The Old Crow Aced It

The Gillett family travelled from Grass Valley to meet WWII triple Ace pilot Bud Anderson (99). Anderson autographed his book, "To Fly and Fight" during the café opening event.

by Susan Maxwell Skinner

MCCLELLAN, CA (MPG) - California Aerospace Museum's Old Crow Café does not serve crow of any vintage. Closest item on the menu is chicken Caesar salad. But museum management last week had plenty to crow about when famed WW II veteran C.E. (Bud) Anderson declared the café open. Adding ribbon-cutting to his many triumphs, the greatest generation hero laughed at a restaurant being named for the P-51 Mustang he flew over Germany.

"I used to say we named Old Crow in honor of one of the most intelligent birds in the sky," said the 99-year-old. "But – for all my former drinking buddies – I can say it was named for good old sour mash Kentucky Bourbon. It wasn't a top-shelf brand, but in those days, it was all we pilots could afford."

The "ace" honorific is generally ascribed to wartime pilots who down five enemy aircraft. Anderson is one of the few aviators to achieve triple-ace legend. In the final year of the war, he and his Mustang vanquished 16 and a quarter enemy planes (the quarter-kill came from the defeat – shared with four fellow fighters – of a low-flying Luftwaffe bomber).

A model of Anderson's famous Mustang graced the café opening at McClelland. Retired Cal Trans planner Jerry Severson fashioned the one-third size replica from wood and aluminum. "I worked 1300 hours on it, as a tribute to Bud Anderson," explained Severson, who trots the mini-Mustang out for patriotic parades and civic events. "I'd read about his exploits and I loved his never-say-die pilot spirit. I'd never dreamed I'd meet him. But it turned out he lived less than a mile from me in Auburn. First time I saw Bud was when a statue was being dedicated to him at Auburn airport. He saw my airplane, came right over and asked where I wanted him to sign it. He'll talk to a 90-year-old veteran or a six-year-old kid and show them the same respect. Despite what he's done, he's the nicest, most humble man you ever know."

Few so humble can garner groupies. In recent years, Aerospace Museum supporter Kelly Kreeger recruited dozens of kids to form the Bud Anderson Super-Fan Club. These aviation buffs regularly show

County Supervisors Vote to Implement Laura's Law

From Sacramento
County Media

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - The Sacramento County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously on May 18 to implement "Laura's Law" - state legislation authorizing the courts to order outpatient treatment for individuals with a mental illness who may be a danger to themselves or others.

"Laura's Law" was named after 19-year-old Laura Wilcox, who was killed in 2001 while working as a receptionist at the Nevada County Department of Behavioral Health. Her killer was a former patient of the county's outpatient mental health clinic, who had been diagnosed with severe mental illness. After the incident, Laura's parents chose to advocate for assisted outpatient treatment (AOT) for individuals who meet strict legal criteria.

AOT permits courts to order treatment for those 18 years or older who suffer from a serious mental illness, are unable to survive safely in the community without supervision and meet at least one of the following criteria: Been hospitalized two or more times in the last 36 months due to mental illness; Demonstrated violent behavior toward themselves or others in the last 48 months; Has been offered treatment on a voluntary basis and refused it; Or, is deteriorating.

"We acknowledge that this is a complex issue with proponents on each side of this decision," said Ryan Quist, Behavioral Health Director. "We are committed to engaging with all of our stakeholders in a community planning process to minimize concerns and design the best program for Sacramento County."

California counties previously had the option to "opt in" to the program and that has been done in most of the larger counties. Sacramento County has historically not opted in to providing AOT services.

The process changed, however, with the passage last year of AB 1976, which requires counties like Sacramento to hold public hearings at the Board of Supervisors about whether to "opt in" or "opt out," and if a County chooses to "opt out," they have to provide specific reasons. The deadline for Counties to have a hearing and formally decide is July 1, 2021.

In Sacramento County, the program is estimated

Redistricting Begins in Sacramento County

By Kim Nava,
Sacramento County

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - The process for redrawing boundary lines for each of the five supervisorial districts in Sacramento County has begun.

Every ten years, following the Census count, the resulting census data is used to geographically define electoral districts, at all levels of government, through a process called redistricting. Redistricting ensures that each of the electoral district boundaries have about the same number of people and comply with the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Redistricting will look different this year than in years past. This year, the County will comply with the Fair Maps Act, which revised the criteria and process used by counties and cities when they adjust electoral district boundaries. The Fair Maps Act intends to maximize public participation and increase transparency in the redistricting process by requiring substantial public hearing and outreach requirements for adjusting district boundaries.

