DIXON, CA (MPG) - When it comes to water safety, Dixon Recreation supervisor Kyla Schnitter quotes the Red Cross.

“Anywhere there is water, there is a risk of drowning, especially for young children,” Schnitter said, detailing the upcoming city aquatics program for summer 2024. “Access to a community pool with swim lessons and vigilant lifeguard staff can mitigate the risk of drowning through educating children and parents on how to be safe in and around water.” Babies as young as 6

Swim Class offered this summer.

“Swim lessons for children under three have proved beneficial in not only decreasing the risk of drowning but also providing physical benefits like increased coordination and balance through the support of the water,” Schnitter said.

The recreation supervisor said the parent participation class teaches caregivers how to move safely with their child in the water through various songs, games and activities.

Dixon Unified School District Labor Talks Continue

Molly Gallagher McNeal, a two-decade-long Dixon Unified School District teacher, tells officials how “sad” she is that she is undervalued at the district.

DIXON, CA (MPG) - Failed labor negotiations leave Dixon Unified School District teachers distraught.

That is the only way to put it after the last regularly-scheduled board meeting on April 18, when Dixon Teachers Association (DTA) Co-Vice President Melanie Sadorra made her statement from the podium.

“Unfortunately, despite DTA’s efforts and commitment, there has been no update since the last board meeting,” Sadorra said. “We have gotten no response regarding what we proposed on March 27, so it should not be surprising that Dixon is the only school district in Solano County that has not settled (negotiations) for the 2023-24 school year.”

Dixon Teachers Association “did their homework and presented labor negotiation proposals,” Sadorra said, that were “fiscally sound and not outrageous.”

“State money is intended for students and educators, and it should be spent on teachers for students, not on consultants, services or materials and supplies that have little impact on student achievement,” Sadorra said.

After Sadorra’s speech brought a room full of applause, Board President Juan Cuevas asked Superintendent Brian Dolan if he wanted to respond, breaking standard protocol to do so. Dolan said that while officials “typically do not do a lot of responding” to Dixon Teachers Association reports, he would.

“So we did, in fact, cancel negotiations yesterday; we weren’t fully prepared,” Dolan said, noting they would meet for an executive session on April 22. “That gives us more time.”

Before the present teachers spoke at the podium, Cuevas read two public comments via email from two Dixon teachers, beginning with Public Service Academy and Dixon High

Jr. Livestock Auction Supports Our Youth

By MPG Staff

DIXON, CA (MPG) - The lessons learned raising livestock as an FFA, 4-H, Grange or Independent project are lessons learned for a lifetime. Managing the purchase, choosing the best bred animal possible, feeding and keeping the animal healthy, then showing and preparing for sale are all activities that prepare our youth for a future in agriculture.

The Dixon May Fair Jr. Livestock Auction on Saturday is the culmination of months of daily hard work. The money earned by the youth at the Dixon May Fair Jr. Livestock Auction often goes to the purchase of an animal to raise next year, repay parents for feed bills or help along the way towards college savings accounts.

By supporting the Dixon

May Fair Junior Livestock Auction on Saturday, May 11, purchases are contributing to the education of today’s youth, the citizens of tomorrow.

The Auction starts at 11:30 a.m. The Jr. Livestock Auction at the Fair has been developed to educate the exhibitors in livestock marketing. The sale is made up of market animals that have been divisions of the Fair.

These animals are owned, raised, fed and shown by the youth in 4-H, FFA, Grange and Independent programs. They have been judged by knowledgeable people and placed according to the market grades for the Auction sale order.

For more information on how to bid and purchase at the Auction, contact the Fair office at (707) 678-5529. ★

Summer Interns Can Help Your Business

By Debra Dingman

How does one save time and money and remain as efficient as possible? Let me suggest that one easy way, especially this time of year, is to bring in interns. With summer break around the corner, now is the time to begin to plan for participating in a summer internship program.

