Broderick is a community, not a gang: New nonprofit stems from racial profiling of neighborhood boys

By Monica Stark
editor@news-ledger.com

Editor's Note: This is the first part in a series about the Broderick Boys and neighborhood efforts to bring attention to racial profiling and what community members call unjust sentences. One of the stories in the series will focus on the police perspective.

On Saturday, April 23, West Sacramentans came together at the West Sacramento Police Department to rally against the gang injunction which members of a newly formed nonprofit, Broderick is Not a Gang, say has caused four juveniles to be detained in custody for more than a year.

In June 2015, four youths -- Angelo Yabes, 14, Joseph Gomez, 15, Xavier Vincent Perez, 16, and Xavier Westford, 17 -- were detained and accused of three separate robberies of pizza delivery drivers despite statements from all the drivers indicating they could not identify who assaulted them. District attorney attempts to charge them as adults and under gang enhancements failed causing all charges to be dropped, only to be picked up against under a "995"

(which states the Judge made an error). Yet, Double Jeopardy prohibits a person from being charged twice for a crime. In another attempt to prosecute, on April 7, the DA announced and filed grand jury indictment charges against the four youths as adults.

Their mothers are taking a stand to stop the gang injunction with Broderick is a Community, Not a Gang. This is for the four sons, they say, are being victimized and incarcerated by the gang injunction. The nonprofit will hire legal counsel to overturn the gang injunction in West Sacramento.

The injunction puts several restrictions upon those it affects, including a curfew, making it illegal to associate or assemble with other alleged members, trespassing and drinking anywhere in public view.

Activists say the people of Broderick are a close-knit bunch and that they've known each other for years, were raised next door to each other and many have helped raise their children together as well.

Residents of the area say the community has been torn apart by the injunction. "Friends and family members can no longer go to family barbecues or attend each other's children's birthday parties," said a community activist. "They can't go to the movies together; they can't attend night school because classes get out after the curfew. This injunction harms the quality of life of our community."

In a letter to the editor of the Woodland Daily Democrat, Becky Olvera of Woodland, back in 2010 wrote that prior to West Sacramento building James Marshall High School in the early 1950s, students from east Yolo were bused to and attended Woodland High School for years; as were students from Knights Landing, and perhaps also from the town of Yolo. "Those students congregated on campus in their respective city groups. The Woodland students identified and referred to the out of town boys by where they lived. Thus they imposed the identification names, such as the Knights Landing Boys, the Bryte Boys, the West Sac Boys, the Broderick Boys, and the Yolo Boys. Later the Yolo Boys' name was changed to The Yolo Cats," Olvera wrote.

She wrote about the beginning of the West Sacramento Gang Injunction Trial. "In 2008 Judge Kathleen White imposed the prelim-

Water regulations are recommendations, not mandates

The Stage Three Water Shortage for the City of West Sacramento was lifted on June 1. This change in water regulation has been shared through social media channels and will be in the June utility bill.

It is recommended that watering return to three days a week. This is a recommendation, not a mandate, explained Ryan Burnett, City of West Sacramento Water Conservation Coordinator. "Our hope is to offer more watering while still encouraging water conservation," he wrote in response to an inquiry from the Ledger after readers questioned this year's watering schedule. Burnett provided the following recommended watering schedule, as well as current water waste prohibitions:

Recommended watering schedule:

Addresses ending in 1, 3, 5, 7 or 9: Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays
Addresses ending in 0, 2, 4, 6 or 8: Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays

Water waste prohibitions:

1. Allowing irrigation to run-off to streets and gutters
2. Using a hose not fitted with an automatic shut-off nozzle to wash a vehicle
3. Irrigation of landscape during rainfall
4. Running an irrigation system that applies water to an impervious surface
5. Running an irrigation system that is in disrepair

Bayer CropScience Opens New Greenhouse Site in West Sacramento

By Jan Dalske

In February of this year, Bayer CropScience (BCS) celebrated the grand opening of its West Sacramento greenhouse site which will support the BCS division's growing Biologics and Vegetable Seeds businesses. Last month, for the first time since the facility was opened, BCS opened their doors to welcome tour groups.

The $12 million site features two new high tech greenhouses which are located near BCS existing research facility. Jim Blome, President and CEO of Bayer CropScience LP, stated that "innovation requires sustained and ongoing investments. These state of the art facilities illustrate our continued commitment to developing new innovative products for growers to help them on their farms by improving the overall sustainability and productivity of modern agriculture".