To that end, Sacramento County's Redistricting 2021 webpage is live and will be a vital resource for County residents to learn more about redistricting, the importance of public participation in redistricting and how to participate in the process.

The website also includes current district and other important Sacramento County maps for reference, as well as past and future meetings/hearings, FAQs, and an explanation of the Sacramento County Redistricting Process (with printouts of the process available in ten languages).

Redistricting is important because it determines which neighborhoods and communities will be grouped together for the purposes of electing a Board member. Residents have the opportunity to provide input on what kind of boundaries should be drawn to best represent their community. Redistricting is based on the idea of "one person, one vote" which makes sure all people can be represented fairly, and how district lines are drawn influences who is elected.

Sacramento County residents are encouraged to participate in the redistricting process. Residents can sign up for Redistricting news stories, information and upcoming meetings via email or text. People can also view past and upcoming meetings at the Redistricting Meetings webpage and are encouraged to check in for additional upcoming workshops and hearings.

The Board of Supervisors will work directly with County staff and redistricting consultants to engage the public through workshops, hearings, community meetings, mapping tools and public outreach to complete the redistricting requirements and adopt new boundaries.

Sacramento County will schedule public workshops in all five supervisorial districts, virtual workshops, and Board of Supervisors presentations about redistricting, the process, mapping tools and other information beginning in June and running through the rest of the year.

The County will receive 2020 Census data from the state as early as September 30, 2021. The original plan was to deliver the data to states on or before March 31, 2021; however, COVID-19 significantly impacted Census operations which caused the nearly six-month delay in data delivery.

The County must adopt final maps no later than December 15, 2021, which means the County

Tips for 2021 Graduates to Prepare for a Fiercely Competitive Job Market

Commentary
by Krista Wignall

Colleges may return to normalcy in a few months as the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines continues. Meanwhile, in sharp contrast to that positive news, millions of college students will graduate this spring facing bleak employment prospects.

The COVID-19 pandemic caused unemployment to soar in 2020 and is expected to affect the job market for graduates again this year. Some labor analysts see the pandemic perhaps having this ripple effect on graduates for years to come. These sobering trends are why students should expand their preparation for the job market and know what action steps they need to take, says Vince Thompson (www.meltatl.com), founder and CEO of the marketing agency MELT and author of Building Brand You: How To Use Your College Experience To Find And Win Your First Job.

“Thanks to COVID-19, if you’re in college right now or recently graduated, you’re facing the toughest job market in our lifetime,” Thompson says. “With so many people unemployed and displaced, people will be willing to take a lesser job for a lesser salary just to get back in the market.

“To use a fishing analogy, it’s going to take a lot of casts to get a few bites for interviews and ultimately land the job. But don’t let that discourage you. Instead, let it inspire you to grow and learn what you need to know to set yourself apart from other candidates. It’s all about positioning yourself by building your resume, brand, and your network. And being enthusiastic about the process.”

Thompson suggests the following tips for soon-to-be graduates as they prepare for a fiercely competitive job market:

Build your brand. The job market is so competitive that companies are looking for far more than candidates with a high GPA. “Hiring managers often seek well-rounded young people who can communicate, collaborate and create,” Thompson says. “They’re looking for people who have been active outside the classroom as well – in clubs, the community, volunteer work, etc. All of these aspects are part of your brand. Also, the new litmus test in the job market will be, ‘What did you do to improve yourself and others during COVID? Or did you do nothing and feel sorry for yourself?’ Employers are going to be looking for those intangibles.” Organize your marketing playbook. “Utilizing a complete marketing playbook means leveraging your abilities and interests on social media platforms,” Thompson says. “This is where you display your public brand. Your profile, posts, photos, and videos reflect what you’re about. It’s key that your presentation and message are consistent on each platform that you use.”

Expand your networking. “Today, about 75 percent of new hires happen through networking,” Thompson says. “Build a target list of people to contact at companies that are hiring. Join discussion groups on LinkedIn that can expand your contacts and your knowledge. Connect with thought leaders and ask them questions to gain insight.”

Upskill. “Companies want young people who are versatile and able to learn new skills quickly,” Thompson says. “Research skills required in fields that you’re pursuing and get credentialed through online training programs. If opportunities are far fewer in your chosen field, research where your best skills apply in other industries.”

