SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - More than 200 sidewalk squares were sponsored in the 34th annual Chalk It Up! Festival this past Labor Day weekend at Fremont Park on the border of downtown and midtown between 15th and 16th, and P and Q streets.

A square costs $250 to sponsor. The money goes to schools and organizations that provide field trips, easels and paintbrushes, after-school mentorship programs and more. According to the Chalk It Up website at chalkitup.org, "Chalk It Up's mission is to empower and support

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA (MPG) - September is Suicide Prevention Month, a time to raise awareness and discuss this urgently increasing crisis, according to NAMI (National Alliance on Mental Illness).

NAMI has sobering statistics: Suicide is the second leading cause of death among those aged 10 to 14, the third leading cause of death among those aged 15 to 24 and the 12th leading cause of death overall in the U.S.

Or, as the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reports, more than 49,000 people in the United States died by suicide in 2022. That's one death every 11 minutes.

And millions more experience suicidal thoughts.

Suicidal thoughts can affect anyone regardless of age, gender or background, according to the NAMI website at nami.org. While suicidal thoughts are common, however, they should not be considered normal and often indicate more serious issues. Many events and activities promoting suicide prevention awareness will be held locally, regionally and nationally throughout September.

Suicide During Prevention Month, NAMI and numerous other mental health organizations stress that all of us can help prevent suicide by reaching out to those who need help.

The National Institute of Mental Health lists five action steps to help someone having suicidal thoughts.

The first step is Ask "Are you thinking about suicide?" It's not an easy question to ask but it can help start a conversation.

Kings Korner By V.G. Harris

Football season has begun, but make no mistake about it, basketball fans are eagerly anticipating the upcoming camp and preseason for the Sacramento Kings.

This year's team will take on a decidedly offensive look, as they have added a perennial 20 points per game with DeMar DeRozan to their already potent offense.

Last season with the Bulls, DeRozan averaged 24 points per game, but he has exceeded 27 points per game twice in his already legendary career. This bodes well for the hometown team, as three-point shooters like Keegan Murray, Malik Monk, and De'Aaron Fox will undoubtedly get better looks, as defenders try to control the frenetic mid-range game of DeMar DeRozan.

The Kings can actually put 5 scorers on the court at the same time, and although Keon Ellis is known for his ferocious defense, his offensive game has come to life as well. We saw a man among boys in the NBA summer league, as Keon did pretty much what he wanted as he scored at will against the newcomers and younger players in the league.

Keon's experience from last year, particularly as a starter, will in all likelihood lead to a standout year in the upcoming campaign.

Starters for the Kings that we can already pencil in include Domantas Sabonis, De'Aaron Fox, Keegan Murray, and of course the standout offseason acquisition of DeMar DeRozan. That leaves one spot to be filled, and everyone seems to be coming up with their own personal favorite. The leading candidates are Malik Monk, Keon Ellis, and Kevin Huerter who is returning from a shoulder injury that cut short his 2023/2024 season.

Huerter and Ellis are accustomed to starting, but Malik Monk has made it known that he would like to transition from the 6th man position to the starting lineup.

The unknown quotient is coach Mike Brown who has a difficult decision to make. Hopefully he will give each of the three an opportunity to start in preseason games, but the preseason is short, and the body of work will be minimal to make a decision.

There are those for whom it's not who starts but who finishes, but I respond by saying, starting is a place of pride, and I've yet to meet the player that would rather come off the bench than start a game.

Trey Lyles has never gotten the love from coach Brown that Keon Ellis receives, and I contend that Trey has acquitted himself well, and to the point that his name should be in the conversation. When Trey plays alongside Sabonis the Kings present a much more formidable front line, and Lyles could be the missing ingredient the Kings need to give Domantas the wingman he needs to help clean the boards.

The truth is, whether Huerter, Monk, Ellis, or Lyles, all four of these players represent quality NBA talent, and Brown has some notable ballers to make his final selection.

All that said, the bench will be strong this year, and if Alex Len can take just one more step, I believe this 1st round draft choice from 2013 could finally live up to the potential that so many pundits believed that he had when originally drafted.

