From Baseball in West Sacramento to movies in Hollywood, Eric Arthur Martinez proves nothing should stop you

By Matías Bombal Exclusive to the News-Ledger

A montage of memories of violent events turns into a transforming sense of visual poetry on screen; Joe Montoya relives the pain of his slain wife, a victim of urban gang violence. The music is plaintive. As Joe's memories are laced together image after image, his voice is heard as he pensively walks away from the camera, in a setting evocative of the great noir films of the past: "One man can't end a war. All he can do is stop the one that is in his heart. People are always going to be killing each other, that's the way of the world. A question a man has to ask himself: Is he going to be one of the ones holding the gun, or one of the ones walking away?"

So ends a powerful moment in the movie "5th Street" which was released in March of 2014. The man behind the voice and face of Joe Montoya is actor Eric Arthur Martinez. 52. Martinez is also the writer of the movie, released by Indican Pictures for home and streaming markets through Amazon, RedBox and Wal-Mart. With a shoestring budget of $80,000 as compared to major Hollywood studio pictures that often top $350 million dollars, "5th Street" is doing very well in the home market with this new way to distribute movies without theatres. The movie industry is shifting on precarious technology changes. Soon, much will be seen in our homes rather than at the traditional movie theatre model that has served us for over one-hundred years.

Mr. Martinez lives in Redondo Beach, California, with his wife Sylvia and a cat that tried to lure him away from the telephone to play during our interview last week. The journey to actor and screenwriter from local beginnings is a relatively recent chapter in his life, which began in Broderick, CA. There, he had played baseball with Washington Little League from the time he was 15 years old. His parents, Fidel and Judie Martinez, still live in the area, as does his sister. He has a brother in Lincoln.

Eric Martinez attended River City Senior High School, where his passion to become one of the boys of summer, and to play professionally, filled his dreams and ambitions. "I thought I would become a professional baseball player, but passion and desire can only take you so far." said Martinez. He would continue his education at Sacramento City College and Sacramento State Uni-

New laws for the new year

By Monica Stark editor@news-ledger.com

With the new year comes new laws. Here's a breakdown.

Vaccinations \mathbf{for} schoolchildren

Senate Bill 277 requires full vaccinations for schoolchildren with the exception of homeschooled children and those children with serious health problems.

Highway lane use

Assembly Bill 208 requires on two-lane highways that slow moving vehicles turn off the roadway at "the nearest place designated as a turnout or wherever sufficient area for a safe turnout exists." This law also applies to bicycles.

Earphone and headset restrictions

Senate Bill 491 states that it is unlawful for one to wear a headset covering, earphones or earplugs that rest on or are inserted in both ears while operating a motor vehicle or bicycle. Exemptions include perment while wearing safety earplugs or a headset.

Gun-free school zone

Senate Bill 707 prohibits a person licensed to carry a concealed firearm from doing so on college or university campuses, and K-12 school grounds. Retired law enforcement is exempt from this law.

Gun violence restraining orders

Assembly Bill 1014, allows family members, who have a relative they believe to be at risk of committing an act of violence, to obtain a temporary restraining order to bar gun ownership of that relative for 21 days.

No more exit exams for high school students

No longer are high school seniors required to take the exit exam to graduate from high school. The law goes into effect for each student completing grade 12 for the 2015-16, 2016-17 and 2017-18 school years.

Farmers, Environmentalists and State Agencies Team Up to Rescue Salmon

Despite four years of record drought, large numbers of salmon are coming back to the Sacramento Valley rivers this winter. Unfortunately some of these salmon are taking wrong turns out of rivers into dead-end drainage canals where they will die unless redirected back into the rivers.

In the Yolo Bypass, hundreds of large salmon – some weighing up to 30 pounds – are swimming the wrong way up dead end drainage canals. The California Department of Fish and Wildlife is trapping dozens of these fish and trucking them back to the Sacramento River, where they are released to continue the upstream journey to their spawning grounds. Upcoming repairs to the agricultural drainage system should prevent the problem from recurring.

CDFW's efforts are supported by a diverse group of local farmers, drainage districts and salmon advocates. This past August, farm groups, conservation organizations and government agencies banded together to make repairs to prevent fish from swimming into the Colusa Basin Drain near Knights Landing Outfall Gates. A similar project is planned for next year to block fish at Wallace Weir.

