Our Essential Workers

"Social workers are unsung heroes that are essential to community well-being. They are driven by several core values, including service, social justice and the dignity and worth of human beings," said Michelle Callejas, Director of Sacramento County, Child, Family and Adult Services. Sacramento County News

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - Sacramento County is helping celebrate this year's Social Work Month with the theme "Social Workers are Essential" to highlight the priceless contributions social workers make in our community, especially during COVID-19.

The goal of Social Work Month is to inform the public, policymakers and legislators about the way the nation's social workers each day meet people where they are and help them live to their fullest potential. Social work is one of the fastest-growing professions in the United States, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

There are currently about 700,000 professional social workers in our nation, but that number is expected to rise to more than 800,000 by 2029. Social work has been around for more than a century and has made significant contributions to our nation. For example, social workers such as social reformer Jane Addams, former Labor Secretary Frances Perkins, and civil rights leaders Dorothy Height, Whitney Young and Ida B. Wells have helped Americans secure voting rights, equal rights, Social Security, unemployment insurance and other programs.

You will find social workers throughout society – protecting children and vulnerable adults from abuse and neglect and providing mental health and substance use disorder treatment. They can be found assisting active-duty military, veterans and their families; in schools; helping corporations better serve their communities; in community organizations; and in local and state government.

Sacramento County Department of Child, Family and Adult Services (DCFAS) has 524 social workers across the department. They work across a number of areas, including child and elder abuse and neglect investigations and follow-up. They help keep children and families safely together and/or reunify them or help children find "forever families." Some social workers assess the need for home care services that allow individuals to remain in their homes, rather than institutions. Others serve individuals that are gravely disabled and those who are living with severe mental illness, supporting them to live in the least restrictive settings within our community.

News for Twin Rivers
Unified School District

MCCLELLAN, CA (MPG) - The Twin Rivers school community is jumping with joy expecting PK-12th grade students after spring break returning for in-person teaching (hybrid schedule) and learning as of Tuesday, April 6. The District has worked diligently to ensure a safe return to classrooms. In following all public health protocols, face masks and social distancing will be a common sight throughout TR schools and offices.

While nearly 14,600 students are expected to be returning for in-person teaching and learning, approximately 9,700 Twin Rivers Unified School District students will continue with distance learning.

At all schools children are to be arriving for classes following all District and public health protocols, including wearing masks, social distancing, and safety protocols in and outside the classroom. District schools have recommended a social distancing of 6 feet to 3 feet for students.

School buses are also picking up and transporting students to school following all public health protocols as well.

The District will continue to amend school plans as the COVID-19 guidance changes into the year. While Sacramento County still remains in Red Tier (2) as of April 5th, Twin Rivers Unified School District schools conditions are ready for the much anticipated return.

My Mother's Ring; I Wear It Still for the Lesson It Taught Me

By Cecilia Lee Feser

I was raised in the late 50's and up. At that time most women worked at home raising children. Also, there were a lot larger families-including ours. I was the oldest of five. My mom, Francis, was also a military wife moving overseas every three years following my Navy father's orders. I cannot even imagine traveling with even the first three of us every three years. My dad was not there for that part as he had to go "ahead" to the next station and get housing set up. The Navy paid to have my mother moved, but she was on her own when traveling. Once she got there my dad's sponsor had arrangements for help with the kids and showing her around to get to know the new town. I am so glad I was the oldest, as

I got the benefit of remembering many of the foreign places he was assigned to. There was Morocco, Italy, Greece. One of my sisters was actually born in Greece. Hawaii was another. Yes, it is not "overseas" as those others, but it kind of is. The last place we landed was Fort Meade, Maryland. It was where my dad retired from. Then it was off to North Carolina,

The Silver Lining of Proposition 19

Senator Ted Gaines

Commentary
by Ted Gaines

Proposition 19, The Home Protection for Seniors, Severely Disabled, Families, and Victims of Wildfire or Natural Disasters Act, was passed by voters last November, enacting significant changes to California’s property tax law. One provision of the measure – that concerning “parent-child” and “grandparent-grandchild” exclusions – triggered a massive property tax increase that took effect February 16.

Unfortunately for homeowners, the statute in its current state is a confusing mess. As a State Board of Equalization Member and dedicated taxpayer advocate, I continue to work closely with state legislators and county assessors to provide clarity and answer as many questions as possible for taxpayers affected by these provisions.

