Historical Society Hosts Tea at the Rae

GALT, CA (MPG) - Galt Area Historical Society held its annual Tea at the Rae fundraiser on May 11 and highlighted that the venerable Rae House Museum is now recognized as a historic landmark.

The Tea in the Rae house's backyard gave guests the opportunity to don their prettiest hats and spring dresses and many attendees brought their mothers for an early Mother's Day present.

The Native Sons of the Golden West recently recognized Rae House Museum as a historic place and a commemorative plaque will go outside the building.

In a talk, historian Dan Tarnasky recounted the history of the Rae house, from its construction in 1868 to its fall into disrepair in the late '80s, and to the historical society's acquisition and restoration of the house.

Tarnasky also gave an update on the Liberty Schoolhouse, which the society has been restoring in the Rae's parking lot. He said the exterior was almost finished, with work soon to begin on the interior and the society is seeking painting volunteers.

Organizer Joan Werblun called the tea a "success," noting that most of the guests had attended previous teas.

"We've tried to establish a nice bonding group, a nice conversational community group. And I think

City on Track for $3M Earnings

By Matthew Malone
News Editor

GALT, CA (MPG) - The city of Galt continues to get record returns on its investments, Treasurer Sean Farrell said at the May 7 Galt City Council meeting.

In the first three quarters of fiscal year 2023-24, the city's investments earned close to $2.8 million in interest, a record amount, Farrell stated in his quarterly report.

"There was only one year while I've been sitting in this chair that we've actually earned over $2 million. That was the (2008-09) fiscal year, so we're already at a record-breaking pace," Farrell said. "I do expect the city to earn $3 million ... at the end of this fiscal year."

Farrell noted that these earnings are distributed to the different city departments, based on their portion of the investment pool.

Three months ago, after the first two quarters of the year, the city had already collected nearly $1.9 million in interest, Farrell stated in his February report.

High federal interest rates are boosting the city's earnings, according to Farrell.

At the May 7 meeting, Farrell told City Councilmember Shawn Farmer that it appears as if the Federal Reserve will keep interest rates where they are for the time being, with speculation of a decrease in November or December. A lower interest rate would probably cause the city's investments to earn less.

While Farrell had earlier added some short-term investments to take advantage of the higher interest, he said he is returning his focus to longer-term options.

Farrell spoke about the local economy. Galt's unemployment rate is 6.8%, according to figures from the state Employment Development Department. Farrell said that this was an overestimate, however, as he believes that actual unemployment is closer to Sacramento County's average rate of 4.9%. He said 25 houses were sold in Galt during April, with a median price of $503,000.

During public comment, several Galt residents asked for action on a neighboring house whose owner they accused of letting the house fall into disrepair, behaving in anti-social and dangerous ways, and handling unregistered vehicles.

Superintendent-to-Be Talks Grad Requirements, Engaging Students

By Matthew Malone
News Editor

GALT, CA (MPG) - Anna Trunnell, the incoming superintendent for Galt Joint High School District, applied for the position to serve a community closer to home, and to contribute as the district develops graduation requirements and works to involve all students in the learning environment.

Trunnell recently spoke with the Herald about her career history and her goals for the district.

The high school district board of trustees appointed Trunnell on April 18, and she will start work for the district on July 1. She will replace retiring Superintendent Lisa Pettis.

Pettis congratulated Trunnell on her appointment, saying she wanted Trunnell "to know that she has a very strong administrative team at both schools' sites as well as the district office."

"That's always a really nice feeling," Pettis said. "Staff are very welcoming here and I think she'll fit right at home here in our district."

said she was looking for a school district closer to home, to spend more time with her family. Having grown up in and attending school in a small community, Trunnell said, she had a connection with the Galt district's "more intimate" size.

Trunnell pointed to graduation requirements and engagement of students and parents as areas in which she can make contributions. For the past couple of years, the district has been developing a state-mandated ethnic-studies graduation requirement that will include information on ethnic groups locally represented.