I like Len's game, and his effort is unquestionable. He acquits himself well when Sabonis needs a breather, and if he can take that next step, I can see moments when he and Sabonis are on the court together.

If I haven't yet mentioned your favorite player, dark horses like Colby Jones, Jordan McLaughlin, Boogie Ellis, or newcomers Orlando Robinson and Isaiah Crawford are waiting in the wings to make their presence known.

Just as Keon Ellis emerged last season, one of these players is waiting to show the Sacramento Kings fans that they deserve some accolades, and it will surprise me if I'm not surprised by one the aforementioned candidates.

Let's not forget that we haven't even mentioned Kings' top draft choice Devin Carter, and although he is scheduled to miss the first half of the upcoming season, Devin no doubt will be eagerly awaiting his opportunity to show the Sacramento fans why this 22-year-old was drafted #13 overall.

Get ready Kings fans, for a season that will rival any you've seen so far, and as always if you have comments, please send them to vgharriskingsfan@gmail.com.

All the best!

Downtown Partnership Releases Livability Strategy

Continued from Page 1 for additional measures to address both the supply and demand sides of the urban neighborhood continuum," said Scott Ford, Deputy Director with Downtown Sacramento Partnership.

"It challenges all of us to think differently about the future of downtown, to double down on the production of housing at all levels of affordability, and to achieve livable amenities which support a highly desirable and sustainable mixed-use neighborhood in the heart of California's capital region."

A timely release, the Downtown Sacramento Livability Strategy is published following a slew of headlines and comments over the last year on housing and building conversions.

U.C. Berkeley's Terner Center for Housing Innovation recently published a research and policy piece on construction defect liability law and slowing California condo development.

"Amongst the many successes downtown Sacramento must be, it must also be a great urban neighborhood with a lot more housing," said Brent Toderian, co-author of the Downtown Sacramento Livability Strategy and previous State of Downtown speaker.

"This strategy won't sit on a shelf collecting dust, because Sacramento leaders and downtown champions can't let it. It's been crafted to tackle the toughest challenges with unusual bluntness, to ensure it provides the most important guidance in any future conversation about the downtown's future. It's specifically designed to be game-changing."

Unlike similarly published documents, the Downtown Sacramento Livability Strategy is not meant to be a report. Rather, this document is intended to serve as a strategy for leaders, and shift mindsets to change the way people think about urban living.

"The sole intent is to be a transformational turning point for downtown. Anything less should be considered a failure," added Toderian.

The report is at https:// www.downtownsac.org/ about/reports-publications/ downtown-sacramento-livability-strategy.

Risk of West Nile Continues

Sacramento Yolo Mosquito & Vector Control District News Release

SACRAMENTO REGION, CA (MPG) - While Labor Day is the last holiday of the summer, mosquito activity and the risk of West Nile virus continue for all area residents.

On Aug. 30, the Sacramento-Yolo

Mosquito & Vector Control District reminded the public to protect themselves from mosquitoes, especially as many would be at outdoor activities for the long holiday weekend.

"Mosquito samples and dead birds are still testing positive for West Nile virus," said District Manager Gary Goodman on Aug. 30. "While we have been enjoying the cooler weather, temperatures are expected to climb back up next week. This means mosquitoes will be out and there is still a possibility of being bitten and becoming sick with West

"Stay protected by always using an effective repellent when spending time outdoors," Goodman

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends using an insect repellent that contains the active ingredients DEET, Picaridin, IR3535 or the plant-based Oil of Lemon Eucalyptus. Be sure to always follow label directions when applying repellent. This season, virus activity has been steady and widespread in both Sacramento and Yolo counties.

"We still have a few weeks before the summer season officially ends so it's very important for everyone to do their part and protect themselves," Goodman said.

While West Nile virus is the main concern, the invasive mosquitoes, Aedes aegypti and Aedes albopictus continue to spread throughout both counties.

Invasive mosquitoes are a public health threat because they are capable of transmitting debilitating diseases such as Zika, dengue and chikungunya.