The completion of the West Sacramento greenhouse site follows the grand opening of Bayer's integrated R & D site for Biologics and Vegetables Seeds in September of 2014. In addition to the new greenhouse complex, the almost $80 million facility consists of a nearby ten acre site which contains 170,000 square feet of research and development space. This includes office and laboratories and a 2,000 square foot existing greenhouse.

The grand opening of the WS Greenhouse site is part of BCS plans to invest close to $1 billion in Capital Expenditures (CAPEX) in the United States from 2013-2016. Their substantial investment represents significant efforts to ramp up research and development and to expand a world-class product of Bayer's top crop protection brands in the coming years.

BCS West Sacramento research site serves as a hub for the company's Biologics group. It is focused on biological crop protection and crop efficiency solutions. The location is also home to a team from Bayer Vegetable Seeds. Researchers at this location engage in integrated breeding, the cornerstone of the company's commitment to improving vegetable crops worldwide.

The greenhouses are equipped with multiple chambers which allow researchers to grow live plants under highly controlled environments. A sophisticated computerized system regulates irrigation, heating, cooling and exposure to light while providing constant feedback to the research team. Plants such as tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, barley, wheat, brassica, eggplants, cotton, lima beans, fava beans, strawberries, potatoes, and various flower crops are grown in the greenhouses. Source: Tour of facility, Bayer CropScience Facts

Tucked Away in West Sac

The Study, Leave Your Mark, and The Front Room

By Michele Townsend

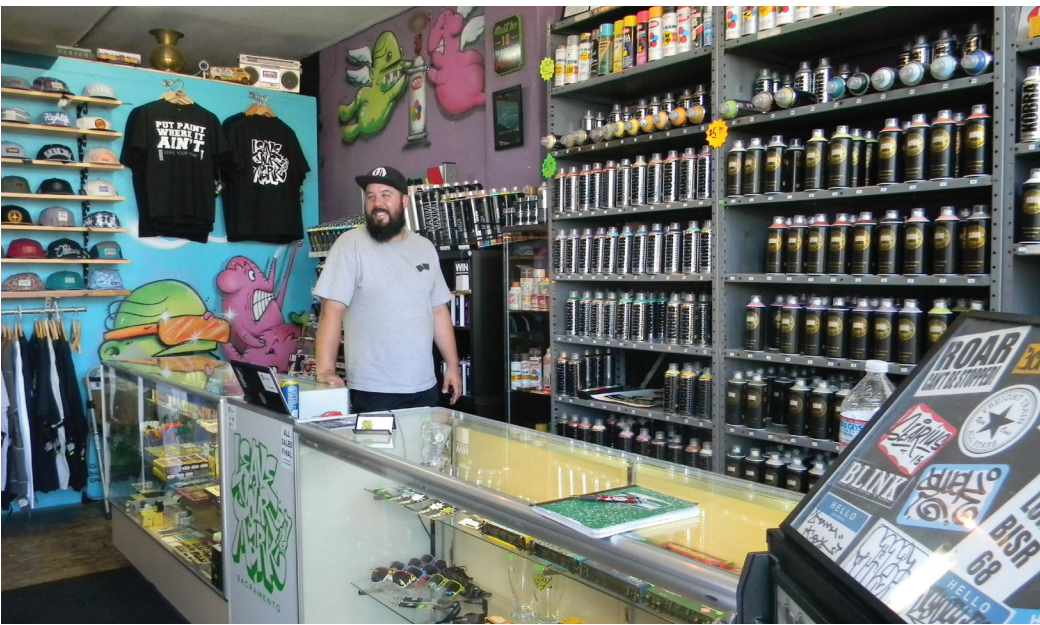

“Tucked Away in West Sac” is a new segment in the News-Ledger that is designed to highlight businesses throughout West Sacramento that interesting, fun, and unique that are tucked away or easily missed. We hope to help our community by increasing the visibility of the businesses that make our town so unique.

As you come into West Sacramento, over the I Street Bridge (Black Bridge), the first cross street, at the base of the bridge, that you come upon is C Street. If you take a left, go South about a half of a block, just before the Rail Road tracks there is an old brick building on your right that contains a few little businesses. Within that group of businesses is a small shop, located at 324 3rd Street, that is actually a combination of three businesses. But it’s not just three businesses. It’s three businesses that you wouldn’t expect to find together! It’s A recording studio, an art supply, and a clothing shop. Yes, all together, in the same shop! The feeling you get is very relaxed and welcoming when you walk in. There are three humble and friendly guys in there, as each one owns a different business.