"I think I've had some proven experience in how we navigate increasing graduation requirements for students, which I see

City's Development, Public Works Chiefs Resign

By Matthew Malone
News Editor

GALT, CA (MPG) - Two city of Galt officials overseeing the city's public works and development projects recently announced their resignations.

Community Development director Craig Hoffman and Public Works director Mike Selling discussed their resignations at the May 9 meeting of the Galt Planning Commission.

"These last three-and-a-half years, I've had a blast," said Hoffman, whose resignation became effective on May 15, after press time. He was appointed as community development director in late 2020. The role oversees zoning and land use, as well as building permits and city code compliance. Hoffman also served as the city's liaison to the Planning Commission.

As the director, Hoffman repeatedly emphasized the importance of increasing the rate of housing construction, saying a steady growth rate would help the city keep up with inflation. The long-delayed Liberty Ranch housing development on Marengo Road broke ground last year.

In a statement about the resignations, the city of Galt also cited Hoffman's work on updating the housing element of the city's General Plan, a document that lays out the city's plans to develop housing and meet state requirements. It also pointed to the planned Lippi Ranch development southeast of F and Third streets; the project required an uncommon process of evaluating potentially historic buildings on the property.

Speaking to the Planning Commission at his last meeting as director, Hoffman shared his ideas on how it can ensure effectiveness.

"Every single person brings something different to the table, there's a diversity of vision and a diversity of ideas, but when you come together and the ultimate goal is doing what's best for the community, those are the best Planning Commissions," Hoffman said, later adding,

"Stay true. Don't backpedal. When I got here, there was so much concern from the community and whether or not the process was truly public, and it was hard under COVID."

Hoffman said many of his choices as director were motivated by requests from City Council members and members of the public to make the planning process more transparent.

Selling joined the city in February 2019, and his resignation becomes official on May 24. He is leaving to become the deputy director of engineering at the city of Manteca. As head of the Public Works department, Selling supervised the city's utilities, including water and wastewater, as well as roads and facilities maintenance.

The city of Galt cited Selling's work negotiating the waste collection agreement with Cal-Waste Recovery Systems and managing water restrictions during the state's drought.

"His contributions extend to securing grant funding for the C Street beautification project, initiating design work on the Hwy 99/Walnut Avenue Interchange project, and overseeing the development of Walker Park," the city's statement read.

"The City of Galt expresses its gratitude for Mike Selling and Craig Hoffman's dedication and hard work and wishes them nothing but the best in their future endeavors," the statement concluded.

Selling talked about his work in Galt during the Planning Commission meeting.

"It has been an absolute pleasure to work here, and it's near and dear," Selling said. "So it'll be tough but I'll be watching from a distance and cheering it on, and hopefully come and visit from time to time, too."

Selling praised the planning commissioners and city staff for their work.

"There is an extremely disproportionately high number of very high-performing folks here. As Craig said, they bleed for this town. ... Galt is very fortunate in that respect," Selling said. ★

CSD Firefighters Train with New Bailout Gear

By Matthew Malone
Staff Writer

ELK GROVE, CA (MPG) - Cosumnes firefighters will soon have equipment to help them escape buildings during life-threatening situations, a Cosumnes Fire leader said recently.

Deputy Fire Chief Dan Quiggle presented the information at the Cosumnes Community Services District's May 1 board of directors meeting. He explained the program to supply agency personnel with bailout kits, aka fire escape kits. The meeting also included a presentation on dogs helping maintain the district's golf course and an appearance by local Girl Scouts.

Described as "a last-resort tool in a critical life-safety situation," a bailout kit includes tools that allow a firefighter to rappel down the side of a building when conventional exits are blocked. These tools are a belt that the firefighter wears, a rope with an anchor, and a descent-control device. The rope is 70 feet long, which Quiggle said is long enough for nearly any building in the district.

Quiggle said the kit is mainly intended to help a firefighter escape, but it can also provide additional options for rescuing others.

The purchase of kits was originally planned for the 2019-20 fiscal year, but it was delayed by the COVID-19 pandemic. The next year, the Federal Emergency Management Agency gave the agency a grant with money for 160 kits, which were delivered in March last year.