UC Students Push for A Place to Get — And Stay – Sober on Every Campus

By Mikhail Zinshteyn CALMatters.org

A small collegiate recovery program at half of the University of California's 10 campuses holds regular weekly meetings for students in some stage of battling drug and alcohol addiction or some other form of self-harm.

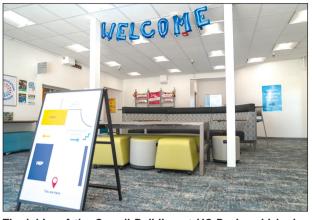

The University of California Student Association, which represents the system's 233,000 undergraduates, is mounting a campaign to bring the program and university funding to every campus. After almost a year of advocacy, the student organization brought the program to UC's largest stage, the UC Regents meeting, in July. Student advocates want a full-time coordinator at every campus, ongoing funding for each program and a private, dedicated meeting space at every UC.

The University Office of the President maintains that every campus has some kind of drug prevention, intervention and treatment program. But student advocates say the collegiate recovery programs are unique and provide an important outlet for students who need a nuanced approach to vanquishing their drug dependencies. The first was founded at Brown University in 1977. Today, scores exist on campuses across the country.

The Need for Drug Recovery Centers

The university system estimates that the existing programs served 4,000 students last year. A 2023 national survey indicates that 1.6% of UC undergraduates are in some form of drug or alcohol

But likely many more could benefit from a drug recovery program. The same 2023 survey showed that, depending on the campus, around 50% to 70% of undergraduates reported drinking at least once and a third to half have tried cannabis. Smaller, but still notable,

The lobby of the Cowell Building at UC Davis, which also provides access to the Center for Advocacy, Resources, & Education and Health Education and Promotion student services, serves as the general meeting area for Counseling Services. Photos by Louis Bryant III for CalMatters

Stephanie J. Lake, M.Ed, LAADC, reconfigures the lobby space in the Cowell Building to showcase its setup for providing Counseling Services to UC Davis students shares of students have used other drugs at least once: roughly 3% to 10% used cocaine; as much as 2% tried meth. Among UC Berkeley students, nearly 1% had tried heroin.

What the Program Does

Often with few dollars and no full-time staffer, these programs foster a community of peers who together navigate their sobriety through the thicket of tempting or illicit substances that are often rife on their college campuses. The programs serve multiple purposes: group meetings, more targeted support from a campus coordinator who may also refer the students to mental or medical help on or off campus, and if there's money, social events. Some, like the one at UC Davis, distribute fentanyl test strips and Narcan, an overdose-reversing nasal spray, for free. Unlike more familiar substance recovery programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics Anonymous, collegiate recovery programs don't demand abstinence from all substances when a person pursues recovery from one in particular.

The program's "harm reduction" approach is meant to appeal to more students who aren't ready to fully abstain from all substances but need help quitting or dialing back from a substance that's personally destructive.

"What I've seen for a lot of people is, once they get involved in the (college recovery program) and they see people that are totally sober, they're like, 'Oh, I can still have fun being totally sober,"" said Stephanie Lake, the coordinator at UC Davis's college recovery program, Aggies for Recovery, and a full-time substance abuse therapist on the campus. "A lot of them do eventually get to total sobriety but harm reduction at least gives them a way where they're reducing the harm of their drugs so that they're able to function in a better capacity."

Lake said that harm reduction is a newer practice that became more common in the past five years. One of the weekly meetings uses an Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics Anonymous speaker format to give students a sense of how those meetings look, she added.

Still, students hooked on certain hard drugs struggle to moderate their consumption. Lake described one student she counseled a few years ago who wanted to continue using heroin on weekends. She told the student to see if he could limit his usage after three weeks. He couldn't but also didn't want to quit. A few months later, he came back to her, ready to get sober. Lake then referred him to treatment.

Collegiate recovery programs are located on campus, another benefit, UC officials wrote in an agenda item to regents last month. That's because not all students have the transportation means or time to seek services that are off campus, such as Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous, intensive outpatient services and Suboxone treatment.