I had an amazing opportunity for an internship that also allowed me to collect three units of college credit by writing reports on what I learned (similar to a term paper.)

Getting actual news story assignments and feature stories to write—and then getting them published was a perfect internship for me at the Daily Republic Newspaper in Fairfield. It also gave me valuable “clips” that I could use in my future to gain permanent or better work. But the best was getting hired as a full-time reporter after the internship!

When done right, internships can be an incredibly useful and affordable way to grow a business. Especially hiring students who are savvier on the computers especially with social media, for example.

To create your own successful summer internship program, consider these tips:

Plan the internship out ahead of time: Plan for what the intern will do, who he or she will report to, and what will be their expected work product.

Be prepared to teach and supervise: The intern needs someone in the organization to be the point person, and similarly, the organization needs to have one person assigned to the task of handling the intern(s). It works altogether smoother that way.

Give real assignments: It behooves neither of you to waste the intern’s time. Real and valuable assignments help them help you. Give some room for the intern to be self-empowered (especially for college students who may be more computer savvy than you!)

There are perks and rewards instead of paychecks: Movie tickets; treat them to lunch; take them to meetings; give them a ‘end-of-summer’ party. Make it a positive, educational, and rewarding experience that they will thank you for.

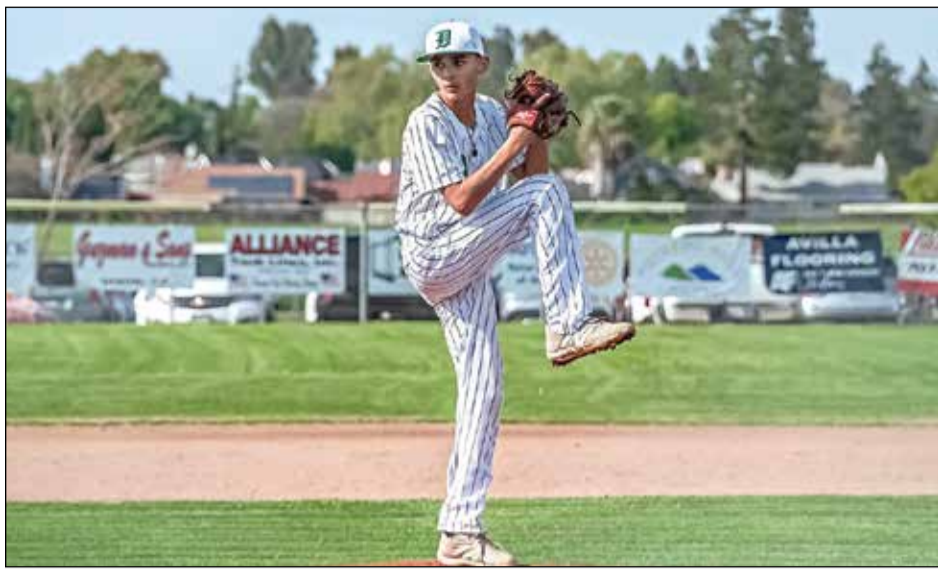

Don’t let it end on the last day: You should write two letters after the internship is over. One: A letter of reference. Two: A letter to the intern, sharing your assessment of their work, and giving a valuable critique. It will be appreciated, I’m sure.

Even with the benefits, I’ve talked to a few reluctant business owners because they are misinformed about the laws. One needs to realize that interns are usually coordinated through colleges which are helpful because they know how to help keep things legal.

What the law says now: According to the US Department of Labor Fact Sheet #71, unpaid internships must primarily benefit the intern rather than the employer. Additionally, interns must receive training similar to what they would receive in an educational setting. Courts have described the 7-point “primary beneficiary test” which can help an employer understand the difference between employee and intern. (<https://www.dol.gov/agencies/whd/fact-sheets/71-flsa-internships>)

Using interns are a win-win: For the business, hiring one or more interns is a way to bring in some very eager workers, people who can hopefully do some necessary (if not important) work, without breaking the bank. For the intern, it’s a chance to sharpen the saw, learn some new skills, add to their resume, be useful, and hopefully meet some people who can help them along their future path. ★

Crash and Smash at Annual Derby

By MPG Staff

DIXON, CA (MPG) - The Dixon May Fair Demolition Derby on Sunday encourages drivers to put their American-made cars or station wagons to the ultimate test. They will crash, smash, and ram each other to cartoonish crunched heaps of metal, trying to keep their own vehicle running while fans scream warnings.