"This model for collaboration, investment, and hard work is vital to the future of the Sacramento Valley and is essential for delivering reliable water supplies to our farms, cities, and the millions of birds migrating along the Pacific Flyway," says Lewis Bair, program manager of Reclamation District 108. "That's why our district invested in the Knights Landing upgrade, and why we're on board to upgrade Wallace Weir in Yolo Bypass to keep these salmon in the river and on the right track in their migration."

Currently, salmon are blocked from swimming into the Colusa Canal with a temporary fish trap constructed at Wallace Weir as well as a secondary trap in the Colusa Basin Drain itself. CDFW staff operates both trapping sites and have rescued over 450 fall run salmon in the last three weeks. Rescuing fish isn't always the best decision from a population standpoint, but after evaluation, CDFW determined that assisting would be prudent and this effort has been successful.

Christmas tree recycling information

The presents are unwrapped, the guests are gone, now what to do with that tree? In West Sacramento, residents recycle Christmas trees in their yard waste carts. Trees must be cut into sections no more than three feet long and two inches in diameter. If your tree exceeds the capacity of your cart, you may bundle excess branches and place them next to your yard waste cart for pick up on your regular service day. Please remove all tinsel, lights, ornaments, flocking and stands prior to disposal. You may also recycle your tree at the Yolo County Central Landfill located at 44090 County Road 28H. play by Martinez's coach, struck him forcibly in the thigh, bruising his bone. It required lengthy physical therapy. This event triggered a new interest for Martinez. Here was a way that he could remain connected to sports, yet from a different angle. This led to a trip east to Chicago where he would attend Northwestern University for a degree in psychical therapy. Retuning to West Sacramento with his degree, he wondered what would be next.

He met a girl that needed a roommate in Los Angeles, and that sounded like a great place. At 30, he might establish a practice and follow that California dream of a little surfing on the side. The timing did not work out. He preceded the young lady's arrival there by many months. His practice would eventually last 18 years, however, with a busy nine to five schedule.

In 1992, Martinez became intrigued by actor patients, in for treatment that would discuss their craft. His interest led him to take acting classes beginning in 1992.

"The Martinez said, more time I spent working on scenes the more comfortable I became." By the mid-1990s his skills improved by acting in six-week runs of several plays. The study of scripts and the focus on dialogue awakened an interest in writing, too. He published "A Knight Without Intellect", a collection of poems and short stories under the name Eric Arthur.

The evolution of Martinez's movie "5th Street" from first screenplay draft to finished movie took seven years. Inspired by the great visual style of classic mob movies, like 1974's "The Godfather: Part II", Martinez loves the work of Al Pacino. He hired established script doctor Howard

5th Street Films/Indican Pictures

Dratch to take a blue pencil through the screenplay and guide his hand. Dratch polished his character development and taught Martinez much in the process. There would be many rewrites over time. Time is money; Martinez cashed in his retirement to fund the picture with his company, 5th Street Films.

"I'd lose the wind from my sails when I'd have to return to another draft," said Martinez, "It's like a punch in the gut; you're so close to it."

He finally had a screenplay of 145 pages in length. Too long.

In 2001, Martinez had an audition for actors with the director and producer present. He heard his words read by others for the first time. "I grinned inside," said Martinez with a smile in his voice.

The film's director, Alex Meader, was able to help Martinez cut it to the final 90 pages that were photographed. Some of the best moments came from real life experiences that Martinez drew from in writing want the audience to be

"There's a moment when a gang member lies about his pain level in a medical appointment," said Martinez. "That would happen in my office, a gang member working the system."

"I'm very happy with the way it worked out," Martinez continued. "The hard part isn't coming up with the idea; it is just doing it. Nothing should stop you. Do the best that you can and let the chips fall where they may."

Every quarter Martinez gets a statement of his earnings trickling in from the rentals of "5th Street"; he visits his family in West Sacramento about four times a year. On a recent visit, he was beguiled by the new Raley Field, which he wished had been around when he was a boy in the area. He has written a new short movie, and has three new script ideas. He is grateful for his wife who supports him, and those who worked on the film for very little pay to see it realized. Says Martinez, "I purely entertained.

Traffic calming in West Sacramento

(Editor's Note: A reader sent in the following message and the City of West Sacramento Traffic and Transportation engineer Peter Hanson's reply follows.)