Need for Full-Time Coordinators

The UC Student Association stresses that each campus needs a fulltime coordinator. At UC Davis, Lake officially spends 5% of her time in that role, on top of the four to six students she sees daily for counseling. The campus intends to hire a full-time coordinator this fall, which she says couldn't come soon

She couldn't apply for outside grants to fund the recovery program because she was busy with her fulltime therapist job. The recovery program sponsors events on weekends, making it hard for her to attend after a full week's work seeing other students.

She also guides two student facilitators who work part-time leading the group meetings. They include Ashlyn Reed, an incoming fourth-year student.

The program has been instrumental in helping her remain off the substance that she has struggled with the most: nicotine. It's her fourth time quitting; this six-month stint has been the longest she has gone without smoking. She said the group meetings helped her examine why she relied on nicotine as an emotional crutch. "What am I hiding from or trying to avoid?" she said.

But she also feels the limits of the program without a full-time coordinator. "We're the best kept secret on campus, and we don't want to be," she said. Without a full-time coordinator, there's no one to market the program on campus, where hundreds of student and community groups compete for attention from the campus's 40,000 students through leaflets, live events and other outreach.

Students pushing for a recovery program on every campus insist on ongoing university funding to support them as well as dedicated space for the meetings.

Aditi Hariharan, a UC Davis student who has advocated on behalf of the UC Student Association for these centers, expressed concern that some regents at the July meeting encouraged campuses to seek county health grants to fund the programs. Navigating county bureaucracy is difficult, she and other student advocates said, and even if the funding comes through, it's not a guaranteed ongoing source.

"County grants are also temporary and need to be reapplied and reapplied, and don't assure that permanent funding that CRPs should have," said Hariharan, who recently was elected as the student association's president.

Ryan King, a spokesperson for the UC Office of the President, wrote that each "campus sets priorities within its budget and must balance competing priorities." He added that the system is exploring additional funding through the California Youth Behavioral Health Initiative and the recently passed Proposition 1, a state initiative to raise billions of dollars for housing and treatment facilities for mentally ill Californians. The UC maintains a $50 billion budget and about a fifth of that is for its main education mission, including student services. "If there was a space where they could just hang out during that day, there wouldn't be so much temptation to relapse," Lake said. The campus's program relies on temporary meeting spaces, including the lobby of a student health services building.

UC Berkeley's center just received its own space. Previously, students attending meetings in an administrative building would need to sometimes enter the police department to gain access to the building — an awkward encounter for individuals trying to confide to each other about substance abuse. Other times, campus deans would cross the communal space during group meetings.

"The fentanyl crisis and everything else, it's a scary time for me as a counselor," Lake said. Having the collegiate recovery program "is just super, super important."

Mikhail Zinshteyn reports on higher education for CalMatters. His coverage tackles state legislation, financial aid, labor issues, student demands, campus housing and college affordability.

Don't Tell it to the Chaplain

I Last year I wrote a book called, "Tell It to the Chaplain." If you've seen it, then you're likely wondering why this headline makes the opposite request.

My title refers to certain phrases people use that cause me to jokingly reply, "Don't ever say that to a chaplain."

When they cock their head in search of an explanation, I tell them that I'm a retired healthcare chaplain and I may inject a totally different meaning into common sayings.

For instance, I once asked my photojournalism professor if he could stay after class to explain my new camera.

"I really can't," he said,
"I'm on my way out."

"Please don't say that to a chaplain," I replied. "On the way out' means you're going to meet God."

"No – no. I have a faculty meeting," he said. "And God's not often there."

On another day, I ran breathlessly to an airline gate, only to be told by the agent, "They've already departed."

Ouch. Don't say that to a chaplain.

"Departed" describes someone who has taken flight to their celestial destination. At some point, chaplains call these folks the "dearly departed."

On a different occasion, my neighbors described how they moved out of the city into our forested lake community in the California foothills.

"It just feels like we're in a better place now," the husband blurted.

I winced at "a better place" since the phrase most often describes the afterlife.

In another example, I was walking with my friend Roger through a sports stadium when he abruptly stopped at a concession stand to buy a Pepsi.

"Keep walking," he said, "Meet me on the other side."

Of course, I knew he was simply asking me to meet him at our seats on the other side of the stadium.