While Proposition 19 has some serious shortcomings – increasing taxes on tens of thousands of California families and making it more difficult and expensive to pass on property and family farms to your children and grandchildren – it does offer noteworthy tax benefits to homeowners who are nearing retirement, severely disabled or victims of natural disasters. Beginning April 1, 2021, qualified homeowners can transfer their low Proposition 13 tax base year value to a replacement home of any value, in any of California’s 58 counties. Homeowners who want to downsize, move closer to family, or relocate for any other reason can blend the taxable value of their old house with the purchase price of a new, and possibly more expensive home, reducing the property tax burden they would otherwise face.

When voters overwhelmingly passed Proposition 13 in 1978, it was to rein in property tax rates that had spiraled out of control as county governments routinely raised property taxes, in many cases forcing families from their homes. The landmark ballot initiative placed restrictions on how much a homeowner’s taxable value could increase every year, even if a home’s market value grew substantially.

California voters later passed Propositions 60, 90, and 110, which extended Proposition 13 protections to homeowners 55 or older and people with severe disabilities by giving them a one-time opportunity to retain their Proposition 13 tax base if they moved to a home of equal or lesser value within the same county or to one of the 10 counties with an intercounty agreement.

Proposition 19 further expands Proposition 13 benefits by allowing eligible homeowners to transfer their base year value up to three times. It also gives property owners whose homes were damaged or destroyed by a wildfire or other natural disaster the ability to transfer their Proposition 13 base year value to a new home. These provisions of Proposition 19 take effect on April 1, 2021 and give homeowners two years to transfer their base year value to a replacement residence in any county.

I support the base year transfer provisions of Proposition 19 because they allow more homeowners to take advantage of Proposition 13 protections that continue to be widely supported by California voters. While some of Proposition 19’s provisions hurt California taxpayers at a time when they need economic security the most, it’s always nice to have a silver lining.

Visit my website at boe.ca.gov/gaines for more information on Proposition 19. I encourage all homeowners to check with their County Assessor for specific county regulations, policies, and any paperwork associated with base year transfers.

Senator Ted Gaines (Ret.) was elected in November 2018 to represent the Board of Equalization’s First District. He is a leading taxpayer advocate and is committed to providing trustworthy and transparent representation for nearly ten million constituents in 30 counties of northern, eastern, and southern California. For more information, visit boe.ca.gov/Gaines. ★

Freeway Shooting on I-5

By A.J. McTaggart,
California Highway Patrol

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - On March 28, 2021, at approximately 3:48 PM, North Sacramento CHP Area units were dispatched to a call of a possible freeway shooting that occurred in the area of I-5 southbound just south of Arena Boulevard. Upon arrival to the scene, units discovered that a white Volvo XC90 had stopped on the right shoulder of I-5 southbound following an altercation with another motorist. While contacting the occupants of the Volvo, units discovered a shooting had occurred. The vehicle had multiple bullet holes and both the male driver and female passenger had sustained gunshot wounds. Units immediately began rendering medical aid to the driver and passenger; however, the male driver succumbed to his injuries at the scene. Shortly after arriving at the scene, Sacramento Fire Department transported the female passenger to a nearby hospital. At approximately 4:04 PM, all lanes of I-5 southbound from Arena Boulevard to I-80 were shut down for investigatory purposes and were reopened at approximately 9:39 PM. Investigators believe this was not a random shooting and there is no danger to the public. The investigation is currently ongoing.

Any persons who may have witnessed this incident or who can provide any additional information should call Officer A.J. McTaggart at the North Sacramento Area CHP office at 916-348-2300 or by cell phone at 916-798-0975. Follow us on Twitter @CHPNSac, Facebook.com/chpnorthsac, Instagram @chpnorthsac, or Nextdoor. ★

Civilian Tip Leads to Arrest and Recovery of Stolen Property

By Mike Harris,
California Highway Patrol

SACRAMENTO, CA. (MPG) - In February of this year, California Highway Patrol (CHP) investigators were contacted by a concerned citizen who stated they observed possible criminal activity taking place on a rural property in North Highlands. The citizen identified two heavy equipment vehicles they believed to be stolen.