Quiggle said the department trained its current academy students in the use of the kits, noting that the trainees are often best at learning new techniques "because they don't have any preconceived notions about how things go."

The deputy chief said the department plans to finish training its firefighters and give out the bailout kits by the end of September.

Here is an example of the bailout kits to be provided to Cosumnes Fire Department personnel.

He said firefighters would repeat hands-on training once a year because the kits will be needed in rare but high-risk situations.

"This is something, hopefully, a firefighter may never do in their career, but if they have to do it, their life absolutely depends on the equipment," Quiggle said.

Parks and Recreation director Traci Farris said that, for 15 years, the district's K-9 program has been its "most effective" method of keeping nuisance wildlife out of Emerald Lakes Golf Course.

The most troublesome wild animals that frequent the golf course are geese, Farris said: "Geese can be a nuisance to any golf course and cause damage by foraging, and their droppings are very problematic. Repairing damage and cleaning up droppings costs time and money and can impact the quality of the golf course."

Farris said the dogs are trained to "harass" the geese and drive them away, not to harm them. Currently, a district employee serves as the K-9 handler, but Farris said it is possible to outsource the service.

Other wildlife methods, such as spray repellents and decoys, have proved labor-intensive or else ineffective in the long term, Farris said.

Farris said staff are developing a professional services agreement for the K-9 handler, as well as a wildlife monitoring program. She added that the K-9 program will be included in the district's Parks and Golf Maintenance Management Plan.

Girl Scout Troop 1691 opened the meeting by leading the Pledge of Allegiance.

Amanda Chehrezad, the district's administrator of general services, said the troop "really does embody the value of friendship, leadership and empowerment" through its projects.

It partnered with the district to plant 13 trees in honor of Arbor Day and educated Elk Grove Regional Park visitors about wildlife.

The troop created "Don't feed the wildlife" signs now posted around the park, as well as a Little Free Library there. ★ that helps a lot. It's not a commercial tearoom where they take you in and take you out," Werblun said.

The weather held, giving a sunny day with a slight breeze. In a change from last year, Werblun had shade structures placed over the tables to keep everyone cool.

Werblun also opted for round tables this year, which she said encouraged the attendees to socialize.

Corinne Koenig and Bobbie Rocha attended for the first time on the recommendation of historical society member Bernice Lee. They complimented the food, which included a variety of finger sandwiches and Mother's Day cake, and said they looked forward to coming back next year.

"Even though it was a warm day, the breeze and the shade were very inviting," Rocha said.

The Rae House Museum is located at 204 Oak Ave. It will open for tours from 1 to 4 p.m. on the first Sunday of the month through December. For more about the Galt Area Historical Society, visit galthistory.com. ★ is some of the next steps that the Galt district is implementing. I have experience thinking about how we encourage students from our English-learner population and also special education to be included in the learning environment and experience,” Trunnell said, also citing experience in engaging parents and the broader community.

“Those are just a few things that I know (are) a priority for the district that I feel like I have proven experience and can help them to continue navigating.”

Asked about her educational career, Trunnell said she was already interested in teaching while pursuing her bachelor’s degree at University of California at Davis.

“I always found that I was in spaces where I was helping others to learn or mentoring or being in spaces of service, really,” Trunnell said. “So that’s what spoke to me first is how I can apply the passions that I have for those things into becoming a teacher.”

Trunnell spent 12 years as a teacher and then an administrator in what is now Twin Rivers Unified School District. While teaching, a principal asked if she would consider administration. As a result, Trunnell earned her administrative credential and a master’s degree in educational leadership from California State University at Sacramento. The program, she said, “was really focused on the urban experience and also equity and antiracism, so that movement and the way that we can incorporate that into our work.”

“That led me to think more broadly about how, by leaving the classroom, I could contribute in deeper and broader ways,” Trunnell said.

Next, Trunnell would oversee curriculum at Washington School District in West Sacramento, Elk Grove Unified School District and Stockton Unified School District.

In 2020, Trunnell was appointed at Santa Rosa City Schools as assistant superintendent of human resources. She became superintendent in July 2021.