But as a chaplain, he should have known that I'd make a heavenly inference that we'd not meet again until we got to the "Other Side."

Finally, I once stood on the banks of the Jordan River as our Israeli tour guide pointed toward the land "just beyond the river."

I nudged my wife and said, "I wish he wouldn't say that."

I started humming the refrain to Fanny Crosby's hymn, "Near the Cross."
"In the cross, in the cross,

Be my glory ever; Till my raptured soul shall find

Rest beyond the river."

Becky groaned, recognizing this as one of my favorite fragments.

I jest with these phrases because I love puns, but I also appreciate them as a comforting way to remember the three people I've lost in the past four years.

My brother, the one I called "Brotherman," died of COVID in December 2020. He was so full of conspiracy theories that he wasn't contented in this world, so I really do feel a sense of comfort knowing

And, as you know, I lost my mother last month. I he's very much "in a better

thank all of you who sent me numerous messages and cards.

But most reassuring is how I still hear the notes of her operatic voice singing those Crosby hymns. "Near the Cross" was among her favorites, and I take consolation believing she's found her "rest beyond the river."

However, my most difficult loss came four years ago this month, when I lost my life-long best friend, Roger Williams.

On the last day I saw him, we sat on his couch, shoulder to shoulder, the same way we'd stood for 45 years.

As we said our temporary goodbyes, I held his cooling hand and laid my head on his shoulder. Then, in between my sobs, I told him that I'd see him "on the other side."

"That's OK, Norris," he said. "It'll be all right." Soon he was asleep. Four days later, Roger died at 63 years of age.

So, sometimes all I have left to say is "See you, Mom. See you, Roger. See "Departed"

Beloved Land Park Pitbull Celebrates Birthday with Neighbors

This article appears in response to "Pitbull Attack a Lesson for Dog-Walkers," which appeared in the Aug. 23 Pocket News.

By Paul Shapiro and Toni Shapiro

On March 19, 2020, we received an urgent email from Front Street Animal Shelter: "We just learned that our shelter may shut down. We need to get dogs out immediately while we still can."

As animal lovers who six months earlier had bought a South Land Park home that still had no animals in it, we figured we may as well pitch in during the pandemic and foster a dog in need. The situation at the shelter was so dire, we learned, that unlike the normal process, there'd be no application and no orientation; you just showed up that day and had a dog placed

So began our relationship with a friendly but nameless stray pitbull with no known backstory.

About two years old and athletic, with a physique that resembles a certain former California governor, Eddie — named after Paul's late, quite muscular, grandfather was a perfect 50-pound gentleman. He was house-trained, friendly to all people and animals, and had a primary mission in life simply never to be alone.

Ironically, we met more of our neighbors in the first couple weeks of pandemic isolation — all while walking Eddie through the neighborhood — than we did the first six months since moving in. Yes, there were some people with irrational fears of pitbulls who crossed the street when Eddie strutted by, but many neighbors purposely stopped to pet this new canine entrant to the community.

The American Temperament Test Society ranks pitbulls as one of the most affectionate and least aggressive dog breeds. Once known as "nanny dogs" in the early 20th century due to their gentle nature around children, Eddie proved to embody this history. He quickly became a beloved fixture in our neighborhood.

So when we decided to become foster-failures and make Eddie a permanent part of our family, many in South Land Park rejoiced. Quickly he had dog dates set up at neighbors' houses, pool parties and even gifts from strangers. Our neighbors were now our friends.

Fast forward 4.5 years, and we just threw Eddie his seventh birthday party, hosting 11 of his canine friends and 20 of their human companions at our home. With no dog fights — and no human fights either — Eddie, proudly wearing a birthday hat, was the center of attention, surrounded by dog cake and toys.

It's hard to overstate how much happiness Eddie's brought to our life, and how much more he's made our house feel like a home. Whether walking in the neighborhood, at the dog park or along the Sacramento River, Eddie routinely runs into people who know and love him, enriching our lives and making our community a little more tight-knit.

City of Trees Animal Hospital Grand Opening Sept. 21

City of Trees Animal Hospital News Release

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG)

- City of Trees Animal Hospital is thrilled to announce its grand opening, marking the realization of a lifelong dream for Dr. Matthew Wooddall, a Central Valley native.