Brave men and women, youngsters, and seasoned veterans, will pull on their protective helmets, squeeze in through the driver's side window, gun their engines and take aim at each other in the mud of the Dixon May Fair.

The crash 'em / smash 'em event is slated for the Grandstands arena on Sunday, May 12, at 5:30 pm (gates open at 4 p.m.) Drivers do their best, while driving in reverse, forward and often sideways, in a bed of mud, to smash the other cars to smithereens. The audience cheers as mud flies, wheels spin in the gooey mess, and one vehicle after another is annihilated, or the overworked and overheated engines give up in a smoky haze. ★

Bull Riding Excites on Friday at 7 P.M.

The ride must last the standard eight seconds for the rider to score. Courtesy photo

DIXON, CA (MPG) - The Dixon May Fair welcomes the Flying U Rodeo Company of Marysville back to our local arena after an absence of several years.

Bull riding! In the mind of many rodeo fans, rodeos almost always save the best for last.

It didn't evolve from ranch work, but it has long been a competition between man and bull. Using only a rope around the bull's girth, the cowboy puts one hand inside a handle on top of the bull rope, raises his free hand, and nods for the ride.

The ride must last the standard eight seconds for the rider to score. There is not a 'mark out' requirement, but if the free hand touches the animal or the rider, a disqualification results. Judges score the bull and cowboy a total of 50 points each. The bull is judged on its strength and ability to maintain its momentum throughout the eight second ride.

Legendary Showman Cotton Rosser was at the Flying U helm for more than 60 years producing top tier events throughout California and the West. Since 2022, when Cotton's son picked up the reins, Reno Rosser has continued to present plenty of thrills and spills to keep fans on the edge of their seats. See you there! ★

Khaos Chaos Loads of Fun

DIXON, CA (MPG) - The Khaos is a new super-spectacular ride featured by Butler Amusements. The Khaos is mounted on 3-semi-trailers making it one of our largest portable rides. The Khaos lifts riders high into the air, 24 at a time, while the main boom swings back and forth.

The base of the ride, holding six groups of seats, begins to spin, giving the passengers a feeling of weightlessness while they soar through the air with their feet swinging free. This ride creates a thrilling, unforgettable experience for its riders and provides a spectacular show. The Khaos has twice the capacity as our Freak Out ride. ★

Riley Reviews

“UNGENTLEMANLY WARFARE” AN ENJOYABLE CAPER; FINAL WORD ON TCM

A Film and TV Review by Tim Riley

“THE MINISTRY OF UNGENTLEMANLY WARFARE” RATED R

Recently declassified files of the British War Department and a book with the lengthy title of “The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare: How Churchill’s Secret Warriors Set Europe Ablaze and Gave Birth to Modern Black Ops” by Damien Lewis inspired director Guy Ritchie for a film up his alley.

While the book’s subtitle is revealing, what matters most is that the film “The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare” delivers high-octane action when a motley crew of rogues and mavericks undertakes a secret mission against the Nazis using unconventional fighting techniques.

Although the actual history of Winston Churchill’s efforts of Operation Postmaster’s special operatives to steal German boats from a Spanish island off the coast of Africa would be more compelling to read about, Guy Ritchie spices up an entertaining adventure by taking numerous liberties.

There’s a James Bond connection here with a young Ian Fleming (Freddie Fox) inside Churchill’s intelligence circle, who apparently drew upon the exploits of the commandos to create his famous secret agent.