After confirming the vehicles were stolen, CHP investigators conducted a joint operation with the support of the Placer County Regional Auto Theft Task Force (RATTF). RATTF detectives and Valley Division Air Operations responded to the area and conducted surveillance.

Once CHP and RATTF personnel gathered enough intel on the equipment thefts, a search warrant was served recovering a total of five stolen vehicles. During the search of the property a suspect was identified in the case, Scott Christopher Gray, 52, out of Sacramento. Through the investigation it was determined Grey was on active probation for vehicle theft resulting in a probation search. During the search Grey was found also to be in possession of stolen personal items from a U-Haul theft that occurred in the area.

CHP investigators coordinated with Sacramento County Probation Department and arrested Gray on multiple felony charges. Gray was then booked into the Sacramento County Jail.

As a result of community awareness this investigation recovered a total of 12 stolen vehicles with an estimated value of $300,000.

We want to thank the individuals who alerted the CHP to the thefts and ask that anyone with information related to this case please call Valley Division Investigative Services Unit at 916-731-6300.

The mission of the CHP is to provide the highest level of Safety, Service, and Security. ★

My Mother’s Ring; I Wear It Still for the Lesson It Taught Me

Gastonia to be specific.

It was at Fort Meade my mom made her stand. She had, as stated earlier, been a housewife/mother. The kids were now old enough and I was in high school. She had mentioned to my dad that she was going to go to the exchange and look at a ring she had seen a week back. This is not an article to bash my dad, I am sure he meant, oh, I don’t know, but the benefit of the doubt. Anyway, he stated she doesn’t even have a job, how could she pay for a ring?

Let’s say her hair went up, as mine would’ve, and she set to plan. She went to the entertainment center on base and applied as a cook. I mean when you’re feeding 7 people at every meal, you should be able to cook. She got the job; she got the ring and waved it at my dad. She was so dang proud of herself, and if I had not been a stupid teenager I would’ve told her so.

Life went on and I got married, had two children and turned 30!! I was in such a funk. It was like I had done all the things you plan to do and what now. I married, had the two boys, had our house and Den had a great job with the University of Davis as a computer programmer. All I felt was blahhhhh. I had moved to CA with Den before the boys came, so it was a long distance for mom and I. I was the ‘first’ grand kid’s child!! We talked often and I flew back every year. She knew I was 30 and in a funk. We talked about the next time I would fly back. I mean, if that lady can fly with 4 kids, I could sure fly with 2; I was my mom’s daughter.

Den made the flight plans, got the tickets, yet, I could not get excited. It had nothing to do with seeing my mom or leaving him for few weeks, it was just a funk. I am 30, what now. It is all I could dwell on.

I went to the mail box one last time the day before I left and there was a green slip in there. Please go to the post office you have a box there. Okay, I am excited, but have no idea what it could be. There was no ordering on line, as there was no online yet. Bundled the boys up, Den at work, and off we drove. I went in with the green slip and told them my name. The teller came out with a med size brown wrapped box with my name and it said from my mom. Alright, but it wasn’t any special day of the year or an anniversary. I got in the car and could hardly wait to get home. Got the boys set up with LEGOs and went into the living room to tear into the package. People get packages all the time now so you might not understand how important to get a package back then was. It was usually only from a relative, therefore very exciting.

As I tore open the box, a note fell out. “Lee, I know you’re having a hard time with turning 30. But you can do anything; you have years ahead of you. This is to remind you, you can do anything you put your mind to and I am giving you my ring so you will always remember ... Love always mom.

I have it to this day and wear it proudly. It’s been 30 years since she gave me that gift of, YOU CAN. I love you mom. ★

To the Dentist I Hate to Go...

By Cecilia Lee Feser

As I was sitting in the waiting room, in a place not too many people volunteer to come to, I was thinking, "Danga this is gonna hurt"! This is one waiting room where you should not be kept waiting. The waiting gives you just more time to think. You can hear the moans of those before you. That high speed whizzing, the loud suction as a cavity is being fixed. Also, due to Covid world 2021, the office can no longer leave out magazines to entertain/distract you. Since that is just why I am here, to get a filling, I want to grab my bag and cancel for a different day. The gracious receptionist has given me some, “paperwork” to entertain me. Pretty much who’s paying for this and a few health questions. I try to stretch it out by saying NO to everything health question, and defiantly NO to the “are you pregnant?” At my age, I do not function well around all that energy, so big NO...