This new, privately owned veterinary practice is committed to offering high-quality, affordable and compassionate care to pets while fostering a sense of community and support for their families.

Founded in 2023, City of Trees Animal Hospital is more than just a place for veterinary care; it is a trusted community resource. Dr. Wooddall and his team are on a mission to set the standard for veterinary excellence, focusing on creating an environment where pets and their families feel welcomed, supported, and empowered.

By providing affordable and compassionate care, the hospital ensures that the health and well-being of every animal are prioritized.

"This hospital is the culmination of a lifelong dream for me," said Dr. Wooddall. "After more than two decades in the veterinary field, including working as a general and emergency veterinarian in Stockton, Lodi, and Sacramento, I wanted to create a place that truly serves the community and builds a strong bond between pets, their families, and our team."

Dr. Wooddall's journey in veterinary medicine began in February 2000 as a kennel assistant in Lodi. After earning a Bachelor of Biology from UC Santa Barbara in 2010, he attended UC Davis Veterinary School, returning to his Central Valley roots.

He has spent the last decade caring for animals in various veterinary settings and also founded Hard Luck Animal Welfare Advocates in 2023, a nonprofit that partners with the City of Stockton to provide veterinary care for local animals in need.

City of Trees Animal Hospital is located at 6429 Riverside Blvd. in Sacramento, and the team is excited to welcome the community to its openhouse-style grand opening celebration on Saturday, Sept. 21 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The event will include music, face painting, treats for pets and people, hospital tours and a chance to meet many talented local artisans whose artistic touches make our hospital feel welcoming!

Nature Savers Reel in Line

Story and photos by Susan Maxwell Skinner

SACRAMENTO REGION. CA (MPG) - A volunteer team has taken on a mission to clear miles of abandoned fishing line from local rivers and waterways.

Calling themselves "Project Pick Up Fishing Line," 10 nature lovers are leading other helpers to comb riverbanks for an almost invisible danger.

"Fishing line causes suffering and death to birds and a host of other river inhabitants," explained Jann Nichols, the group founder. Nichols, a photographer, has documented many situations of animal entanglement.

"In some cases, rescuers have freed birds from hooks and line," she reported. "In tragic cases, animals don't survive. Pets can also come to grief on trails through similar accidents."

Nichols acknowledged that lines get snagged and accidents happen.

"But usually, our volunteers are easily able to free and dispose of fishing gear," she said. "If we can do this, so could anglers. We're also collecting hundreds of items of trash left in fishing spots. Litter is not abandoned by accident."

Project Pick-Up has successfully lobbied for county agencies to place receptacles and signage in fishing spots.

"We want people to be aware that a careless act can endanger lives," Nichols said. "We also want them to know there are people you can call to save a trapped or injured creature."

Nichols and friends were recently on hand when a swan died after ingesting fishing line at Cameron Park Lake in El Dorado County. Its organs were so damaged and the bird in such distress that euthanasia was the rescuers' only resort.

"He'd swallowed so much line that his intestines were accordioned," explained rescue expert and Project Pick-Up volunteer Leslie Ackerman. "It was heartbreaking. A beautiful bird's agony is something you never forget. The incident inspired us even more to continue our cleanup efforts and to educate people."

In their spare time, the volunteers address areas that they say are most abused. Mather Lake in Rancho Cordova, the American River at Watt Avenue, Cameron Park Lake and Willow Creek in Folsom are top trouble

"We come back from these places with grocery bags filled," Nichols said. "Fishing lines, hooks and lures from the ground or from trees and grasses," Nichols added. "Honestly, the stuff is all over the place. For many people, it's invisible. To our eyes, line catches the light like spider webs. Often, we need long grabbers to reach it. Sometimes, divers find line tangled underwater. They help us dispose of it. Fishermen sometimes help us, too. Along with the careless culprits, many responsible people use the river."

The volunteers keep their harvest as evidence of how pervasive the problem is. They assembled more than 2,000 hooks and sinkers for a recent Mather Lake display.

