the final workshops in our Extreme Heat Workshop Series can be found here: <https://resources.ca.gov/Initiatives/Building-Climate-Resilience/2021-State-Adaptation-Strategy-Update>. ★

Environmental advocacy groups such as the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) support the transition to TOU rates as the plans help build healthier communities. ★

“Sheriff Scott Jones has distinguished himself as a courageous law enforcement leader, always putting the interests of the community and crime victims first. I trust Scott Jones to stand against the ‘woke’ politics that fuels the agenda to ‘defund police’ and release dangerous criminals early. Scott possesses both the unique experience and sound judgement to help restore our nation’s law and order as our member of congress for the third district. Sheriff Scott Jones has my strongest endorsement.” – State Senator Jim Nielsen, former chairman of the California Board of Prison Terms and co-author of California’s Crime Victims Bill of Rights

Sheriff Jones accomplished a strong record of leadership at the Sacramento County Sheriff’s Office, stewarding the Department’s recovery from the worst financial crisis of its history, becoming a regional

Redistricting Happens New County Animal Care Director

Republican voters alleged that the commission held secret meetings with some interest groups, complained that an analysis of racially polarized voting wasn't made public and challenged the selection of its legal counsel because the firm had previously worked for Democrats.

That emergency petition was denied by the California Supreme Court on Dec. 15. Any of the $4.3 million set aside for litigation that isn't used goes back into the state's general fund.

The lack of lawsuits is somewhat surprising. After the first time California redistricting was done by an independent commission, in 2011, two lawsuits challenged the final maps, and another questioned the commission's makeup.

And new election districts in other states are being taken to court. On Feb. 7, the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated a congressional map that a lower federal court ruled would disenfranchise Black voters. In December, the U.S. Department of Justice sued Texas, alleging that the maps drawn by a Republican-controlled Legislature and GOP Gov. Greg Abbott disenfranchise Latino voters. In North Carolina, the state Supreme Court threw out new congressional and legislative districts that the justices said were too partisan and ordered the Republican-majority Legislature to draw new ones by Feb. 18.

Even in other states where the maps were also drawn by independent commissions, there are lawsuits. In Michigan, state lawmakers say that the new congressional districts would dilute the voting power of minority communities. In Ohio, Black voters went to federal court seeking to block legislative maps.

Just before approving California's maps and delivering them to the secretary of state on Dec. 27, commissioners noted the exceptional challenges they faced during their 18 months of work, including the pandemic and the delay of Census data that compressed their timeline to have new districts in time for the June primary.

Meeting deadlines and avoiding lawsuits aren't the only measures of success. Other assessments could shape what statewide and local California redistricting looks like after the 2030 Census and beyond.

Ballot measures passed in 2008 and 2010 set the minimum criteria for fair maps: equal population, compliance with the federal Voting Rights Act and compactness of districts, among others.

But beyond that, some look at how well the new districts reflect California's diverse population – with no race or ethnic group making up a majority.

According to the Public Policy Institute of California, the number of majority Latino districts increased "significantly," with six more for U.S. House, three more for state Senate and an additional five for state Assembly – nearly matching the share of the Latino voting-eligible population at 30%.

There was less change for other ethnic groups. There are two Asian-majority state Assembly districts, up from one, but no state Senate or congressional districts. There are no majority Black districts.

Another measure of fair representation: "influence" districts, where a group makes up at least 30% of voters. While the number of Latino "influence" districts declined, there are two Black influence congressional districts and two legislative districts and six Asian influence congressional districts and 10 legislative ones.

Party control, based on voter registration, flipped in three congressional, four Senate districts and four Assembly districts.

Still, Democrats will likely remain dominant based on the new maps, favored to win 41 congressional seats, 31 state Senate seats and 62 Assembly seats, according to the PPIC analysis. There were also 21 members of Congress, 13 state senators and 20 Assembly members put into the same districts as other incumbents.

Adding to the turnover and possibly changing the partisan balance, so far 21 Assembly members and state senators have resigned or have announced they're not seeking reelection this year. Another seven senators are barred from running again by term limits.

While this California redistricting was heavily scrutinized, the 2010 commission dealt with its own challenges, including tight timelines and budget restraints. But they also had the advantage of being the first independent commissioners.

So, another measure of the current commission's success might be how well it learned lessons from the previous group. Some prior commissioners who followed the 2021 process say the current commission was able to do more public outreach and took advantage of more advanced technology.

