Winston Travels to America

By Diane Clarcq & Landon Gaboury

Embark on an adventure with Winston as he leaves his childhood home to seek excitement on the high seas and thrills in the New World. Unexpected new friends await him as Winston travels to America. Filled with inquisitive adventures and the power of companionship, this tale will show children that sometimes we can find friendship with someone completely different from ourselves.

When I Can't See You

By Dr. Haley T. Arias

A poignant take on where to look when grief seems too big for our little ones, "When I Can't See You" sparks conversations about navigating loss. Dr. Haley T. Arias hopes to foster a sense of imagination in children as they search for their own answers throughout the confusion of their loss.

This list was compiled by Alysson Bourque, an award-winning, bestselling children's author and industry expert. All these books are available at Amazon.com.

People Have Pets

By Dave Schwartz

Pets are special friends who come in all shapes and sizes. People Have Pets takes readers on a global journey of understanding about the invaluable members of our families who provide undying love and affection. Along the way, you will find that the friends who share their lives with us come in all shapes and sizes, just like the people who love them.

And The Trees Talked Back

By Frederick J. Burns

Meet Amanda, an extraordinary child with a unique gift — she can talk to trees. As Amanda encounters ancient trees, she uncovers a world she never knew existed, where wisdom and acceptance coexist with fear and hatred. Amidst the rustling leaves and haunting shadows, she confronts the duality of nature, discovering the true meaning of good and evil. "And The Trees Talked Back" is a heartwarming tale of wonder, friendship, and self-discovery that will captivate readers of all ages.

Spring Discovery Days at Greater Cleveland Aquarium

Have you observed a dwarf seahorse's bony plate exterior or watched a poison dart frog tap its tiny toes? Did you know that a spade-like lower jaw extension allows hungry little central stonerollers to scrape up algae? Were you aware that fused pelvic fins let ping-pong-ball-like lumpsuckers adhere to rocks and kelp so they're not swept away by currents?

Greater Cleveland Aquarium is highlighting these and other diminutive animals during Spring Discovery Days, March 22 – April 27, 10 a.m. – 5 p.m. daily. Daily animal encounters, small species shout-outs, a "Spot a Spotted" challenge, Splash Fund "Ohio Turtle Tales" popups, interactive Discovery Carts, a fill-in booklet and short videos are all part of this celebration of nature's hidden influencers and included with regular Aquarium admission.

While standing under 230,000 gallons of saltwater in the shadow of a massive sand tiger shark is a memorable part of any Greater Cleveland Aquarium visit, Curator Ray Popik hopes Spring Discovery Days brings a little more attention to a few micro marvels and some of the features that help them make it in the big world—like the weedy seadragon's independently moving eyes, the spiny softshell turtle's pig-like snout or the pencil urchins blunt spines.

Tickets are $19.95 ages 13 and older, $13.95 ages 2-12, $0 passholders and children younger than 2

Trending baby names in 2025

As 2025 unfolds, baby name trends reflect a mix of modern innovation, cultural revival, and timeless charm. Parents are leaning toward unique yet meaningful names, inspired by pop culture, nature, and global influences.

For boys, names like Atlas, Kai, and Ezra continue to rise, blending strength with a modern touch. Theo and Milo remain favorites, offering a classic yet playful feel. Names with celestial and mythological roots, such as Orion and Apollo, are also gaining traction.

For girls, Luna, Ivy, and Aurora dominate the charts, reflecting a love for nature and mysticism. Maeve and Ophelia bring a vintage elegance, while shorter names like Zara and Nora are also in demand. Unisex names such as Rowan, Sage, and Indie are becoming increasingly popular, showcasing a shift toward gender-neutral choices.

Pop culture continues to influence naming trends, with characters from hit shows and movies inspiring parents. Additionally, names from diverse cultures, such as Aarav, Elio, and Sienna, reflect a more globalized world.

In 2025, the trend is clear—parents are seeking names that are meaningful, stylish, and stand the test of time while embracing individuality and heritage.

8 things you need to stop saying to your kids right now

They say there are no dumb questions. They are wrong. There are, in fact, many dumb questions. I know because I ask them more often than Kim Kardashian posts a selfie. In the spirit of conscious parenting and minimizing the urge to stab myself with a Lego, I've composed a list of dumb questions to stop asking my kids.

1) Are you ready to go?

Before asking this question, assess the situation. Are the child's shoes on? Has the child gone to the bathroom? (Alternatively: Is her diaper smuggling a wrecking ball?) Is the child already holding whatever toy, doll, or tchotchke she needs to bring? If not, save your breath and some aggravation. The child is not ready to go.

2) Can you wait a minute?