Trunnell said she gets to know a new community by “being visible” in multiple ways, such as by visiting school sites, and meeting with parent groups, community groups and city leaders.

The new appointee said she wants input from staff, students and parents on the district’s accomplishments and challenges.

“I want them to know that I want to hear the things that are going well. I want to hear what they feel have been successes,” Trunnell said. “I also want to hear their concerns. I want to know what is worrying them. What are the things that they feel are barriers? And then, of course, I want to work with them on ideas on how they see those things being navigated.”

Trunnell gave “full respect” to the staff serving students and families in the district. She plans to work with staff and take direction from the board of trustees to advance district projects.

“I’m very much looking forward to this opportunity to come and be a part of the Galt community,” Trunnell said, noting that she is service-oriented. “I do believe in taking action once I have had an opportunity to be a listener and to understand where people are coming from and to get their feedback.

“And I’m just excited. I’m excited for the potential of what’s ahead, and how I can be a great contributor to the district and to the community,” Trunnell said. ★

The three speakers said they began to suspect that the house in northern Galt was being used as a “chop shop” for processing unregistered vehicles after a family moved in in 2018. Neighbor Brenda Pinasco said nearby residents saw unregistered vehicles coming and going from the house and vehicle identification numbers being removed. Since the owner died last year, his 18-year-old son has lived in the house, according to the speakers.

“This young man ... started having weekend parties; music into the late hours; illegal fireworks; racing motorcycles and vehicles on our public roads, in the backyard, and, yes, inside his home and out the front door,” Pinasco said.

Pinasco said she first contacted the city about the house in 2021. The city began issuing weekly fines for the unkempt front yard; the owner at the time “would make attempts, but the yard never fully got in order, and then we are right back to where we started,” Pinasco said.

Galt Police Department became involved in 2023. Police Chief Brian Kalinowski said the police department can mainly act on issues in front of the house, such as illegally parked cars. On the evening of the council meeting, he said that there were “no vehicles that are on the street that are unregistered and parked improperly.” He said concerns about vehicles on the property are handled by code enforcement.

“My staff has been directed to address the issues as appropriate,” Kalinowski said.

Interim City Manager Chris Erias said the house has received weekly code fines, which “recently” changed to daily.

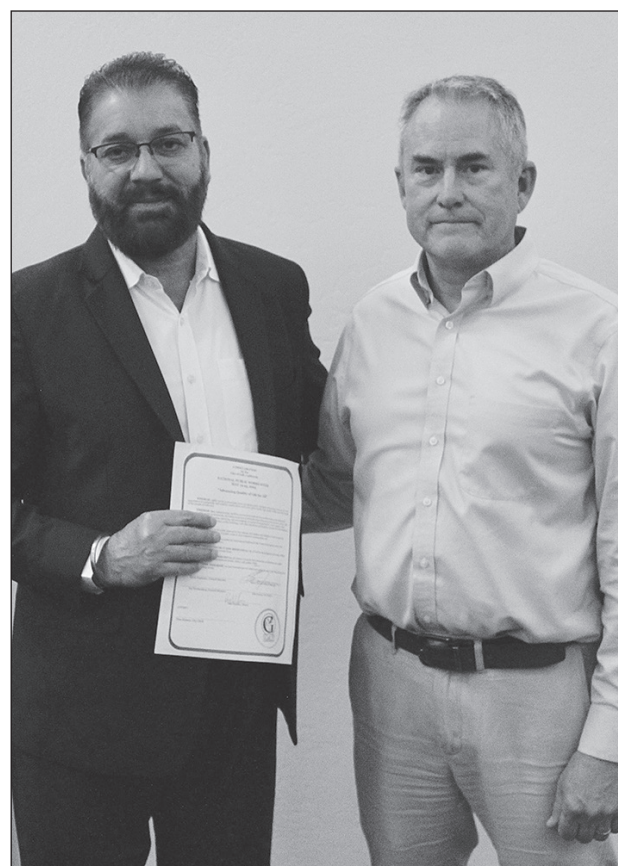

“But based on what I heard today, I don’t think that’s going to matter much to the youngster at the home,” Erias said.