We’ll start with The Study. It is owned and operated by two engineers, Adam and Josh. It is a small recording studio that provides recording, mixing and mastering. It has been at this location since last September. This studio is small in size, but is equipped to help you with your recording needs. If the recording that you desire is a larger group, such as a band, and you don’t have enough room, they simply record you at different times and mix it together for you. It’s pretty fascinating. So those of you that are musical geniuses (or think you are), this is a great place to go record your first CD. If you have written a love song, for the one you love, this is a great place to capture it for all time. Or if you simply want to hear your music how other people hear it, this is the place to go. You can find more information and see what they are all about by visiting them on Facebook at Facebook.com/AtTheStudy or simply going in and talking to them.

About 6 months ago Adam and Josh brought in Lance. Lance owns Leave Your Mark Art Supplies. This small art supply store focuses on spray paints, tips, and drawing and painting supplies. He does not sell to anyone under the age of 18. Leave Your Mark holds art shows, competitions, and other art and painting events in the large back yard that this business has. They have held a sticker exchange art show, A letter battle, and have an upcoming toy train contest, where you can buy the toy trains in their store and “tag” them. Please do not think that these gentlemen condone vandalism or destruction of anyone’s property. They do not! They do however encourage people to explore and develop their talent in art. For this reason they offer places to paint, and are trying to positively change the underground art world and reduce vandalism. They have walls in their back yard that are painted on with some amazing art work. Lance said “We do this for the passion and the people.” Please don’t dismiss this store due to assumptions, this gentleman knows his business, and they are truly trying to offer a positive alternative to an existing form of art. You can find more information and see pictures of their events on Facebook.com/LeaveYourMarkSacramento.

The Front Room is literally in the front room of this business. It is owned and operated by Chuck. He was brought in shortly after Lance. They have unique and original clothing that is designed by local Sacramento artists and manufactured by local companies. They sell their own stock, as well as items on consignment that have been brought in by local artists. They offer snap backs, hoodies, multi styles of t-shirts, beanie’s, gloves, socks and shoes. Chuck told me that “This is just a cool place to be, where people can come and look at the art.” The Front Room offers only original items, created by local people. You can also order personalized items from them, that will be made locally by some very talented people. Any merchandise that is not art supplies, or recording, Chuck is your man. You can see more, including video, new merchandise, and events on Facebook.com/TheFrontRoom.At.TheStudy or Instagram thefrontroom_916.

This shop is a very comfortable place to go. They are very supportive to all local small business and encourage all community members to support our local small businesses whenever possible for any and all of your needs. Their Hours of Operation are Monday through Saturday noon to 7 p.m. Their events are frequent and fun. Stop in, check it out, ask them to show you around, and enjoy some conversation with some very friendly and knowledgeable people! Kudos to the three of you for promoting local support so strongly and consistently!

inary injunction, and now the District Attorney's office is seeking a permanent injunction for a certain area called the 'safety zone' in West Sacramento, which I assume incorporates only the streets that once were the streets of the city of Broderick before it became part of West Sacramento. As an interested citizen I sat in on the proceedings the first week when the civil trial began last month. The District Attorney's office, to put it in the simplest term, intends to prove that a triangle exists. Namely, that the Broderick Boys, Nortenos, and street gangs mean one and the same thing, and that they are intertwined and prevalent in the 'safety zone' area."

Back in 2007, for the same newspaper, the author of today's News-Ledger article wrote about Billy Wolfinton who went by the name "Bouncer." Rather than serving all 350 alleged members of the gang, the district attorney served just him. Reisig said that Wolfington, a self-proclaimed Broderick Boy, was seen talking to other gang members at the time the gang injunction was served. "It would be an absolute certainty that he told other gang members," Reisig said back then. The DA said that Wolfington had a tattoo on his chest that says "Broderick", was wearing Broderick's gang color - red - and has been arrested many times in relation with the Broderick Boys for possession of drugs and guns.

But Wolfington didn't show up in court. And because he didn't come to court to accept his injunction, Justice Thomas Warrier placed it on the entire neighborhood.

The injunction's three-square-mile radius which previously included Doss Way, Brookfield, Franklyn Boulevard and Morrison Creek has been extended out to Interstate 80, activists say. Under the provisions of the order, violating any of the activities listed on the junction becomes a crime. For instance, if an employee of a gang member litters or is present on the premises of an uninhabited or abandoned apartment or building, that person is in violation.