Reader: I was wondering why Lilac Lane has speed bumps and Poplar does not and it is right in front of Westfield School. Also Manzanita Way, which is a long street with sharp turns at both ends, also needs to be mentioned. Why were these streets left out of the loop?

Peter Hanson: Traffic calming devices are typically installed as per the direction of the residential working group with the assistance of city staff. It appears that the traffic calming devices in the specified neighborhood have been installed way before my time (10 years plus) so I cannot comment on why the residents decided to not install the devices on other streets. In West Sacramento speed bumps are installed as part of a larger traffic calming effort. Unfortunately, due to budgetary reasons the city's traffic calming program has been suspended until further notice. However, we still do accept petitions that will be processed on a first-come firstserved basis once the budget allows us to proceed with the program.

A link to the program, including the petition, can be found here: www.cityofwestsacramento.org/city/depts/pw/traffic_n_transportation/residential_traffic_ calming.asp

The text from the above website has been reprinted here for your convenience:

PLEASE NOTE: Due to budgetary constraints, the Residential Traffic Calming Program has been suspended indefinitely. Specific safety issues and concerns should still, however, still be reported to the city.

Traffic Calming Defined

The Institute of Transportation Engineers (ITE), an international association of transportation professionals, provides the following definition for traffic calm-

"Traffic calming is the combination of mainly physical measures that reduce the negative effects of motor vehicle use, alter driver behavior, and improve conditions for non-motorized street users."

Traffic Calming in West Sacramento In July of 1998, the City of West Sacramento City Council adopted the Residential Traffic Calming Program (RTCP). This comprehensive program was created to address resident concerns about traffic issues in residential neighborhoods, particularly the issues of speeding and cut-through traffic. It validated a commitment by the city to provide safe and livable neighborhoods. The program also helps to ensure that traffic calming solutions are applied in a consistent and

While concerns may be similar from neighborhood to neighborhood, solutions typically vary. The RTCP provides residents with an opportunity to work hand-in-hand with City staff to create and implement the best solutions for their particular neighborhood. There are choices to be considered, which include types of measures installed, location of measures, boundaries, etc. Each choice has its own cost, feasibility, and effectiveness issues.

Purposes for Traffic Calming

Reduction of traffic speeds and volumes are the most common reasons for the implementation of traffic calming measures. Other reasons for traffic calming include reducing cut-through traffic, traffic noise, collisions, truck traffic, and increasing pedestrian and bicycle safety.

A Comprehensive Approach to Traffic Calming

The city of West Sacramento practices the "3 E's" approach to traffic calming:

Education: Staff provides information to residents regarding available methods and tools to make educated decisions to properly address neighborhood traffic concerns.

Enforcement: Through selective enforcement, the Police Department addresses targeted traffic issues.

Engineering: Staff works directly with residents to identify concerns and solutions, and implement traffic calming strategies based on established and proven traffic engineering principles.

Staff works closely with residents to address problems and provide solutions consistent with neighborhood goals. The majority of residents in a neighborhood must validate their support for a traffic calming plan. The intent is to address traffic issues, while not shifting problems elsewhere.

Residential Traffic Calming Process

The City of West Sacramento's RTCP relies on significant community participation. Residents typically initiate traffic calming requests and must live with any modifications on a daily basis. Consequently, the City relies heavily on resident participation throughout the process. The development of a safe and effective traffic calming plan depends on the successful cooperation between residents and city staff. Implementation of a traffic calming plan is subject to available funding and resources.

Participation of a neighborhood in the traffic calming program begins with submittal of a completed, Residential Traffic Calming Program Petition Form. The form must include the signatures, names, addresses, and phone numbers of at least 10 residents of the affected neighborhood, and information about the location(s) and issues of concern. Only one signature per household will be accepted.

Consideration and Prioritization

Upon receipt of the petition form, the City's Transportation Section will conduct an analysis to determine a neighborhood's eligibility. Aside from the petition requirements, a neighborhood must meet certain criteria on affected streets to be eligible. These criteria are:

-Streets must be two-lane local residential or residential collector streets with a posted speed of 25 mph.

-A speeding problem validated by means of a speed survey showing an 85th percentile (critical) speed of at least 6 mph over the posted speed.

ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER

A DEED OF TRUST DATED

3/27/2006. UNLESS YOU TAKE

ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR

PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD

AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 to the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state, will be held by duly appointed trustee. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by the Deed of Trust, with interest and late charges thereon, as provided in the note(s), advances, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, interest thereon, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee for the total amount (at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale) reasonably estimated to be set forth below. The amount may be greater on the day of sale. BENEFICIARY MAY ELECT TO BID LESS THAN THE TOTAL AMOUNT DUE. The law would revise and recast the exceptions to require the employer to affirmatively demonstrate that a wage differential is based upon one or more specified factors, including a seniority system, a merit system, a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production, or a bona fide factor other than sex, as specified. The law requires the employer to demonstrate that each factor relied upon is applied reasonably, and that the one or more factors relied upon account for the entire differential. The law prohibits an employer from discharging, or in any manner discriminating or retaliating against, any employee by reason of any action taken by the employee to invoke or assist in any manner the enforcement of these provisions. The law authorizes an employee who has been discharged or discriminated or retaliated against, in the terms and conditions of his or her employment because the employee engaged in any conduct delineated in these provisions, to recover in a civil action reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the acts of the employer, including interest thereon, as well as appropriate equitable relief. The law prohibits an employer from prohibiting an employee from disclosing the employee's own wages, discussing the wages of others, inquiring about another employee's wages, or aiding or encouraging any other employee to exercise his or her rights under these provisions. The bill would also increase the duration of employer recordkeeping requirements from two years to three years. By changing the definition of a crime, law imposes a state-mandated local program.

"Salmon straving into Colusa Drain is clearly a large problem and it is in everybody's interest to fix it," said local rice farmer and landowner John

Born in freshwater, salmon travel to the ocean to mature and then return, swimming upstream to their natal streams to reproduce. Canals, levees, dams and other manmade water infrastructure interrupt the normal salmon migrations and are the focus of these collaborative efforts to improve salmon migration, habitat and food supplies. These parties are all working closely to advance a series of projects as part of the Sacramento Valley Salmon Recovery Program.

"To have big adult salmon that have already made the perilous trip to sea and back only to die right before spawning because they take a wrong turn is just plain tragic," said Jacob Katz of California Trout, a non-profit organization that advocates for the recovery of the state's threatened native fish. "It's tragic because it so preventable. It's time to upgrade our water system and fix this problem."

Winter run Chinook salmon are listed as a federally endangered species and their population fluctuations can limit water supplies to farmers and cities. Because winter run and fall run Chinook are difficult to distinguish during fishing operations. low numbers of returning winter run salmon have curtailed West Coast commercial fishing in previous years.

"To have adult spawners fail to contribute to the next generation has real economic consequences for California," said John McManus of the Golden Gate Salmon Association, a coalition representing sport and commercial salmon fishermen. "Fishermen get penalized with fishing restrictions when winter run numbers are low, even though fishermen are not the source of the problem."

Salmon navigate largely by smell but are also attracted by water flow during their return migration. Water operations including reservoir releases and exports from the Delta can confuse signals fish use to migrate back to natal waters. Because the drainage water flowing out of the agricultural canals originates in the Sacramento River basin, it can mix up salmon, luring them off track where they become stranded and die. Prior to CDFW's fish rescue efforts starting in 2013, the number of salmon lost each year is unknown. Muddy water in winter usually makes it hard to observe fish in the canals.

"This effort provides a second chance for these fish to contribute to the next salmon generation," said Colin Purdy of CDFW. "If these salmon are not brought back to the river, they will die without reproducing because there is no spawning habitat in these drainage canals."

In 2013, more than 300 winter and spring-run salmon were rescued from the Colusa Drain.

Frequently Asked Questions: Why does it matter if a few fish don't manage to reproduce this Winter run Chinook salmon, begin their spawning migration in December. These are the most endangered run in the Valley and their numbers have direct effect on multibillion dollar industries important to the California economy. If the same number of adult winter run Chinook salmon taken in the Drains in 2013 were caught at sea, the National Marine Fisheries Service could have shut down the $1.4 billion ocean salmon fishery. If 20 percent of the offspring from these adult fish were sucked into the Delta pumps, the National Marine Fisheries Service could be forced to shut down the Central Valley and State Water Projects which provide water to tens of millions of Californians.