The city might eventually address the situation with abatement or place a lien on the house, according to Erias.

Also during public comment, Planning Commissioner Bonnie Rodriguez asked that City Council consider raising the individual campaign contribution limit for City Council candidates. She said the $100 limit is too low and discourages some potential candidates.

In other business, City Council issued a proclamation recognizing National Public Works Week from May 19 to 25. Additionally, it unanimously accepted a change to the Parks and Recreation Commission’s bylaws, clarifying that it provides recommendations to City Council on general matters relating to parks and rec, rather than policy specifically; interim City Attorney Frank Splendorio said this better reflects the commission’s actual practice and avoids extra paperwork for the commissioners.

City Council also approved holding the upcoming City Council elections during the November general election. The seats of Council Members Jay Vandenburg and Kevin Papineau will be up for votes. ★

Matsui Praises Boosting Semiconductor Production

Office of Congresswoman Doris Matsui News Release

WASHINGTON, D.C. (MPG) - On April 8, Congresswoman Doris Matsui (D-CA), co-author of the Creating Helpful Incentives for the Production of Semiconductors (CHIPS) for America Act, issued the following statement after the Department of Commerce announced a preliminary memorandum of terms to provide up to $6.6 billion in direct funding for Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company (TSMC) under the CHIPS and Science Act.

This proposed funding would support TSMC's investment of more than $65 billion to construct three leading-edge fabs in Arizona. These fabs will produce some of the world's most advanced semiconductors critical to national security and consumer products like smartphones, AI datacenter servers, and more.

"Today's announcement is another milestone on our road to reassert America's global innovation leadership," Matsui said. "These investments will ensure a secure pipeline of some of the most advanced semiconductors in the world - mission critical components our national security apparatus needs to succeed. As co-author of the original CHIPS Act, I am pleased to see this legislation working as intended - bringing innovative economic anchors to communities across the country, protecting our national security, and creating good-paying jobs for American workers. I will continue to work hard to ensure we maximize these investments moving forward."

Matsui introduced the CHIPS Act in June 2020 with Congressman Michael

McCaul (R-TX) and Senators John Cornyn (R-TX) and Mark Warner (D-VA).

She successfully included an amendment based on the CHIPS Act as part of the FY21 National Defense Authorization Act to enable the building and modernization of semiconductor manufacturing facilities in America.

She also led efforts to secure this funding through the CHIPS and Science Act. ★

Why Not Show a Little Love for Walnuts?

growth for nut production.

The husk of the walnut is peeled away from the shell at harvest. It contains juice that will readily stain anything it comes in contact with. It is used as a cloth dye.

The United States exports more walnuts than any other country. Ninety-nine percent of the nation's commercial English walnuts are produced in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys of California. Yay! Let's hear it for the Central Valley!

Bakers use walnuts for a variety of reasons. Walnuts add crunch and flavor to baked goods such as pies, breads and cakes. Keep walnuts on hand to add to muffins, pancake and waffle mixes, too. Don't you just love walnuts added to a warm chocolate brownie or a chocolate chip cookie? It gives them an extra crunch.

But baked goods aren't the only recipes in the kitchen where walnuts come in handy. They also get added to soups and other savory dishes. Walnuts complement fresh vegetables, salads and fruits, and more finely chopped walnuts create excellent crusts for fish, chicken and pork. I just might have to make those chocolate-chip and walnut cookies for a snack tonight.

They have worked hard on their livestock, industrial, gardening, food production, photography, wood and metal projects. Some projects take a year to complete.

The Junior Livestock Auction is Sunday, May 26. It is a good way to spend the Memorial Day weekend close to home, and you will be supporting the future. Check online for more information.

Maybe I will see you at the fair. I will be holding a mustard-covered corndog and a fresh-squeezed lemonade, eyeballing a funnel cake for dessert.

If I ate all that, I would be miserable for a week.

Seriously, these young people have worked hard, and seeing a friendly face at the fair to support their efforts means a lot.

Until next week - Be strong, be courageous, make a memory. ★

BY NORRIS BURKES

I have a great trivia question to start your weekend.