Prepare for virtual interviewing. “When you interview in person, your body language, enthusiasm, handshake and small talk help build a connection with the interviewer,” Thompson says. “Being interviewed on a screen demands that you be fully engaged, establish a rapport, have continual eye contact and express yourself clearly.”

“How you stand out from the crowd has always been the differentiator in hiring,” Thompson says. “It’s much a bigger crowd now for fewer jobs, so the importance of preparation in all facets has never been more important.”

Horseshoes at the VFW, Who Knew that was a Thang?

By Cecilia Lee Feser

ANTELOPE, CA (MPG) - Sandi Abbott dropped on my Facebook site an invite to the VFW horseshoe tournament on Sunday, May 16. Horseshoes, OK why not? My oh my it is a really, really, big ‘thang’, with world championships. Local teams play each other with names like VFW4647 on their game shirts, American Legion and their game shirts, all stretching and taking practice throws. This event is a big deal! It is a matter of honor and pride, mostly, bragging rights!! All done with a party atmosphere, a few, okay several adult libations, lol. Once the tournament is over, there will be a big cookout with backslapping and good job, I would’ve liked to have been there for that part too. I met Sandi as she was signing up the teams. First, you can have up to 10 to 15 players on a team. The team name is usually the person or company who is sponsoring that team. The sponsors pay for the shirts and in return get advertisement every time the team wears their shirts outside.

In order to have a team you must have 2 physical horseshoe courts/pits on your property. John Wise, also mentioned, once the teams are signed up, they draw from a pack of cards, called a “Blind Draw” to see who will be teammates. I also learned, you pitch a horseshoe not toss one. It is a Stake not a peg that you throw your horseshoe (not shoes) at. Here’s the way a game is scored: if you get a ringer that is 3 pts. If you land within 6” it is 1 pt., lastly if you have a “leaner” it too is 1 pt. One game is 21 points. I met Jeff Williams with a great story. In 1973, he and his brother, Walter Ray Williams, Jr., were both up for the Jr. World Championship of Horseshoes. They had dinner and went back in the hotel room. Boys being boys one said something and the other took offense and they went to the floor wrestling each other. Walter Ray turned the wrong way and broke his finger! I gasped as he continued, “It was a simple kid fight”. I told him, “that almost sounds like a ‘wink wink’ story”. He just laughed and kept talking about how it turned out. Even with his few fingers in a splint, Walter came in 4th. That tells you how good he was. He also said, “he caught lots of bulling once they got back to school with others going wink wink too”. Turns out the Williams have many horseshoe trophies. One brother has a championship in bowling. Their mother was the 1989 CA Women’s Horseshoe Pitching champion. Congratulations to a Gung Ho family. I was really surprised how fun the morning was. One last thing, I wanted to know what do you win at the end of this tournament? Sandi said, “Each team of two puts in $10 ($5 each). There were 11 teams registered. Once the winner is determined it is 100 percent of the money taken in at registration. Broken down is 60% goes to the winner 30% to second place and finally 10 for third place. More than that is the camaraderie, the ribbing, the backslapping and much laughing. I may be taking up the sport of pitching. Low effort, lots of bending and laughing.★

to cost $2.5 million annually. The Board of Supervisors and Sacramento County Behavioral Health Services will meet again in September to determine funding.

Community Input

In March, Sacramento County Behavioral Health Services virtually hosted informational sessions and solicited community input via a brief survey for community members to hear input on whether to implement or opt out of Laura’s Law/AOT. 280 individuals participated in the survey. Nearly three-quarters of participants indicated that they think Sacramento County should implement Assisted Outpatient Treatment (AOT) (73 percent), 15 percent of participants indicated that they think Sacramento County should opt-out of AOT, and 12 percent of participants indicated that they were neutral or unsure about the decision.

Court Requirements of AOT

AOT is a court-ordered outpatient treatment service for adults, ages 18 years and older, who have a serious mental illness and a history of (a) psychiatric hospitalizations, (b) incarcerations, or (c) acts, threats or attempts of serious violent behavior towards themselves or others. Consumers must first be offered voluntary treatment within the past 10 days. The court cannot order involuntary administration of medications.

Family members, roommates, treatment providers and law enforcement may request an investigation to determine whether the consumer meets criteria. Only the County mental health director or his or her designee may file a petition with the court. The person named in the petition has a right to a defender appointed by the court.