One of the characters who may have inspired Fleming was eccentric Major Gus March-Phillipps (Henry Cavill), who is granted an early release from prison. The Major puts together his own elite team, recruiting Danish strongman Anders Lassen (Alan Ritchson), who’s skilled with a bow and arrow.

Other members are the Irish navigator Henry Hayes (Hero Fiennes Tiffin; underwater demolitions expert Freddy Alvarez (Henry Golding); and strategist Geoffrey Appleyard (Alex Pettyfer), who has to be rescued from torture in a German camp.

On the distaff side is femme fatale Marjorie Stewart (Eiza Gonzalez), a Jewish actress tasked with seducing the sadistic, sneering Nazi commander Heinrich Luhr (Til Schweiger).

Taking a huge political chance on an illicit mission, Churchill (Rory Kinnear) is perfectly willing to take the risk of dispatching rebels to turn the tide of the war in the Atlantic when England stood alone against the Nazis.

The renegades are invincible killers, mowing down scores of Nazis as easy as a carnival shooting range. The wisecracking dialogue, along with the exciting fight scenes, turn “The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare” into a fun caper.

FINAL WORD ON THE TCM CLASSIC FILM FESTIVAL

Many celebrities appeared as special guests at the TCM Classic Film Festival. John Travolta and Samuel L. Jackson joined the opening night gala for “Pulp Fiction.”

Morgan Freeman and Tim Robbins reunited for the screening of “The Shawshank Redemption.” Mel Brooks introducing a closing night presentation of his film “Spaceballs” was a real treat for a packed theater.

No celebrity was busier during the festival than the dashing Billy Dee Williams, going strong at age 87, as he was the special guest for “Lady Sings the Blues” and “The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars & Motor Kings.”

In addition to a book signing for “What Have We Here?,” Williams participated in an hour-long conversation at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, where he described his childhood living in Harlem and getting his start in a Broadway production.

Making his feature debut in 1959’s “The Last Angry Man,” Williams developed a friendship with actor Paul Muni, who told him that race doesn’t matter and whatever he wants to play he should play it. More to the point, Williams said that “talk of race is boring.”

While achieving renown for the role of scoundrel Lando Calrissian in the “Star Wars” films “The Empire Strikes Back” and “The Return of the Jedi,” Williams expressed a love for old romantic comedies, along with how much he loved kissing Diana Ross’ character of Billie Holiday in “Lady Sings the Blues.”

At the “Bingo Long” screening, Williams revealed that the title of his autography “What Have We Here?” was the first line he delivered upon meeting Carrie Fisher’s Princess Leia in “The Empire Strikes Back.” Indeed, he was a likable rascal, and that’s part of his popularity.

An interesting find was the 1960 Jerry Lewis film “The Bellboy,” for the actor stepped into the director’s role for a film hastily put together when Paramount Pictures wanted a summer release.

Appearing as a guest presenter was Lewis’ son Chris, who said that his father wanted the already completed “Cinderella” to be held for a Christmas release. Since Lewis was performing at the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami, he quickly penned a script with some help from Stan Laurel.

What’s fascinating about “The Bellboy,” with Lewis in the title role, is that his eccentric bellboy named Stanley remained mute until the very end, as a tribute to silent film comedians.

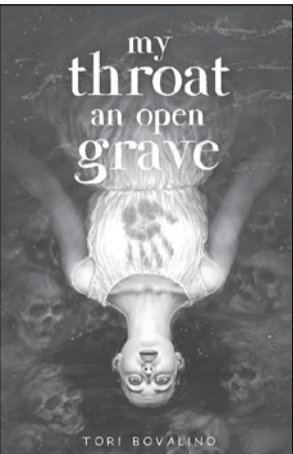

Chris Lewis also observed that “The Bellboy,” filmed almost entirely in less than a month at the Fontainebleau, was a film with “no story, no plot.” It’s pretty much, as Chris noted, a “series of silly sequences” which delivers the laughs.