Do you remember who made famous the catchphrase, "Let's be careful out there"?

If you guessed Michael Conrad playing Sergeant Phil Esterhaus in the TV show "Hill Street Blues" (1981-1987), you'd be half right. Esterhaus, the desk sergeant, sent his officers onto the street with a heartfelt, "Let's be careful out there."

But a little-known fact about that quote is that TV writers got that phrase from my mom.

That's right. At least twice a week during my adolescence, Mom sent me out into the world telling me, "Be careful out there."

Your mom probably said the same thing, too, but I'm sure you didn't reply with the sarcasm I did.

"Be careful of what, Mom?" I'd ask. "Be specific. Are you telling me I can't walk the freeway to school anymore?"

"Why do I have to be careful? I

Let's Play a Trivia Game

promised my buddies I'd drive them to the beach so we can swim with the sharks."

I'm sure she got my point. Her admonition was short of specific tips, so it wasn't going to significantly change my plans to do stupid things.

Nevertheless, she'd send me out with a smile, rebuffing my sarcasm, saying, "Just be careful!, OK?"

Still, I loved her concern. She spoke as a person of faith, and her warning to "be careful" carried the sentiment of the Apostle Paul.

Whether you consider yourself to be religious or not, I think there's good motherly advice in Paul's letter to the church at Ephesus, asking congregants to "Be very careful, then, how you live – not as unwise but as wise."

The passage continues with astonishing specificity, naming four goals to living wisely. (Ephesians 5:15-20)

First, from verse 18, "Don't drink too much wine. That cheapens your life."

My mom, a Baptist preacher's wife, was definitely a teetotaler. Still, I think she'd like the alternative as it's suggested in The Message – "Drink the Spirit of God, huge drafts of him."

The latter half of the verse names a second goal: "Become filled with the Spirit of God."

I'm not sure what kind of spirit my mom saw in her youngest child. But I do know she encouraged me to let God reflect the divine image He placed in me. Even today, I know she sees in me "fightings within and fears without," much like the hymn "Just As I Am."

The third goal Paul mentions is "speak to one another with psalms, hymns, and songs from the Spirit" (v.19).

That's a bit confusing. Are we supposed to sing to one another as if we are characters in a musical?

No. I think Paul is saying, "Speak to each other as if God was speaking his love through you."

My mom's translation of this – and probably your mom's too – was, "If you can't say anything nice, don't say anything at all. But by all means, say nice things!"

Finally, verse 20 tells us to be careful that we are "always giving thanks to God for everything."

Thank God for everything. REALLY? No.

Paul's writings, here and elsewhere, emphasize that we take care to maintain the spirit of thanksgiving for all situations, both visible and invisible.

Even now I'm thankful that, at age 91, my mom is still around to tell me to be careful with my grammar, my speech and my posture.

Which proves my last catchphrase for the day: "There's no place like home." –"The Wizard of Oz," 1939.

Baseball Seniors Celebrated

GALT, CA (MPG) - Liberty Ranch baseball started out strong against the El Dorado Cougars on their senior night. The atmosphere was festive with banners, treats and personalized gifts for the three seniors: Phillip Vasquez, Theodore Seidel and Shaye Setter.

Setter slid across the plate with helmet flying to score in the first inning. The Hawks scored again in the third inning when Vance Moe made it around. The score was 2-0.

The Cougars scored one in the fourth inning.

The Hawks were up again, and when the umpire erroneously called a Liberty Ranch batter out on the second strike, head coach Jason Adversalo caught the error and ran two players in as the Cougars walked off the field.

The umpire checked with the Hawk scorekeeper and gave the Hawks the two runs, and that made the score 4-1. El Dorado's coach came out of the dug-out and convinced the umpire that their scorekeeper was correct, and the umpire took the two runs away.

Needless to say, there was a lot of grumbling from both sets of stands, but the boys took it in stride and went back to playing.

El Dorado scored twice in the fifth inning, putting them ahead of the Hawks 3-2.

Neither team was able to score in the sixth or seventh inning and that was the final score.