If a judge finds that the individual meets the criteria, the AOT order would be for a 180-day treatment period, not to exceed 180 days. After 180 days, the director of the AOT program can apply for an additional 180 days of treatment. If the consumer is not compliant with treatment, the consumer can be transported to a hospital and held up to 72 hours. After 72 hours, the same hospitalization inpatient criteria such as being a danger to self, others, or gravely disabled.

Sacramento County Behavioral Health Services provides a full array of culturally competent and linguistically proficient mental health services to individuals of all ages. Services include prevention and early intervention, outpatient services, case management services, crisis intervention and stabilization services, and inpatient psychiatric hospitalizations. ★

DA Anne Marie Schubert Announces Open Registration for Virtual Crime Lab Youth Shadow Days

By Shelly Orio, Sacramento County District Attorney’s Office

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - Attorney Anne Marie Schubert announces open registration for the 4th Annual Crime Lab Youth Shadow Days. This is the second year this program is being offered virtually.

The Crime Lab Youth Shadow Day was launched in 2018, and quickly exceeded capacity. A second day was added to meet the high demand, resulting in a total of 220 student participants from approximately 50 high schools across the county. In 2020, over 100 students participated in the program virtually.

Participating students will visit the District Attorney’s Crime Lab virtually and meet criminalists who are experts in the various fields of forensic science and crime scene investigations (CSI). They are provided a virtual learning experience in several areas including blood spatter analysis, bullet trajectory, trace evidence, firearms and tool comparison, and drug analysis.

There will be two virtual Crime Lab Youth Shadow Days this year: WHEN: Friday, July 16, 2021 OR Friday, July 23, 2021 ~ 10:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. WHERE: Virtually – broadcasted live

It’s important we continue to engage our youth and inspire them to pursue careers in the criminal justice system. Photo credit Sac DA

via Zoom from the District Attorney’s Crime Lab

The program is open to current Sacramento County high school students. Priority will be given to senior high school students. Students will need to submit completed registration forms and a signed permission slip, which can be downloaded at www.sacda.org.

The deadline to apply is July 2, 2021. Space is limited and on a first come, first served basis. Please register early.

DA Anne Marie Schubert stated, “Given the success of last year’s first-ever virtual Crime Lab Youth Shadow Day, we are pleased to offer this program virtually for a second year. It’s important we continue to engage our youth and inspire them to pursue careers in the criminal justice system while keeping everyone safe so our community can continue to make progress against COVID-19.” ★

Inflated Job Numbers Prop Up Bullet Train

By Dan Walters
CALMatters

Whenever politicians spend large sums of taxpayer money on pet projects, they invariably overstate their supposed economic benefits, particularly creating oodles of “good-paying jobs.”

They all do it, using a deceptive assumption that if one worker works one day on the project, it’s counted as a “job.”

Ralph Vartabedian, a reporter for the Los Angeles Times who – thank goodness – specializes in telling us what’s really happening, or not, in the state’s woe-begone high-speed rail project, punctures its job creation myth in a recent article.

Vartabedian cites a banner on a bullet train viaduct in Fresno claiming “5,000 jobs and counting” but reveals that while consuming many billions of dollars, the project has employed only about 1,000 construction workers at any one time.

“The boast of 5,000 jobs refers to the number of workers dispatched from union halls,” he wrote. “Each time a worker is sent to a job site, whether for one day or hundreds of days, it counts as a job for the purpose of the banners.”

“Rail authority Chief Executive Brian Kelly

defended the worker count as a valid measure of progress, saying the authority has been doing it for years.”

In other words, since inflated job numbers have been used for years, Kelly would have us believe it’s a valid practice.

In fact as Vartabedian discovered from analyzing bullet train data, “hourly workers have received about $265 million of the $6.1 billion that has been spent on construction, representing just 4%. Of the total $8.1 billion spent on the project, the labor portion is even smaller, 3%. The $265 million is less than what the rail authority spends every three months.”

The much-inflated job creation claims are important because construction union support has been one of the most important factors in keeping the project alive despite lacking a rational justification.

The original vision, backed by voters, was for a statewide north-south system of high-speed travel, but no one ever came up with a plan for financing such a system, which would cost upwards of $100 billion.

The Fresno structures, dubbed “Stonehenge” by local critics, are part of a very limited stretch in the San Joaquin Valley, financed by some state bonds, a federal grant and a share of proceeds from the state’s auctions of greenhouse gas emission permits. At the moment, it would run from a few miles north of Fresno to a few miles north of Bakersfield.