As I hand over the paperwork she says, “perfect timing, follow me” and I am ushered past other humans laid out flat and not moving with cleaning tool noises and a TV playing. For the life of me I do not understand the TV on as most of your visit is in the face up position and I sure don’t want to think the doctor is watching it!!

I am shown where to put my purse. I try not to look at, "the tray" with the torture instruments and that I foot looking needle waiting for me. I still have my mask on at this time and she hers. She puts the bib on me and we chat about the weather. In he comes. He sits on that small swiveling chair and makes sure with the nurse he has the right tooth in his sights. Yes, yes, and yes, she assures him it is the tooth he thinks it is, and he reaches into the “tray”. It gets very quiet. I feel a cold numbing gel on the tooth in question and he says, “I’ll be right back, let’s give that a few minutes.” I am thinking a few minutes for what? It’s still gonna hurt, but if it makes him feel better to say it, well OK.

Back he comes saying the open wide order along with, try NOT to move! I see this long needle and know it is going to be going in and out several pokes, to make sure the whole area is numb. I hate this part. He leaves again, to let that work.

Now is the serious part. “Don’t move, if you feel anything raise your left hand only,” he says. Then the whining of the drill, the smell of your tooth coming off and your hands are pressed very hard into the hand rests. Maybe there should be straps? Hmmm. Then comes the water and the sucking sound, along with, “Spit here please”. Of course it was over before I knew it. It is always the mind that makes things worse or OK and mine was mannnnn this is gonna hurt. Then he was gone. The assistant told me not to eat until that side of my face was no longer numb and to chew on the opposite side so you don’t bite your cheek on accident due to the numbness. Got it, she put the couch up so I could get out, handed me a card for the next cleaning. Then she left me with her parting words of, “try and floss more between your teeth!” Great, a parting shot. Was she smiling? Hmmmmmm again...

It was over, I lived through it like I knew I would, but, it did hurt like I knew it would! I still wonder what kind of person goes into a profession where the person doesn’t want to be there. Until next time, get your regular dental checkup so you don’t have a cavity and need the sweat of waiting. ★

DCFAS social workers link individuals and families to housing services and supports, benefits, employment and so many other resources that promote the safety, health and well-being of community members across the age span. During the COVID-19 pandemic, social workers have also been on the frontlines along with doctors, nurses, law enforcement, grocery store employees and other essential employees that provided critical services during this time.

Sacramento County Department of Human Assistance (DHA) currently has a team of 45 Human Services Social Workers (HSSWs) assigned to various programs, including Employment Services, Homeless Services and CalWORKs. Since the onset of the COVID-19 Pandemic, much of the customer contact associated with this work has shifted from in-person to virtual services.

HSSWs in DHA are busy helping customers receive necessary resource and case management services. Some focus on helping families who are experiencing homelessness, domestic violence, truancy or other family crisis. There are other HSSWs in DHA that help customers learn skills such as job searching, resume building and interviewing. The biggest division of HSSWs in DHA supports those who are homeless and assist with resources, crisis response and addressing barriers to housing. There is also a team of HSSWs that help customers navigate the challenging disability benefits process and a social worker who provides support at the General Assistance office to assess client needs and makes referrals to other social service agencies and community service agencies.

Despite the great value of social workers, the social work profession faces challenges. There is a shortage of social workers in schools where they are needed to help young people cope with complicated issues such as trauma, poverty, the opioid addiction crises and the need for more resources to help students learn during the pandemic. There is also a need for more social workers in the fields of child welfare and aging and adult services.

“Social workers are unsung heroes that are essential to community well-being. They are driven by several core values, including service, social justice and the dignity and worth of human beings,” said Michelle Callejas, Director of Sacramento County, Child, Family and Adult Services.

“During social work month, we hope you will reach out and say a kind word to the social workers in your lives, and, if you are so inclined, advocate for policies and legislation that benefit the profession and the populations they serve.” ★

Is California Driving Business Away?

By Dan Walters
CALMatters

Is California killing the golden goose with taxes and regulations that drive businesses and their jobs to more hospitable states?

That question has been debated for years without a definitive answer, flaring up whenever there's a high-profile move out of the state.

With the recent relocation of several well-known firms to Texas, along with one famous billionaire, Tesla's Elon Musk, the question once again reverberates in political circles.