Kade LeCompte pitched for the first 6.2 innings, only walking one batter and striking out five. The Cougars on the other hand, played three pitchers and between the three walked four Hawks and struck out 10.

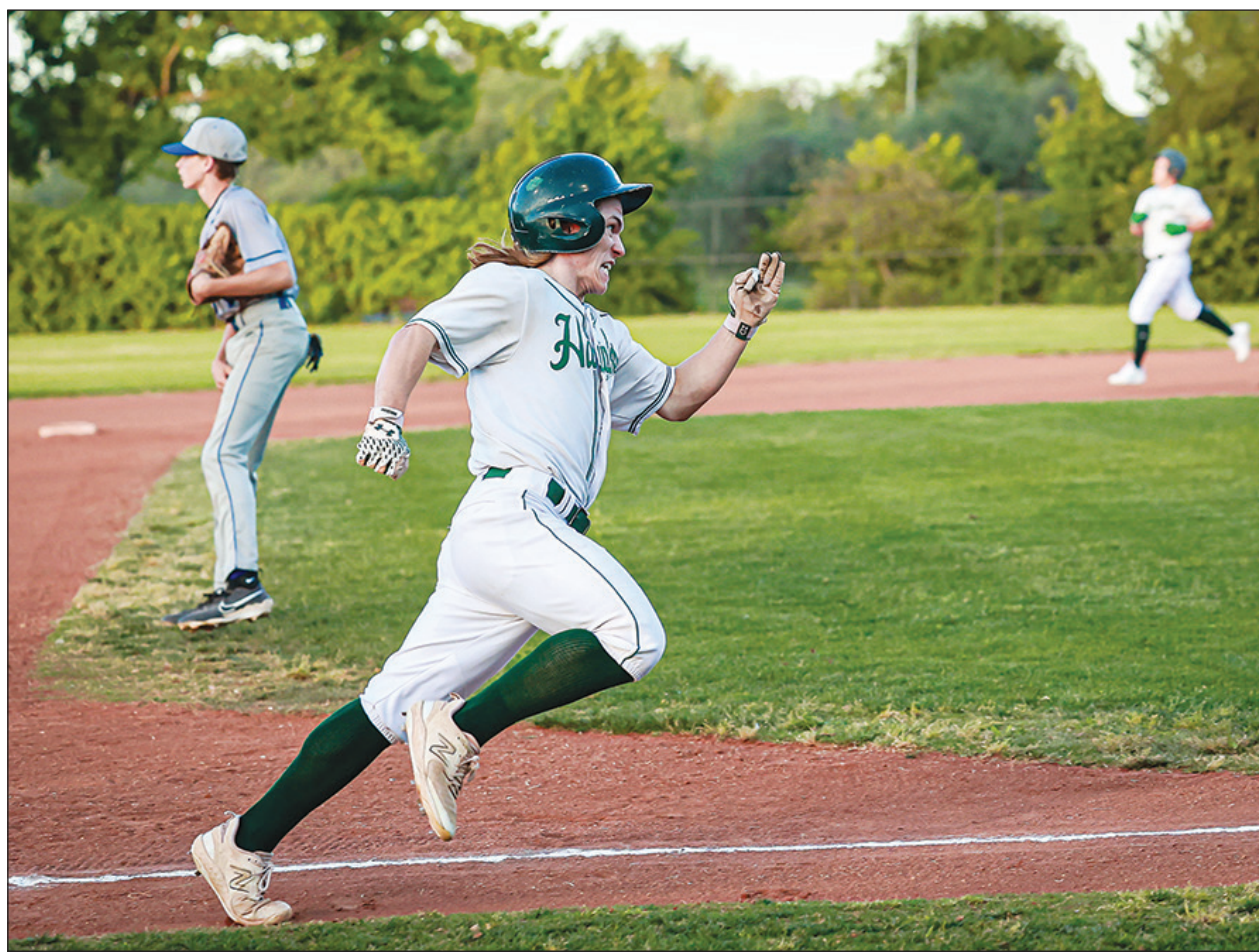

A win against El Dorado could have put the Hawks in second place for league, but they ended the season in third place. ★