Gov. Gavin Newsom came close to killing the project after taking office in 2019, only to back-track under pressure from construction unions.

Newsom then declared that he wants to expand the current project northward a few miles to Merced and southward a few miles to Bakersfield, assuming that someday it could be connected to the Bay Area and Los Angeles. But that also added billions of dollars to the projected costs.

Newsom’s latest budget proposal would appropriate $4.2 billion from remaining voter-approved bonds to advance his version of the project and mentions “potential federal funds” to fill the remaining financial hole – a reference to President Joe Biden’s ambitious infrastructure program.

However, Newsom’s plan doesn’t sit well with some legislative leaders who would prefer improving commuter transit. Some bullet train money has already been shifted to electrifying the Caltrain commuter service on the San Francisco peninsula, and Southern California lawmakers, led by Assembly Speaker Anthony Rendon, want similar diversions for their region.

The commuter projects would probably use inflated job creation claims as well, but at least they would be serving real needs, rather than a unrealistic pipedream.

Dan Walters has been a journalist for nearly 60 years, spending all but a few of those years working for California newspapers. ★

Newsom Transforms Taxpayer Protection into Welfare

Ted Gaines

By Betsey Hodges,
Office of Senator
Ted Gaines

California actually has a government spending limit, hard as that may be to believe, and Gavin Newsom is making a mockery of it, just as his predecessor did.

In 1979, a year after signing off on the revolutionary Proposition 13, voters passed Proposition 4, implementing the “Gann Limit,” which would peg California’s state spending to the 1978-79 level and only let it grow adjusted for inflation and population. State revenues above the voter-approved limit can be reckoned with several different ways, including refunding half of the excess revenues to taxpayers, with the other half going to schools.

Newsom is choosing the refund path for this year’s massive Gann Limit excess, which is currently estimated at $16 billion dollars. But instead of sending their money back to the taxpayers in relation to how much they paid, giving everyone a slice of the rebate in proportion to their tax contributions, Newsom is turning the program into a giant transfer payment scheme.

Paul Gann, the father of Prop. 13 and the namesake of this taxpayer protection plan, would be dumbfounded by Newsom’s willful misunderstanding and shameless appropriation of his taxpayer-protection initiative.

The wealthiest taxpayers in this state, the top five percent, paid nearly 70-percent of California income taxes last year. Those citizens were also supposed to get relief from the Gann Limit. Instead, they get nothing.

Newsom is sending rebates to the bottom two-thirds of tax filers only. What about the top-third, who paid a whopping 97-percent of the total income taxes in 2018, for example? In Newsom’s redistribution plan these top payers are simply out of luck, even though it’s their payments providing the bulk of the excess. And before you shout, “tax the rich!” understand that in that same tax year, we are talking about people making $60,000 a year.

It’s great that the Governor wants to help taxpayers during the pandemic, even though it was state policy that caused so much of the damage to small businesses and killed so many jobs. If the governor and legislature want to make more direct payments to citizens out of the general fund, after Gann Limit refunds have been fairly distributed, be my guest.

In fact, I challenge Governor Newsom and the legislature to find ways to make the state more affordable and livable for all citizens, starting with lower taxes on personal income, on business income, on gasoline, and by eliminating green energy mandates that have forced our electricity prices up 9-times faster than the national average over the past decade. These steps would help every day of the year, not just on the day he announces his budget.

Getting money back into the hands of job-creators – by lowering costs and equitably rebating the Gann Limit dollars – would actually fuel a California rebound.

But to repurpose a taxpayer protection act, approved by voters, into a new tax and welfare plan, is bad-faith politics and speaks to why Newsom is facing a recall.

Governor Brown’s 2017 budget dodged the Gann Limit by magically reclassifying $22 billion in spending as neither state nor local, as required by the original Proposition, making it disappear, along with the hopes of fiscal conservatives.

Brown would not adhere to the mandates of the 1979 Gann Limit reform; he tricked his way past the law and shafted taxpayers along the way. Apparently, Governor Newsom was watching and learning, waiting for his own opportunity to betray the intent of California’s voters.