But some of the same problems remained: time management, a lack of clear guidance on how to assess competing communities of interest and a struggle to be consistent in making decisions.

The current commissioners, like their predecessors, may also travel throughout California and to other states to share the impact an independent commission can have.

Members of both citizen commissions agree that other institutions should learn from having a bipartisan group work together and reach consensus, especially in these politically polarized times, when 63% of California's likely voters are pessimistic that Americans with different political views can still work out their differences.

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - Sacramento County has a new Director of Animal Care and Regulation.

The Board of Supervisors, at its Jan. 25 meeting, concurred with the County Executive's appointment of Annette Bedsworth as Director, effective Feb. 14. Bedsworth will replace Michael Doane, who had been the department's Acting Director since June 2020.

"Ms. Bedsworth has a distinguished record of significant achievements during her tenure as Executive Director for Animal Services in Stanislaus County. Sacramento County will benefit greatly from her leadership and expertise, and we look forward to welcoming her to the organization," said Mike Penrose, Interim Deputy County Executive, Community Services. "I would also like to thank Michael Doane for his willingness to provide leadership to the department as we searched for a permanent director."

positions. Since 2008, she has served as the Executive Director for Animal Services for Stanislaus County. In that position, she led the agency to achieve significant improvements, including increasing the life-saving rate from 9 percent to more than 90 percent for both cats and dogs.

Her noteworthy program implementations include the Community Cat Program, which reduced euthanasia by 40 percent in its first year, and the Dog License Amnesty program, which generated 8,000 new licenses in the first 30 days of the program.

Bedsworth has a

Bachelor of Arts degree in Family and Consumer Sciences from California State University, Fresno and is a Southern University Utah Animal Services Executive Leadership graduate. She is Vice President for the National Committee for International Public Management Association (IPMA) for Human Resources and is associated with the Marketing Committee for Cal Animals, the National Committee for Human Animal Support Services, Stanislaus Scholarship Committee, and serves as a mentor for the Stanislaus County Student Program. ★ funding to repair environmental damage; Maintaining healthy water for wildlife and humans; Increasing Parkway safety to benefit nearby neighborhoods; Removing refuse to reduce fire risk and contamination.

Despite assurances of County commitment to the Parkway, Foundation activists won't turn down the heat: "We elect people to shape our community, and we should hold them accountable," Dianna Pognotti said. "The Foundation has waited for them to address this crisis."

They've made announcements but not followed through. OurParkway's being destroyed, and no one seems to be doing anything to save it. We need plans for services and shelter options. Beyond that, we want the Parkway restored. We've placed (early 2022) deadlines for action. We're fortunate to have this treasure. People shouldn't be afraid to use it."

Agrees Supervisor Desmond: "Parkway encampments need to be removed. But unless we have alternative shelters, they'll just pop up somewhere else. The Foundation's deadlines are challenging, but I'm working with Board colleagues and County staff to identify plans that will continue to provide support the Parkway needs." State Senator Brian Dahle Announces His Run for Governor

Senator Brian Dahle

From the office of Brian Dahle

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - California State Senator and Farmer Brian Dahle announced his run for Governor of California.

"California isn't a failed state; we have a failure of leadership. Our state is overtaxed, over-regulated and underperforming in all critical services sectors. As parents feel deep anxiety over their children falling further behind, this administration adopted the strategy of dispute, half-truths, and finger-pointing. People want to believe again in the California Dream. The consequences of failure are too great," Dahle said.

"We often hear that politicians cannot be trusted. That is a sentiment earned by lawmakers who say one thing and do another. I commit to telling you the TRUTH about why the government is failing and what can be done to fix it and turn this state around. It is time to retire the show pony and get a workhorse for California."

Brian Dahle began his career in public service when his neighbors recruited him to serve on the regional Farm Service Agency board. His community elected him to the Lassen County Board of Supervisors, and after four terms he ran for a seat in the state Legislature, where he has represented northeastern California since 2012.

He continues to operate his family's farm and seed business back home in Bieber, where he and his wife, Megan Dahle, have raised their three children – Chase, Reagan and Roslyn.

"As a small-business owner, I live the effects of bad policies made in Sacramento every day," Dahle said. "The high cost of living is a huge burden for families and for businesses alike, and it is pushing a shocking number of both to simply flee for the state line."