Another discovery of comic gold is 1951’s “The Lavender Hill Mob,” where bank clerk Alec Guinness organizes an unlikely band of thieves to steal gold and melt it down as Eiffel Tower souvenirs. An unexpected treat is seeing pre-stardom Audrey Hepburn as a cigarette girl in the opening scene. ★

My Throat an Open Grave

by Tori Bovalino

Leah grew up knowing the stories about the Lord of the Wood. For years, young women of her hometown entered the woods, never to return. Living within the righteous standards of the town’s small church is almost suffocating, where every girl is told they must be righteous, holy, above all temptations, or the Lord of the Wood will take her like the others. So, Leah keeps her head down, attends church, and cares for her brother, who never stops crying.

◆ Publisher: Page Street YA
◆ Intended Audience: Young Adult
◆ Release Date: Feb. 20, 2024

Labyrinth meets the Grace Year in this deeply emotional and thought-provoking folklore story, My Throat an Open Grave. Don’t fear the cover. While at first glance, this story might look like a horror read, it is instead an emotional, heart-wrenching story of self-discovery, truth, lies, and the power of an overly righteous town run by controlling men.

With strong main characters interlaced with the best elements of the 1980s cult classic movie Labyrinth, film fans will instantly fall for the Lord of the Woods. Tori Bovalino once again captures the hearts of her readers while delivering a strong, powerful read. Bovalino doesn’t shy away from topics that leave her characters vulnerable and raw, touching on rarely-discussed subjects. Yet, she provides them with powerful storytelling settings that propel her readers through the story.

My Throat, an Open Grave, is raw, beautiful, impactful, and emotional, opening the door to unspoken questions and truths. This is a book perfect for getting lost in or discussing in a group; either way, readers will not be disappointed. ★

But one night, when it all feels too much, Leah offers her screaming brother to the Lord of the Wood, and he hears her. The next morning, lying on her brother’s crib, is a small bundle of sticks tied in a ribbon. Instantly, Leah knows she has made a mistake, and there is only one thing she can do: enter the forest to bring him back. Once she crosses into his domain, Leah realizes that The Lord of the Wood isn’t the devil she was made to believe, but a handsome young man. Who offers to return her brother for a price.

One month is all she has, and as Leah prepares, she learns more about the Lord of the Wood and those who live within the Forest village. Surrounded by loving caretakers who become friends and Tristan, the Lord of the Wood, Leah starts to feel like she belongs. But the closer she becomes to all of them, the more hidden secrets begin to unearth themselves. Secrets that no longer can stay hidden.

As the month draws to a close, so does her resolve, leaving Leah searching for where she truly belongs and what she believes. Yet, the truth she uncovers about her hometown is too heavy to remain buried, and if Leah doesn’t return, then the pattern continues.

Dixon Unified School District Labor Talks Continue

Aquatics Program Makes a Splash

English teacher Julie Lattig, who wrote she works “more hours and makes less money.” “My students ask me, ‘Miss Lattig, will you be here next year?’ And while my mouth says that is the plan, my heart aches in my chest because while I want so desperately to stay here, it is getting harder and harder to justify doing so,” Lattig wrote.

Cuevas noted that the next email came from his Dixon High School English teacher, Lisa Krebs, who wrote that while she “never gives up on Dixon, it feels like Dixon is giving up on me.”

“It is getting harder and harder to provide for my family on my salary,” Krebs wrote. “Even as a 31-year-veteran teacher with a master’s, who teaches 120% percent every chance she gets.”

Krebs’s email became more personal as she opened up about students being like family, whom she trusts to babysit and wash the family car.

“I have gone to court to help students stay in this country and wrote hundreds of recommendation letters on my own time to help Dixon students get scholarships and jobs,” Krebs wrote.

Tremont Elementary School teacher Molly Gallagher McNeal told the audience she would likely get emotional when speaking due to her deep “Dixonite” history, with generations in her family graduating from the district. Gallagher McNeal said she started her teaching career in Vacaville 25 years ago but left because “Dixon was the place to work.”