Musk first threatened to shift locales last year after his manufacturing facility in the Bay Area was hit with a pandemic shutdown order.

"Frankly, this is the final straw," he tweeted last May. "Tesla will now move its HQ and future programs to Texas/Nevada immediately."

"F*ck Elon Musk," Assemblywoman Lorena Gonzalez, tweeted in response. Gonzalez, a San Diego Democrat and the Legislature's most outspoken proponent of unionization, later added, "California has highly subsidized a company that has always disregarded worker safety & well-being, has engaged in union busting & bullies public servants. I probably could've expressed my frustration in a less aggressive way. Of course, no one would've cared if I tweeted that."

In December, Musk announced his personal move to Texas and his plans to expand activities in that state.

Last week, the Center for Jobs and the Economy, an arm of the California Business Roundtable, offered new grist for the debate by launching "CaliFormers," a running list of companies that have relocated from California or expanded operations elsewhere.

"California policies have created the highest in the nation cost-of-living and strictest in the nation regulatory costs which have caused jobs in key sectors such as manufacturing to start-up, scale or relocate in other lower-cost states, sometimes just across the border from California," the CaliFormers announcement declared.

"As we look to the future of our post-pandemic economy," it added, "the shift of the tech industry and the movement of its executives and investors will significantly impact the stability and solvency of our general fund since the state's progressive tax structure relies heavily on taxes paid by California's highest earners."

CaliFormers arrives on the scene not only as the perpetual debate heats up again but as the Legislature considers a new spate of bills that would impose additional costs on business and/or levy new taxes on business or wealthy individuals such as Musk.

CaliFormers gives the perpetual debate a factual underpinning, but it also falls short of a much-needed comprehensive analysis of the issue. Jerry Nickelsburg, who runs the Anderson Forecast, an economic research organization at UCLA, quickly criticized it for lacking context.

"The list does not sort by year or normalize by u-rate or employment," Nickelsburg tweeted. "It does not track moves to CA. (e.g if a company adds 200 jobs in CA and moves 100 to TX it appears on the table as a move of jobs to TX). So, a nice graphic, but not very useful as an analysis."

Nickelsburg makes a valid point. Obviously the issue is an important one. California depends on a vigorous private sector to provide jobs and indirectly provide revenues for the services that Gonzalez and other politicians want to expand. In fact, those one-percenters at the very top of the income ladder, such as Musk, are paying half of the state's income taxes.

It's so important that it deserves far more serious analysis. Gov. Gavin Newsom and the Legislature have immense research capabilities at their command and should order up a comprehensive and independent examination of whether California is becoming toxic to vital business activity. It's time to settle the argument once and for all.

Social Security Matters

Will My Widow’s Benefit Replace My Own Social Security?

By Russell Gloor, AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: My husband is 76, retired for 4 years, and receiving Social Security. I am only 59 and still working. We are both in good health and I’d like to think we still have many years to enjoy retirement. My question: Is it true that if I start SS at 62, I can switch to my husband’s SS when he passes? If this is true (and his amount is slightly higher than my FRA amount), wouldn’t it make sense for me to begin collecting at 62? Signed: Younger Spouse

Dear Younger Spouse: Yes, it is true that if you start your reduced personal SS benefit at age 62, and your husband (collecting a benefit higher than your own) predeceases you, you can switch to his higher benefit amount. But there are some other factors which come into play when dealing with survivor benefits, especially with an age difference:

- You must be at least 60 years old to claim your survivor benefit (or 50 if you are disabled).
- Your survivor benefit will be reduced if you haven’t yet reached your own full retirement age (FRA) when you claim it. The reduction is 4.75% for each full year earlier than your FRA that you claim the survivor benefit.

- You do not need to take your survivor benefit immediately upon your husband’s death. Your survivor benefit as your husband’s widow reaches maximum at your FRA, and you can choose to delay claiming your widow’s benefit until you reach your FRA (to get the maximum amount).
- If you claim any SS benefit before your FRA (your own or your survivor benefit), and you are working, you’ll be subject to Social Security’s “earnings test” which limits how much you can earn before SS takes back some of your benefits.