"California is an amazing and beautiful state, but it is being run into the ground by Sacramento politicians. I am dedicated to restoring the California promise for ordinary families."

Senator Brian Dahle represents California's 1st Senate District, which contains all or portions of 11 counties, including Alpine, El Dorado, Lassen, Modoc, Nevada, Placer, Plumas, Sacramento, Shasta, Sierra, and Siskiyou. ★

Clinton Campaign Lawyers Paid Tech Company to Infiltrate Trump White House Servers | 12 Feb 2022 | To protect the effort and to ensure it would continue after the Trump White House, AG Barr gave former U.S Attorney John Durham special counsel status... Durham's efforts have unearthed a plot by Clinton campaign lawyers to infiltrate Trump tower and the servers of the Trump White House to tie the former president to the Russian collusion myth: Lawyers for the Clinton campaign paid a technology company to “infiltrate” servers belonging to Trump Tower, and later the White House, in order to establish an “inference” and “narrative” to bring to government agencies linking Donald Trump to Russia, a filing from Special Counsel John Durham says. Durham filed a motion on Feb. 11 focused on potential conflicts of interest related to the representation of former Clinton campaign lawyer Michael Sussman, who has been charged with making a false statement to a federal agent.

Calif. school mask rules to remain in effect after mandate expires | 14 Feb 2022 | California Health & Human Services Agency Sec. Dr. Mark Ghaly announced Monday that although the indoor mask mandate will be lifted for vaccinated people on Feb. 15, it will remain in effect for schoolchildren. After Feb. 15, unvaccinated people still will be required to be masked indoors, and everyone - vaccinated or not - will have to wear masks in higher-risk areas like public transit and nursing homes and other congregate living facilities, officials said.

California bill would make vaccine mandatory for employment | 12 Feb 2022 | Democratic California officials have introduced a bill which would force businesses to require their employees to be fully vaccinated against Covid-19 or face fines and other penalties. California State Assemblywoman Buffy Wicks-- a Democrat who worked on former President Barack Obama's 2008 and 2012 presidential campaigns -- introduced the bill on Thursday alongside fellow Democratic assembly members Cecilia Aguiar-Curry, Evan Low, and Akilah Weber. Employers would then have to show proof to the state authorities that the employees complied with the requirement by January 23 or face penalties.

Bodycam Footage Shows Capitol Police Striking Unconscious Trump Supporter Who Died on Jan. 6 | 11 Feb 2022 | Heavily redacted bodycam videos from the West Terrace tunnel on Jan. 6, 2021, provide a glimpse into conditions at the time Rosanne Boyland lay unconscious—including the sound of her being beaten with a large wooden stick by police. Several bodycam videos obtained by The Epoch Times have much of the screen blurred out by authorities, but key audio and video clues back up witness statements and other videos previously released by the U.S. Department of Justice. A 39-second video clip from the D.C. Metropolitan Police Department shows the gloved hand of Officer Lila Morris picking up a long stick that was lying alongside an unconscious Rosanne Boyland, and then striking the prone woman multiple times. The sound of the stick making contact with Boyland's body is clearly audible.

Federal government invokes Emergencies Act for first time ever in response to protests – 14 Feb 2022 | Prime Minister Justin Trudeau says he has invoked the Emergencies Act for the first in time in Canada's history to give the federal government extra powers to handle ongoing protests against pandemic restrictions [and mandates]. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has told his caucus he will invoke the never-before-used Emergencies Act to give the federal government extra powers to handle anti-vaccine mandate protests, sources say. Those sources, who were not authorized to speak publicly, said the prime minister informed the premiers of his decision this morning. The act gives special powers to respond to emergency scenarios affecting public welfare (natural disasters, disease outbreaks), public order (civil unrest), international emergencies or war emergencies.

CSRMF Names Tim Schroepfer as President & CEO

CSRMF Press Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - The California State Railroad Museum Foundation has named Tim Schroeffer as President & CEO, effective immediately. The Foundation works in collaboration with and provides fundraising support for the California State Railroad Museum located in Old Sacramento State Historic Park and Railtown 1897 State Historic Park in Jamestown. Schroeffer was first hired by the Foundation in 2019 as Director of Events & Marketing then assumed the role of Interim Chief Operating Officer in 2021 before his recent promotion to President & CEO. Schroeffer replaces Cheryl Marcell who left the Foundation in 2021.