“It was a strong district that made its employees feel valued and respected... When I got the offer, I jumped at it,” Gallagher McNeal said, noting that 21 years later, it’s not the same. “Tonight, I stand before you sad.”

Gallagher McNeal said that, like her peers, she also considers leaving Dixon and returning to work in Vacaville or a neighboring district. Nick Santini stood at the podium on behalf of his wife, who he said teaches at the district, telling officials, “You have to do better” because “teachers don’t feel valued.”

After Santini said the financial offer put on the table for the teachers was a “slap in the face,” Dixon High School teacher Nick Stidham got up to speak, saying he had not planned to do so until feeling compelled.

As far as the “state of negotiations,” Stidham, a 17-year multimedia teacher and the department chair for Visual and Performing Arts told officials that in his nearly two-decade career, he could have left Dixon for better pay but chose to remain with the “incredible” students and his colleagues.

“I do question more and more if teachers like me, who you have heard about, are wondering if it is really worthwhile to be committed long term here if we are not going to be fully supported from a financial standpoint by our district and our community,” Stidham said, to even louder applause than his peers.

Jennifer Moody, paraprofessional at Dixon High School, said she can make up to three dollars more an hour “20 minutes down the road,” it is not the pay she is most concerned about.

“Our students deserve every opportunity and they deserve every ounce of respect, and where that starts is our teachers and staff, and we can’t even do that,” Moody said.

District Official Shawntel McCammon said school representatives met with the Service Employees International Union on April 22, and with Dixon Teachers Association officials on April 24, as Superintendent Dolan promised.

“Negotiations are ongoing, and meetings will continue to be held,” McCammon said. “There have been no actions or decisions have been made at this time.”

However, Dixon Teachers Association Co-President Sadorra said, “The school year is nearing its end and a new superintendent is coming in, which narrows the timeline to settle.

“Leaving these negotiations unsettled is not in anyone’s best interest,” Sadorra said. ★ lap swim classes offered in group and individual lessons.

“Our competition pool has eight lanes, kickboards, pull buoys and water aerobics equipment available for use upon request,” Graf said. “What’s new this year is that the community can view our full schedule and make class reservations in our new online portal.”

The city aquatics program also offers water aerobics, beginning in June.

“The schedule will be posted in the coming weeks,” Graf said.

On the other end of the infant spectrum of swimming, aquatics is good for seniors because of its low impact, according to Schnitter.

“The water reduces pressure on joints, bones, and muscles. Aquatic exercise benefits anyone with arthritis, joint injuries or limited mobility,” Schnitter said.

Overall, aquatics is excellent for all ages in between, according to the recreation director, who notes at least three reasons to exercise in water. First, it provides whole-body workouts with water’s built-in resistance.

“It improves cardiovascular health since swimming works the heart and lungs,” Schnitter said, adding that it also improves mental health because it helps regulate the breathing pattern. “The color, sound, and feel of water can lower pulse rate and increase feelings of calmness, known as the blue mind effect.”

Additionally, Schnitter said that being on a swim team can improve life-long skills such as self-motivation, time management, communication and teamwork. Those who just want to lounge around in the water with no instruction at all can enjoy Dixon City Recreation Swim that begins on June 10 and runs until Aug. 4 from 1 to 4 p.m. every Thursday and Saturday.

“Swimming is a great way for children to socialize and stay active,” Schnitter said. “Recreation swim allows kids to interact through engagement with familiar water games like Sharks and Minnows, Colors and Marco Polo”

Graf said no matter what age you are, the variety of programs at Pat Grannuci Aquatics Center offers many opportunities.

“During the summer, the pool is open seven days a week and it is a great place to come and beat the heat or get in daily exercise,” Graf said.

Dixon Family Services Celebrates 40

Dixon Family Services Director Cookie Powell is handed a framed recognition for 40 years of community service by Ron Turner, field representative for California Senator Bill Dodd.