Mission accomplished. Newsom’s plan is ugly political alchemy, where he mutates a rebate program into a new tax on the homeowners, small business owners, teachers, police and other middle-class people who will be paying the taxes they will never get back. He should refund ALL taxpayers according to their tax payments and quit manipulating the Gann Limit for his political needs. ★

The Weight of Memorial Day

For countless families across the nation, Memorial Day is a stark – and often painful – reminder of those loved ones who were never afforded the opportunity to be honored as veterans. Image by Matt Sawyers from Pixabay

Commentary by Robert Graves

For the second year in a row, Memorial Day may look a little different than in years past. However, the spirit of the day, along with our memories and emotions, remains the same. For countless families across the nation, Memorial Day is a stark – and often painful – reminder of those loved ones who were never afforded the opportunity to be honored as veterans.

Their sacrifice is a true expression of selfless service – something no one would pick for themselves. Whether they volunteered to fight in a war, served at a time of peace or never expected to wear our nation’s uniform until their draft number came up, they represent the best America has to offer.

We feel their losses, from the sacred and silent hills of Arlington National Cemetery to the many other final resting places worldwide. Far too many mothers, fathers, siblings and children feel the immense weight of seeing an empty chair at the table year-round.

This fall marks the 20th year we’ve been at war, longer than any American conflict that came before. About 2.7 million Americans have served in Iraq and Afghanistan, over half of whom deployed more than once. Those returning veterans are now our fellow community members, neighbors and friends, who can speak of the bravery and sacrifices known only to those who witnessed it firsthand.

There are also incredible accounts of courageous heroes who cannot speak for themselves. For example, Sgt. 1st Class Alwyn Cashe will become the first black service member to receive the Medal of Honor for actions in Iraq or Afghanistan.

At 35 years old, and on his second deployment to the war-torn country following the 2003 invasion, Cashe didn’t hesitate to sacrifice himself to save his fellow soldiers. His Bradley Fighting Vehicle had struck a roadside bomb and was soon engulfed in flames. Drenched in fuel and under enemy fire, Cashe entered the blaze not once but three times to pull others out of the vehicle.

Cashe sustained second- and third-degree burns to more than 70% of his body, but despite his severe injuries, he insisted on being the last soldier on a medical evacuation helicopter.

Four of those soldiers perished, and Cashe succumbed to his injuries 22 days later, joining the ranks of those taken away far too soon.

While it is impossible ever to know what was going through his mind in those chaotic yet critical moments following the attack, we may catch a glimpse of what it could have been by listening to Medal of Honor recipient Army Capt. Florent “Flo” Groberg. With another soldier’s help, Groberg put himself between a suicide bomber and a dismounted patrol in Afghanistan in 2012. Although Groberg thankfully survived, four soldiers were killed.

Groberg has said, “In combat, there might be a moment where you have to make a decision that will more than likely dictate whether or not you live or die. When you are willing to put yourself in front of that bullet, in front of that suicide bomber, in front of that mortar, in front of anything that is going to kill you for your men – that’s love.”

We know Cashe loved his soldiers – he made the ultimate sacrifice for them. The harsh reality of war, and military service in general, is that, sadly, not everyone will make it home.

As we gather together – whether safely in person or online – let us honor the memory of those heroes no longer with us, and let us strive to live up to the example set by such selfless patriots today and every day.

Robert Graves is California Director of Operations Department of American Veterans, California. ★

You're in Good Shape Either Way

Dear Dave,

I can't decide whether to sell or keep a rental property. Except for the property in question I'm debt-free, and I make $90,000 a year. I owe $20,000 on the property, and it is worth $65,000. What do you think?

– George

Dear George

You're in pretty good shape financially, and you could probably pay off the rental property in a year or two. So really, it's a matter of personal preference. I will say this; there's nothing worse than being a landlord if you don't want to be one.

It's not a bad thing to feel that way. Some folks have fun and enjoy landlording for a while, but then other things become more important. It's your life and your feelings that matter at this point.

If you still enjoy dabbling in real estate and being a landlord, go for it. If the shine has worn off, get rid of the place. If the latter is the case, you'll get the responsibility of being a landlord off your back and become debt-free all at the same time!

– Dave

Dear Dave,

I've been following your advice for about a year. I'm almost out of debt, and I live on a budget, but looking toward the future it seems like it will be very difficult to save up for a down payment on a home. I live in Chicago, and property prices are very expensive. I have a friend in Georgia who suggested I buy a less expensive property there, then fix it up and flip it to make the money I would need for a down payment. What do you think of this idea?