The haul also included dozens of bulging bags of "Aquatic birds are often drawn to anglers in the hope of a feed," Nichols noted. "They can swallow a lure or get snagged. If a hook is lodged on their body, feeding and mobility is threatened. Suffering and death often follow."

"I started this project last year when I saw a young osprey tethered to the nest," she recalled. "Its parents had brought in a branch entangled with fishing line. The baby was snarled for a week, close to fledging time. I couldn't sleep for worrying. It took some time for rescuers to access the nest but the baby was saved."

"Around that time, several cygnets died from line entanglement at Cameron Park Lake," Nichols continued. "I decided to do whatever I could to prevent this from happening again. I started picking up line wherever I saw it."

Nichols was soon joined by friends who wanted to

"They'd also seen injured wildlife in situations they could not forget," Nichols said. "Seeing animal suffering is a powerful motivation."

The volunteers fund their own activities. Equipment includes gloves, clippers and long-handled retrievers.

Sunscreen is another essential.

"It's hard work but it's also nice to be out in nature," Nichols said. "You know you're helping wildlife and pets have a safer environment."

Board of Supervisors Adopts Infill Program

Sacramento County News Release

SACRAMENTO COUNTY, CA (MPG) - The Sacramento County Board of Supervisors voted Aug. 20 to adopt the County's Infill Program Update and directed staff to implement certain actions identified in the plan to accelerate the program.

In July 2021, Sacramento County received a Local Early Action Planning (LEAP) grant for an update to the 2008 Infill Program with the purpose of identifying current barriers to infill development and developing a strategy to address these

Informed by the prior effort, stakeholder engagement and recent Board direction resulting from the Development Review Process Improvements Review and the Board's Housing and Infill Workshop, the Infill Program Update is a roadmap to facilitating policy and procedural changes and increasing and accelerating housing production in the county.

The Program Update identifies seven barriers to infill development and provides an implementation program consisting of 13 actions intended to address these barriers.

Barriers to infill include:

New growth areas - Greenfield development in new growth areas is often seen as being more cost-efficient and easier than acquiring and assembling land for the construction of infill development.

Infrastructure - Many of the traditional commercial corridors in the county were built and designated for cars rather than people and have aging utility infrastructure that may now be equipped to handle new higher-density development.

High development costs - Another major barrier to infill can be the high cost associated with acquiring urbanized land, project application fees and development impact fees for improvements in the public right of way.

Lot size and parcel assembly – It is common for parcels in already urbanized areas to be smaller than in areas designated for greenfield development.

Permitting process – Longer and more difficult paths to approval can dramatically add to project costs and timelines.

Development regulations – Strict and complex zoning standards and design guidelines that do not allow for flexibility can present barriers to successful infill development.

Coordination - The number of departments and agencies in the county necessitates time-consuming coordination among internal departments and divisions and external agencies.

The actions identified to address these barriers range from actions that can be taken immediately to those that may take years to fully implement.

Chalk Art is for Everyone

This year, Christy Jourdan ran the Chalk It Up! Festival; it is her fifth year as executive director and 11th as a volunteer. She said that 150 volunteers at the park "make it happen."

When asked what is new for this year, Jourdan answered, "We're superstoked about our sponsor Taco Bell Cantina."

The restaurant is at 900 K St. and owned by Dave Smith, dubbed "Taco Dave."

"This event has a $90,000 price tag on it," Jourdan said. "Somebody like Taco Dave comes in, wants to know how he can help."

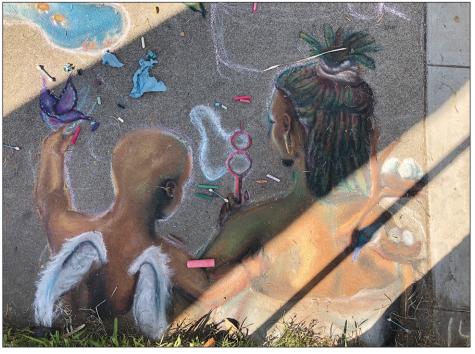

Jourdan said that Smith's monetary contribution went toward a big tent for the beer garden and a pic-