DIXON, CA (MPG) - About two dozen people gathered recently to share in the 40th anniversary of Dixon Family Services, an organization established in 1984 to provide a wide variety of human services for low-income families and individuals.

"We specialize in helping those struggling to meet their basic needs of food, rent, and utilities," explained Executive Director Cookie Powell. During Covid, the need for human services increased drastically and there were many calls for help: from people who had never needed any kind of benefit before. They never closed during that unprecedented and dangerous time, and that the staff members were to be commended for being brave enough to come to work every day, she explained.

"They did this because it is in their hearts and souls to help those in need," said Powell.

Guests were treated to fanfare and refreshments after an explanation of where the organization had experienced times of plenty of financial support but also times of financial drought.

"Yet supporters have always pulled through for our citizens," Powell said, publicly thanking Joe and Christa Bruch from Dixon Grocery Outlet who has donated food as well as gift cards over holidays and regularly helps stock the DFS food pantry. In July, the store runs a fundraiser called "Independence from Hunger" and offers customers a $5 coupon if they donate $5 to the organization.

"The pantry helps fight food insecurity in hundreds of households each year," said an appreciative Powell.

For the convenience of Dixon residents, representatives of government benefits and healthcare programs are also located in the DFS building including a WIC (Women, Infants, and Children) Clinic. Victor Hernandez lauded Powell and her staff for keeping the doors open to the WIC Program.

"Solano County sees 9,300 clients a month through six clinics, and three of those are in Dixon," said Hernandez, health education specialist for Solano County Public Health. "In the Dixon clinics, 600 are served."

Tours were given for those who wanted to see the insides of the historical building and the offices where they work with families.

"It used to be the courthouse and also the Dixon Police Department all in one. I remember going to court here three days after I got my license," said Powell, drawing a laugh from the crowd.

Dixon is a small, culturally-diverse community, with a large percentage of families living at or below poverty.

"We will continue to do as much as we can to alleviate some of the ill effects of poverty, motivated by our overarching goal of ensuring that all children are safe, healthy, and thriving in their homes," Powell said. "Our success depends greatly on foundation grants and donations from those who want to be part of our mission to improve lives." ★

Songs of the Eagles to Perform

By MPG Staff

DIXON, CA (MPG) - New entertainment at this year's Dixon May Fair will be provided by the Songs of the Eagles on Thursday, 6 – 9 p.m.

The time... the early 70's. The place... a dark desert highway. The setting... the famous Hotel California which according to the legend is the place "you can never leave."

Of course, you will never want to leave as the familiar chart-topping music of The Eagles: Henley, Frey, Schmit and Walsh fills the room with the songs loved by generations for more than 40 years.

Inside the Hotel California you will find the Tequila Sunrise Ballroom where a six-piece band performs to perfection. The Eagles greatest hits such as, "Take It Easy" to "Get Over it." The male vocalist will "Take You to The Limit," with his dynamic version of "Witchy Woman" and "Heartache Tonight."

With five number one singles and four number one albums, The Eagles were among the most successful recording artists of the 1970's. At the end of the 20th Century, two of those albums, "Eagles: Their Greatest Hits (1971-1975)" and "Hotel California," ranked among the ten best-selling albums ever, according to the certifications of the Record Industry Association of America.

Though most of its members came from outside of California, the group was closely identified with a country- and folk -tinged sound that initially found favor in and around Los Angeles in the late 60's, as played by bands such as, 'The Flying Burrito Brothers' and 'Poco', which both contributed members to 'The Eagles.' The band also drew upon traditional rock n' roll styles and in their later work helped define the broadly popular rock sound, eventually referred to as Classic Rock. This helped The Eagles to achieve a perennial appeal among the generations of music fans who continued to buy their records many years after they had split up, which inspired the reunion they mounted in the mid-90's. The Eagles were inducted into the Hall of Fame in January 1983.

The Eagles released their first album in 28 years in October 2007 and the new touring schedule to promote this album is guaranteed to spark a resurgence in The