– Erik

Dear Erik

When you take on the kind of work you're talking about, you need to oversee what's happening every step of the way. You're working out details, keeping an eye on the crew, and having to handle a dozen other issues tied to the project. Plus, you can't just walk up to a house or see it online, buy it, and expect to come out ahead in the deal.

People who flip houses for a living professionally eyeball dozens, sometimes hundreds, of properties to buy just one. It's not an easy way to make money, and it's definitely not something I'd recommend doing from a distance. In short, I wouldn't do it, Erik. Fixing and flipping properties is a hands-on business, and trying to do it from 700 miles away would be a nightmare.

Just keep on working the budget and save as much as you can. I'd consider getting a part-time job for a while to add to the down payment fund before I'd try to fix and flip a house that far away.

– Dave

Farm Bureau President Urges Additional Flexibility in Conservation Programs

By Dave Kranz, California Farm Bureau

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - Land that produces food and farm products also provides crucial conservation and climate benefits – and federal conservation programs must focus on keeping working lands working, according to California Farm Bureau testimony before a congressional subcommittee today.

California Farm Bureau President Jamie Johansson testified virtually before the U.S. House Agriculture Subcommittee on Conservation and Forestry.

Johansson said the California Farm Bureau supports participation by farmers, ranchers and foresters in voluntary, climate-smart practices that sequester carbon, reduce greenhouse gas emissions and build climate resilience.

“Our farmers and ranchers have a proven track record of doing more with less,” he said, noting farmer investments in water recharge, irrigation efficiency, energy conservation, cleaner-running farm equipment and numerous other on-farm conservation practices.

“With so much already happening at the field level, it is important to consider how new federal policies and programs will overlay with existing state climate programs and grower-led initiatives,” Johansson said.

To achieve the best results, he said, federal conservation programs must retain and enhance their flexibility to incorporate all crop types and farm sizes. Practices encouraged by the programs must be “broad and outcome-based,” Johansson said, “emphasizing a list of options as opposed to a prescriptive checklist.”

Noting that he and his family have been forced to evacuate due to wildfires on three separate occasions, Johansson urged the subcommittee to include forestry and grazing practices as strategies to restore forest and rangeland health, and to ensure sufficient disaster assistance for farmers and ranchers.

In encouraging long-term adoption of climate-smart agricultural practices, financial and technical assistance to farmers and ranchers must be “consistent, sustainable and long term,” he said.

“To further the adoption of on-farm climate-smart practices, we must not only compensate early adopters but also consider the economics of the farm and assist those being expected to do more,” Johansson concluded. “Only in working together can we achieve solutions that make agriculture more climate resilient while remaining viable.”

The California Farm Bureau works to protect family farms and ranches on behalf of nearly 32,000 members statewide and as part of a nationwide network of nearly 5.6 million Farm Bureau members.

NOTICE TO READERS

California law requires that contractors taking jobs that total $500 or more (labor and/or materials) be licensed by the Contractors State License Board. State law also requires that contractors include their license numbers on all advertising. Check your contractor's status at www.cslb.ca.gov or 800-321-CSLB (2752). Unlicensed persons taking jobs that total less than $500 must state in their advertisements that they are not licensed by the Contractors State License Board.

DISCLAIMER

Be wary of out of area companies. Check with the local Better Business Bureau before you send any money for fees or services. Read and understand any contracts before you sign. Shop around for rates.

OK, LADIES, I SPECIFICALLY TOLD ALL OF YOU NOT TO EAT THE SEED FROM THE FARMER.

I COME OUT HERE AND THE FIRST THING I SEE IS YOU PECKING UP EVERYTHING IN SIGHT.

ALL WE DO IS EAT SEED AND GOSSIP. WE'RE BETTER THAN THAT. I SAY WE ALL PROTEST!

WHY DO I GET THE FEELING I'LL BE EATING ALONE AND NOW I'M THE CENTER OF GOSSIP?

Our promise to you...

No rate increases for a FULL year
AND
Second Month FREE ALWAYS

That's right. If you ask those other guys, they'll freely admit you're going to get three and four rate increases in the first year. That means if you move in at $125, by the end of the year you could be paying DOUBLE that, $250, or even more!

We don't do business that way at A-1 Storage. We respect our customers and we appreciate your business. If we quote you a price, we stand behind that price for a full year.

Call us at 916-432-2790. Allow us to quote you a price on a clean and convenient storage unit, and then go talk to the other guys. No rush.

We'll be right here waiting for you!