“Tim demonstrated his leadership prowess as our Chief Operating Officer and earned the right to step in as President and CEO,” said Jim Houpt, Chair of the California State Railroad Museum Foundation Board of Directors. “Even as the pandemic still ruled much of our lives, Tim engineered the return of a sold-out Polar Express train after a two-year hiatus and quickly mastered the demands of running a fundraising and support organization for a world-class museum. Our board of directors expressed unanimous support for Tim's advancement to his new role."

In his multi-faceted new role as President & CEO, Schroeffer will manage a staff of 26, oversee fund-raising, sponsorship, and membership efforts, drive all marketing, social media, and public relations initiatives, and direct the production of the Foundation's high profile community events and activations.

A natural train enthusiast, Schroepfer was born and raised in Sacramento and was a frequent visitor and member of the Museum prior to moving away from the area. Said Schroepfer, "With the Museum entering its 41st year, and Railtown entering its 51st year as a tourist railway, it is an incredibly exciting time to be with the Foundation. It is an absolute honor and privilege to return home and help support our Parks partners."

Schroepfer has an impressive background in management and the orchestration of large-scale events and theatrical productions for prestigious organizations across the country. Before joining the California State Railroad Museum Foundation, Schroepfer worked as Director of Production & Preservation for Mahaiwe Performing Arts Center in Great Barrington, Massachusetts. Prior to that, he worked as Director of Production for the Utah Shakespeare Festival at Southern Utah University.

in Cedar City, Utah and as Production Manager for the University of California at Los Angeles, School of Theater, Film and Television. Ask Toni

Can't Afford to Pay My Medicare Premium Bill . . . What Can I Do?

Toni King

Toni:

My Medicare begins March 1st and I have received my first bill. This bill is for 4 months from March 1st to June 30th. I thought Medicare was monthly. If I pay this amount, then I cannot pay my rent for March.

This bill for Medicare is due February 25th and I was wondering if Medicare allows payments for Medicare Part B premium monthly? I cannot start my Social Security check because I work and make more than Social Security allows without having to pay a penalty because I am not at my full retirement age (FRA).

~ Jackie, St. Louis, Mo

Jackie:

You are correct that Americans are paying their Medicare premiums monthly by having the premium taken from their Social Security check. Social Security will automatically take the Medicare premiums from a person's Social Security check. Social Security will send a letter informing the Medicare beneficiary that Social Security is deducting the monthly Medicare Part B premiums from your Social Security check.

GOOGLE "Medicare Easy Pay" to pay your Medicare premiums monthly from your checking account or visit www.medicare.gov and you can research topics such as how to download and properly set up Medicare Easy Pay.

Not computer or internet "smart" to research options on "GOOGLE", then get help from a family member or friend that has access to a computer and ask them to assist you in downloading the Medicare Easy Pay form.

It may take about 6-8 weeks to have the "Medicare Easy Pay" form processed. You should make sure that you keep up with your monthly premiums, so your Medicare Parts A and B are not terminated. A simple way to pay a monthly premium or your complete Medicare premium bill by credit card until the Medicare Easy Pay form is activated is by visiting www.Medicare.com and create a Medicare account.

When creating a Medicare account, you must have applied for Medicare and have your Medicare number to open your account. On your Medicare account is your Medicare information such as:

- What Medicare Part D prescription drug plan or Medicare Advantage plan you are enrolled in.
- What your Medicare Part A and B enrollment dates are.
- What you can view on your "Medicare.gov" account is paying your Medicare premium, Medicare claims, print your Medicare card and much more.

If one does not stay current with their Medicare premiums, then the Medicare Beneficiary might lose their benefits and may be charged a penalty when they re-enroll. When someone does not have the required 40 working quarters to qualify for Medicare or are married with a spouse that does have the 40 quarters, then they may also have to pay a premium for Part A which is expensive.

Medicare Part D prescription drug premiums are not available via the Medicare site but are managed by the Medicare Part D prescription drug company. One can pay their Medicare prescription drug premium either directly to the prescription drug company by check or credit card. Once one begins receiving their Social Security check, then both Medicare Part B and Part D prescription drug premiums can be taken from their Social Security check.

Toni Says® Many do not realize that they can pay their Part B premiums monthly when not receiving their Social Security check by following the rules set up by Medicare. Take your time and study this Medicare rule.