The drainage canals also entrap fall run Chinook salmon which support the commercial and sport fisheries. Like all salmon fall-run need cold water in order to successfully reproduce. California is in its fourth year of drought. Water levels are down and water temperatures are up. As their name suggests fall-run begin spawning in autumn and most of the run has already spawned. Those fish caught in the trap over the last several weeks are relatively late arrivals. Ensuring that they are saved and successfully spawn is particularly important because elevated river temperatures caused by drought are believed to have killed many of the salmon eggs laid earlier in the season. Only with the arrival of the winter rains have temperatures in upriver spawning beds cooled enough to successfully hatch salmon eggs.

What effect has the drought had on overall salmon populations in the Central Valley?

Central Valley salmon runs are adapted to drought. Under natural conditions salmon would adapt by using the cold-water habitats where and when they are available. But human alteration of the valley, especially construction of dams which cut salmon off from high elevation cold water habitats in the hills and mountains and levees which limit food production on floodplains, has degraded the river habitats on which salmon depend. Many of the native Central Valley salmon runs are now imperiled and this drought could be the last

How many fish have been caught and transported out of this canal to date this fall?

Over 500 fall run have been captured at this one location alone in the last three weeks. Many more are showing up each day. Genetic samples taken from each fish will definitively assign the fish to the different runs, but those samples take some time to be analyzed. Preliminary data suggest that most of the fish captured to this point are fall run, endangered winter run Chinook salmon could be migrat-

Where is the drainage canal in question located?

Beginning near Red Bluff and ending in the Delta, the network of flood protection and ag drainage canals stretches for over 100 miles down the west side of the Sacramento Valley. Attracted by the water flow coming down the canals, fish leave the Sacramento River and swim into the drainage system in the southern Yolo Bypass near Liberty Island. The trapping location, at Wallace Weir on Knaggs Ranch, is 30 miles north near the town of Woodland. If the trap is not in place, salmon can continue upstream into the Colusa Drain, a maze of ditches which extends approximately 80 miles north.

What fixes have been proposed to state and federal agencies that would prevent these types of wrong turns in the future?

Government agencies working with local stakeholders including drainage districts, environmental conservation organizations and farmers have a plan to upgrade the obsolete Wallace Weir to include gates that would block salmon and sturgeon from swimming up the Colusa Drain. State officials expect to break ground on this winwin water system improvement at Wallace Weir this coming summer. Other solutions are being proposed such as a seasonally operated bladder dam downstream in the toe drain which may also help to block fish and prevent stranding thereby avoiding the need for fish rescue.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Nurturing Seeds of Love, Hope and Courage
Celebrating 25 years

Providing a safe emergency school for Sacramento's homeless children.

Mustard Seed School was established in 1989 to help meet the needs of homeless children. Many school age children do not attend school because of their homelessness; some lack immunizations, birth certificates, or other documents, some are in transit, and almost all lack a support system. In spite of their situations these children are eager to learn and to be accepted.

Many homeless children are not enrolled in school because the places their families find to sleep are often not near a child's school and the family only plans to be there a short time. Sometimes the school needs an address or updated immunizations which homeless families cannot provide.

From fifteen to thirty-five children may not attend our school each day, and an average stay is just three to four weeks. Some children have been out of school for a long time and need help to go back. A major goal of the Program is to prepare and enroll homeless children into public schools, and preschool for younger children, when families have found housing stability. Since the school began, over 4500 individual children have participated in Mustard Seed.

For each closed sale, I will donate $250 to the Mustard Foundation in the sellers' name.

Unique Mortgage Services:

MBS Capital Group Inc. is a direct lender offering more mortgage programs than any other lender... bar none.

Refinance Your Loan

• Lower Your Rate:

Refinancing often makes sense if you can lower your interest rate which yields a lower monthly mortgage payment.

• Change to a Fixed Rate:

If you currently have an adjustable-rate mortgage (ARM), it may make sense to switch to a low, fixed-rate mortgage to make budgeting easier.

• Renovate Your Home:

If you have light-to-major renovations in mind for your home, it may make sense to get a renovation loan to pay for all your upgrades.

• Obtain Cash:

Use the equity in your home for minor home improvements, college tuition or investment opportunities.

Home Purchase

Our mortgage consultants have the expertise to assist first-time home buyers and move-up buyers analyze their short and long-term goals to make the wisest financing decisions.