Considering the above, if your eventual benefit as your husband’s widow will be the highest benefit you will be entitled to, then claiming your personal SS benefit at age 62 may be a prudent strategy. It allows you to collect your own benefit earlier (albeit reduced) until your higher survivor benefit kicks in to replace the smaller amount. However, your plans for working prior to your full retirement age are key to deciding if you should claim benefits earlier. If you exceed the earnings limit ($18,960 for 2021), SS will take away some of your benefits, which could mean you go without benefits until they recover what you owe. Indeed, if your earnings are high enough, you may find that you would get no SS benefits because the amount you owe for exceeding the earnings limit would completely offset your Social Security benefit.

So, as you can see, if you are working with a high income, the earnings limit might imply that waiting until your FRA to claim any SS benefit is the smartest move. But if you don’t work after you claim SS then taking your own benefit early and later switching to your higher widow’s benefit at or after your FRA would be a sound choice.

By County Supervisor Sue Frost

Through the generosity of the The Rio Linda News, this column serves to provide an update about matters affecting the community of Rio Linda.

As we work toward what will hopefully be the end of this now year-long pandemic, a natural discussion topic is around vaccines. Through the roller coaster of the COVID-19 response, for many people the vaccines offered hope for bringing all of it to an end. Understandably, since the first doses of vaccines became available, I have heard from countless constituents frustrated with how challenging it is to access the vaccine or even get connected with information on the process. I get it. Some of the challenges in this process fall on the county. We could have come out with a better website and had a more thought-out plan for distribution. Like many of the struggles we have all gone through over the last year, I am afraid that the leading cause of our woes is the state once again.

When vaccines first became available, there was a simple explanation of why there were not enough vaccines to go around: limited supply. Not all of the vaccines that are available today were even approved for distribution back in January. The ones that were approved and in circulation were limited and had to be stored under specific conditions. Of course, there is also the fact that both the Moderna and Pfizer vaccines required recipients to receive two doses, limiting the supply even further. Thanks to the approval of the Jansen vaccine, the total supply is increasing. Unfortunately, the state’s increase in supply being distributed does not necessarily benefit Sacramento County residents hoping to get their dose(s).

Rio Linda Community Update

Shortchanging Sacramento County on Vaccines

The inconsistency in distribution became blatantly apparent in February when the state’s total vaccine supply rose 20%, and Sacramento County’s allocation dropped by 18%. Unfortunately, this has become a pattern. In January, Sacramento County received 2.83% of the state’s total distribution of doses. Since then, we have seen that percentage steadily decrease. On March 8th, even with the newly available Jansen vaccine, Sacramento County’s allocation from the state fell to just 1.65% of total doses distributed. There is some explanation for this, including that Sacramento County’s population of eligible or priority populations is lower than neighboring counties. The best explanation I’ve heard came from our Acting Director of Public Health. During the March 9th Board of Supervisors Meeting, he said that what is essentially happening is that the governor changes his mind every two weeks. The distribution formula changes, and it never benefits Sacramento County.

At this point, are any of us surprised? The state’s response to the pandemic has been a series of changes based on state officials’ whims uninterested in looking at challenges at the local level. As other counties take larger percentages of the state’s distribution of doses, they are blazing past Sacramento County through the tiered system of eligible vaccine recipients. Meanwhile, my office is still receiving calls from individuals eligible since the first dose was administered, struggling to access the vaccines that will bring them peace of mind or closer to normalcy. At the same time, Sacramento County’s public health officials have to spend their time advocating to the state for a distribution method that accounts for the fact that Sacramento County is a regional distribution hub, and even with 3% of the state’s population, we have never received 3% of the state’s distribution.

I think everyone that wants the vaccine should be able to get the vaccine. I understand the challenges with rolling out an emergency vaccine amid a global pandemic, and I knew it was never going to be easy. However, the reality of what is going on at the local level continues to be an afterthought for the state, and it seems Sacramento County is somewhere in the far back.

Our promise to you...

No rate increases for a FULL year
AND
Second Month FREE
ALWAYS

That's right. If you ask those other guys, they'll freely admit you're going to get three and four rate increases in the first year. That means if you move in at $125, by the end of the year you could be paying DOUBLE that, $250, or even more!

We don't do business that way at A-1 Storage. We respect our customers and we appreciate your business. If we quote you a price, we stand behind that price for a full year.

Call us at 916-432-2790. Allow us to quote you a price on a clean and convenient storage unit, and then go talk to the other guys. No rush.

We'll be right here waiting for you!