Under the West Sacramento Police Department's list of criteria for gang membership, any two of eleven criteria must be met to be considered a gang member. But the criteria are broad, including items such as: "Individual wears gang clothing/colors" and "Individual displays gang graffiti on personal belongings," without specifying which colors, clothing or graffiti are considered gang-related.

The organizers of the April event also included members of the National Latino Information and Resource Center, the ANSWER Coalition, the Labor Council For Latin American Advancement, ALF-CIO, the Brown Berets de SacraAztlán, the Party for Socialism and Liberation and the West Sacramento Committee To Boycott Driscoll.

Being an election year, the group has continued to take action with a voter registration drive that will impact the Nov. 8 elections. One of the group's founders, Maria Grijalva, stated she will run for city council. "This November a new wave of West Sacramento residents will be raising their voice with their vote and will end the gang injunction."

"The reason we formed the nonprofit is that four boys were accused of a pizza delivery robbery. And now they have a $2.5 million bail. Even though there was no violence, they are being threatened with life sentences. Their mothers are the ones who are being directly impacted... A public defender told us that it's common knowledge that Yolo County uses direct filing to put away Latinos for life and to get rid of them in Yolo County," Maria said.

Mother Sonia Rodriguez, whose son Elijah is profiled in this issue of the News-Ledger, said she got involved with the nonprofit as soon as she heard about it. "It is too late for my son but I believe this is an issue that will not go away. I speak for the group telling my sons story whenever I am asked, I attend the weekly meetings, I send out donation requests to help fund our efforts, I try and help out whenever and with whatever I can."

Rodriguez would like the nonprofit to educate the community about the dangers involved in having the gang injunction in West Sacramento/Broderick Area, to remove it, to stop the direct filing on future offenders, and to have an investigation on gang officers as to their evidence gathering. "(The officer's) word should not be law on our kids; it is too high of a price for our kids to pay for one man to determine. I don't believe every teenaged boy that gets into trouble is a gang member. I am scared for future generations if this is not done. I don't believe that having pride in your neighborhood makes you a gang member."

Further, she said she would like to help change the way the police department interacts with Broderick youth. "I would like to help provide the youth of West Sacramento and Broderick a place they can go to get off the streets, to see a free youth center or free sports center opened in our neighborhood, (not only Southport) so that at-risk, low income kids have easy access to it. I would like to see these kids given a chance in life to succeed. I know it is a lot but you have to dream big. The ultimate goal is to make the Broderick community a better place to live and raise your children."

Mother of alleged gang member discusses son's charges and her involvement with Broderick is Not a Gang

Editor's Note: The following was provided by West Sacramento mother Sonia Rodriguez when asked to provide details about her son in a way to humanize the neighborhood youth who, in addition to serious crimes, has been labeled as a gang member, even though she said he was never affiliated with a gang. Some of it has been edited to fit the newspaper.

Name: Elijah Rodriguez
Age: 21 (now) 17 at time of arrest

On May 5, 2012, Elijah Rodriguez was arrested at school around Franklyn Way and Glide Avenue for attempted murder. The charges were dropped to assault with a deadly weapon. He took a deal for 12 years with two strikes.

He was charged with:
CT1 PC 245 (a) (1) assault with a deadly weapon (3 years), CT1A PC 186.22 (b) gang enhancement (5yrs)
CT2 PC 245(a) (1) assault with a deadly weapon (1 year) CT2B PC 12022.7 (a) inflicts great bodily injury (3 years)

Statement from Sonia Rodriguez
I completely understand what my son did was wrong and believe he deserved to go to prison. What he was charged with is a very serious matter that we don't take lightly. However, I have a problem with a couple things. The first being the amount of time Elijah got. He took a deal for 12 years. He was threatened with 25 years to life if we went to trial granted there were no deaths in this case. Because of the "safe zone" if this crime would have happened one block over, my son wouldn't have gotten gang enhancements which added five years to his prison term. I take issue with the 12-year sentence because in 2008 my 17-year-old daughter was hit and killed by a hit and run drunk driver and the offender only got a 9-year sentence and served less than three years for killing my daughter and injuring my daughter's friend. It just doesn't seem balanced.