Assembly Republicans Elect Gallagher as Leader

James Gallagher

By Katja Townsend, Assembly Republicans

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - The Assembly Republican Caucus unanimously voted to elect James Gallagher (R-Yuba City) the new Assembly Republican Leader.

"For the last three years, I have been laser focused on growing the Republican caucus by providing Californians an alternative to the high taxes, out-of-control crime and runaway inflation that have resulted from Democratic leadership," said Assembly Republican Leader Emeritus Marie Waldron

(Valley Center). "It has been an honor to have led our caucus since 2018."

"I am grateful for the trust my colleagues have placed in me to help lead our caucus and work to better the lives of Californians up and down the state," said Gallagher. "Assemblymember Waldron has been a tremendous leader for us winning victories throughout California. I plan to build on her legacy as the new leader of the caucus." ★

Californians Are Having Problems Paying Medical Bills

California Health Care Foundation Special Release

NORTHERN CA (MPG) - The rising cost of health care continues to be one of California’s most urgent issues, with one in four Californians saying they have struggled to pay at least one medical bill in the past 12 months, up from 20% last year and 49% saying they have postponed care due to cost, according to a newly released statewide survey conducted by the California Health Care Foundation and NORC at the University of Chicago. Of those who postponed care, the survey finds, 47% report their health condition worsened as a result, up from 41% last year.

More than eight in 10 Californians say it is “extremely” or “very” important for the California governor and legislature to work on “making health care more affordable” in the coming year, a level of support higher than several other noteworthy issues, from improving public education and combating climate change to addressing racial inequality.

The 2022 CHCF California Health Policy Survey was conducted September 27 through November 17, 2021, among a random representative sample of 1,681 adults age 18 or older living in California. The annual poll captures Californians’ views on health care affordability, housing and homelessness, experiences with health care, and COVID-19.

Although it was conducted before the Omicron surge, this year’s survey finds COVID-19 continues to be a major concern for Californians, with 56% saying their health has been negatively impacted by the stress and anxiety caused by the pandemic. One in ten Californians says the pandemic has worsened their chronic health conditions.

priorities is making sure state and county public health departments have the resources they need to respond to emergencies (51% said this was “extremely” important; 34% said “very” important). This was followed by ensuring there are enough doctors, nurses, and other health providers across California (48% “extremely;” 39% “very”), providing all Californians with access to health insurance coverage (48% “extremely;” 32% “very”), and making sure people with mental health problems get the treatment they need (47% “extremely;” 36% “very”).

“The latest numbers show that the high cost of health care and the high cost of housing are both taking a toll on the health of Californians,” says Kristof Stremikis, director of Market Analysis and Insight at the California Health Care Foundation. “The rising cost of medical care is causing millions of Californians, especially people with lower incomes and communities of color to postpone care and experience worse health outcomes as a result. Californians are clear they want this problem to be addressed.”

While cost issues are a rising concern for all Californians, they have become particularly serious for lower-income households: 43% of Californians with lower incomes report having problems paying for at least one medical bill, an increase from 32% compared to last year. More than six in 10 Californians overall worry about unexpected medical bills (63%) and out-of-pocket health care costs (60%), and half of Californians are worried about affording monthly health insurance premiums (51%) and prescription drugs (49%). By comparison, 52% of Californians said they were worried about gas costs and 50% worry about the cost of their rent or mortgage.

Nearly one in five Californians (17%) who report trying to make an appointment for physical health care say it was “very” or “somewhat” difficult to find a provider who took their insurance. Latinx Californians (21%) are twice as likely as White Californians (11%) to report difficulty, and those with lower incomes (30%) are more likely than those with higher incomes (12%) to report that it was difficult to find a physical health care provider who took their insurance.

One in five Californians (19%) say they or someone close to them has experienced a period of homelessness in the past five years. The same proportion (19%) are “very” or “somewhat” worried about experiencing homelessness. Californians also see a connection between affordable housing and health status with 80% of Californians saying lack of affordable housing impacts the physical or mental health of people with low incomes “a lot” or “some.”

Nearly six in 10 Californians (59%) believe that the health care system treats people unfairly based on their race or ethnic background: one quarter (26%) “regularly” and a third (33%) “occasionally.” Eighty-three percent of Black Californians expressed this belief, a significantly higher percentage than any other race or ethnic group. In addition, Black and Latinx Californians were more likely than White or Asian Californians to report negative experiences by a doctor or other health care provider. ★