The second thing I have a problem with is my son receiving the gang enhancements and being labeled a gang member. I take issue with the way (the officer) used determined my son was a gang member. The officer has never had contact with my son before this. In court the officer said my son did this to move up in rank with the 'Broderick Boys'. My son was a dumb kid that did something stupid. This had no rhyme or reason. He wasn't doing this to be promoted in a gang he was never a part of to begin with. Just because the officer says it, doesn't make it true. My son is an aspiring rapper and has hundreds of notebooks with raps he wrote. The officer used those as evidence of 'criminal activity'. The raps were not about rainbows and sunshine, that's for sure but none on the raps were about gangs or being in gangs. They were stupid raps my son made up, he was a teenage boy. My son is not and was not a gang

Finding Dory
The MPAA has rated this PG

"Finding Dory" is the latest from Pixar Animation Studios, released through Walt Disney Studios Motion Pictures. It is a sequel to their popular computer animation of "Finding Nemo" released in 2003. Dory is voiced again by Ellen DeGeneres. She is a friendly but forgetful fish that is separated from her parents early in the story, and she can't remember how to get back to them.

This sets into motion her adventures of swimming across the ocean, assisted by her friends Nemo and his father, Marlin, voiced by actor Albert Brooks. Brooks' portrayal is one of the movie's most enjoyable aspects. Once Dory has traveled far across the sea, she loses Marlin and Nemo, and cannot remember where to find them. Lured by the actual voice of Sigourney Weaver, she finds herself outside a famous aquarium, which triggers a memory for her, a clue to find where his parents might be.

She manages to get into the aquarium with the help of other fish friends. In the quest to find her parents, she ends up in an area for quarantined fish. It is there that she meets Hank, the octopus voiced by Ed O'Neil of "Married with Children" fame. Hank has lost a tentacle, so Dory refers to him as a "Septipus". They begin to formulate a plan to find her fish folk.

Remarkably most of the fish are tolerant of her memory loss, although some are indifferent. Many are inspired by her stick-to-itiveness, and rally with "What would Dory do?"; a motivation phrase. Andrew Stanton is the director of this movie, and the cast features the additional voices of Ty Burrell, Diane Keaton, Eugene Levy, Idris Elba, Bill Hader and Willem Dafoe.

Largely entertaining, but not a great movie, the end goes a little over the top. I felt slightly uncomfortable that Dory's memory loss was the subject of humor in this movie, for memory loss is not funny in real life. However, Dory's positive attitude dispels any negativity that might be related to her disability. I found this fun for kids. Albert Brooks is wonderful. Solid, but not up to the high bar set by Pixar in the past. If not to make money in franchise terms, I'd wonder why it was made.

Maggie's Plan
The MPPA has rated this R
Sony Pictures Classics gives us delightful Greta Gerwig as Maggie, a pretty young lady with definite ideas in mind. She wants to have a baby on her own, via a semen donor, Guy (Travis Fimmel), an "artsian" (read hipster) pickle maker. That goes awry when she falls for a married man, an author and teacher named John played by Ethan Hawke. He is a specialist in an obscure field of study at Columbia, as is his Teutonic wife, Georgette played by Julianne Moore. John is self-centered, obsessed with his great manuscript. He leaves his wife and children to live with Maggie. This causes concern for Maggie's best friends, a constantly quarreling couple played by Maya Rudolf and Bill Hader. At first, Maggie is happy with this arrangement, even though it was not according to her initial plan.

As time progresses, she becomes dissatisfied with John's self-focus and approaches Georgette to take him back. From here nothing seems to go as Maggie planned. A sense of independent control is important to her, but at every turn, she must compromise.

Greta Gerwig is one of the most joyful screen arrivals in recent memory. She has a frankness and honesty in her performances that is most attractive. She is natural, in no way artificial and this gives her a most radiant wholesome beauty. She is fun to watch here, as a smart young lady with great plans for her independence.

Ethan Hawke has turned in some great performances of recent, notably as Chet Baker and here he is very much like a New York intellectual character that you'd find in a Woody Allen movie. Indeed this entire movie, directed by Ms. Rebecca Miller, has the air of a Woody Allen scenario, absent his charming use of nostalgia. It is also different than an Allen picture in that it so interestingly tells the story from the female point of view. Like Woody's Allen's great use of music for his movies, Miller has a great soundtrack of musical selections throughout and it enriches the story marvelously.

Julianne Moore's performance is unlike any other you've seen. She seems to do no wrong and here she clearly has fun with the role of Georgette, whose accent sounds like Madeline Kahn impersonating Marlene Dietrich in Mel Brook's "Blazing Saddles". Also in the picture, you'll see one of my favorite actors, Wallace Shawn, sadly only used in one scene. He may be most famous for "The Princess Bride" where is line, "Inconceivable!" was heard throughout that film. I saw him first as half of the conversation in 1981's "My Dinner with Andre" and just love his character work.

This is a very New York movie with excellent performances from capable actors, although the story becomes convoluted and bogs down a bit. It is saved by lovely Ms. Gerwig, who I hope to see much more of on screen in future.

Central Intelligence
The MPAA has rated this PG-13
Rawson Marshall Thurber

directs this comedy for New Line Cinema released by Warner Bros. It stars Dwayne Johnson and Kevin Hart. In a prologue before the main title, were are shown a High School of the 1980s, where a large, obese man (a CGI version of Johnson) is singing in the high school gym's shower. Pranksters grab him from the shower and toss him buck-naked into a rally happening in front of the entire student body. At that moment, the principal was honoring the student most likely to succeed, Calvin Joyner (Hart). It would be a defining moment for Bob Stone (Johnson) who would completely turn around his life from that moment on.

We find this out after the title sequence, when in present day, Calvin's high school sweetheart, Maggie (Danielle Nicolet) to whom he is now married, urges him to go to his High School reunion. Calvin wishes not to, as he feels he never reached his potential promised in High School. He now toils as an accountant. With some strain on their marriage, he looks at a Facebook page for the reunion out of curiosity and makes a comment on someone's posting. Within seconds he gets a "friend" request from Bob Stone.

They agree to meet in a rather dicey bar, where Calvin is amazed at the transformation of Bob, who now looks like Dwyane Johnson! We begin to see that Bob has had some military experience or perhaps special services training when he eliminates three tough guys in a matter of a few seconds that had taken his chair at a table in the bar. Bob asks to stay at Calvin's place and ask him to look at an encrypted account he is concerned about. From that moment on it is clear that Bob is not all he presents. CIA agents bust in, lead by Agent Pamela Harris (Amy Ryan) looking for Bob, saying that he's a counter agent that has gone rogue.

From that moment on Calvin is drawn into the web of spy vs. spy intrigue and ludicrous comedy bits that are for the most part ridiculous. Also in the cast are Aaron Paul and in unaccredited performances; Melisa McCarthy and the always good Jason Bateman. I dreaded seeing this movie, fearing the worst, But it turned out being much better than you'd think. As silly as Kevin Hart's performances are, he is a hugely likeable personality. It is his personality that holds together this otherwise forgettable comedy that will lend you laughs for the moment, but you may not recall seeing the movie by next year. That will be okay.

member. My son was never served with the gang injunction before this. My son has never admitted to being in a gang.

Did my son know kids that said they were in a gang? Of course, these are kids he has gone to school with since preschool through high school. But that is not a crime nor does it make you a gang member. West Sacramento is a very small community. Not every boy in Broderick is a gang member. In prison, my son is not affiliated with a gang. He is considered an 'other' meaning he is not in a gang.

However, his paperwork says he is a Norteño gang member and that has caused him problems with other inmates and guards. He has to explain how Yolo County labeled him a gang member but he is not. If he was a former gang member he would be considered a 'drop out'. It doesn't sound like a big deal but in prison apparently it is a big deal. It affects how other inmates treat you. My son is okay right now but he is a young impressionable boy with 10 years left in prison. He will have spent a large majority of growing up years around hardened criminals. I can't say how he will be when he gets out of prison and is a man of 31 years of age. This will affect my son for the rest of his life. Not only while he is in prison but when he gets out and tries to move on with his life.

While in prison he has gotten no write ups and is taking college courses. The last we heard from our son was three weeks ago. He was transferred to a prison in Arizona from The California Correctional Center in Susanville, California. He called us and said they told him he was being transferred again to a prison in Mississippi. We have no further information on his whereabouts. He has been in prison for the past two years. He has 10 more years to serve.

Since joining Broderick is a Community, Not a Gang I have heard story after story about how these kids are being charged as adults, labeled as gang members, and threatened with 25 years to life and offered a deal of 12 years regardless of the crime. It just doesn't seem right. How can every boy in Broderick be a gang member? Yolo County has the highest direct filing in the state. How can the DAs justify this? If our boys were not criminal gang members before prison, what do they think they will come home as?