If you say this to someone who has no idea how long a minute is, prepare for the aftermath: A small voice will ask, "Has it been a minute?"

approximately every 15 seconds until you lose your mind. Multiply the number of uninterrupted minutes required to complete whatever you were doing by 7,832. Plan to finish sometime next year.

Next time, try saying, "Not right now," and then placing either the child or yourself in a locked, soundproof chamber where you or they will remain until your task is complete.

3) Aren't you hungry?

Never in the history of man has this question inspired a child to eat the meal his loving caregiver carefully prepared (or frantically threw together). If your child had an attorney, she'd accuse you of leading the witness and request the question be overruled. Kids don't care how you'll feel at the crack of ridiculous o'clock tomorrow morning when they're STARVING. For miniature, enlightened yogis (aka children), the only moment is right now. And right now, they're not hungry.

4) Do you have to go to the bathroom?

She might be emulating Michael Jackson, the way she's holding her crotch, but if your child is like mine, unless she's actually on the toilet, the answer to this question is a big, fat "no." You might think you're being a responsible parent when you ask this question. In fact, you are wasting your time. Your kid will go when she's good and ready and not a second before... hopefully.

5) Did you poop? (toddler exclusive!)

You saw her disappear into the other room. She smells like a dumpster. And you know that every day of a toddler's life is sponsored by the word "no." Skip your lame attempts to get a confession, grab the child, and change the diaper.

6) Do you want to go to the store?

Unless your child dictates your agenda (in which case, we will never be friends), this question is Russian Roulette. When you go down this road, you're being as shortsighted as your children. Save time and just tell your kids where they are going today. If they like the plan, consider it a bonus.

7) Why did you push your sister?

All kids do stuff we don't understand. They bite siblings, TP the bathroom, or wear footy pajamas in July. And we want to know why. Repeat after me: They do not know. (Also: they get this from your partner.) When our kids behave, we credit our stellar parenting. When they don't, we remember children are just animals, acting on instinct. They probably have no clue why they did what they did.

8) Do you know how late it is!?

If, like me, you're asking this question of someone who uses a Tot Clock to tell time, stop asking this question. If you have the kind of child who, when told she must leave the park in five minutes, counters with "No, three minutes!" stop asking this question. You are talking to an overtired, undersized human whose life goals include becoming a ballerina or maybe an astronaut and staying up all night. Letting them know exactly how long they've been winning the war on fatigue will only embolden them to keep pushing through.

Life's too short for dumb questions, so I pledge to do my best to stop asking them. I don't know about you, but I would rather spend my precious time asking the important questions, like, "How long until bedtime," and, "Will they expect me to pay for therapy?"

Providence House provides services and programs to families in crisis

We all want our babies and children to be safe, but sometimes life gets in the way. Providence House is dedicated to helping them be safe while their families are experiencing a crisis. Since 1981, the organization, founded by Sister Hope Greener, offers emergency shelter to newborns through 12 years of age and meet parents or guardians where they are and guides them toward solutions. They provide the necessary programs, services, and resources aimed at protecting at-risk children, thus strengthening communities to battle child poverty, abuse and neglect.

"I was fortunate to have volunteered here as a student and was able to see the amazing growth through the years, with Sister Hope by my side," says Natalie A. Leek, Providence House president and CEO. "There are a number of reasons families come to us, and while only children stay with us, we give needed assistance to the families to help them in their crisis."

This can be anything from homelessness to unsafe housing situations, such as heat or water being turned off, or pending rental eviction. "And sometimes it's simply a parent with no one to keep their children safe while receiving medical care," Leek adds. "The majority of families that come to us lack the needed resources to keep their kids safe and that's what we're here for."

With 30 years' experience in nonprofit and corporate environments as a teacher, director, and marketing professional, Leek has been the company's leader since 2001.

Like many nonprofits, the organization started out small, in just a three-room house on West 44th Street. Within a year, the shelter moved to West 32nd Street in Ohio City, at first serving just five infants and toddlers at a time. That site remains its main campus today, which serves 30 children at a time—20 children in Leo's House, their traditional crisis nursery, and 10 children in Elisabeth's House, the pediatric crisis nursery for children with medical needs. In 2024 they cared for a total of 170 children. And now they will be able to help an additional 250 children, thanks to an added location on the east side. In February, Providence House opened a new crisis nursery on the corner of Buckeye Road and E. 118th Street.

The expansion was due to the increasing need for families on the east side, as well as Lake and Geauga counties, allowing the facility to expand their services. They do not have a boundary for service, and have served families in 37 zip codes in Ohio.

"We are only one of two organizations that fill this kind of need in all of Cuyahoga County, the other being Blessing House," Leek says. "We have a large waiting list and we're hoping to reduce that."

Despite the wait list, there is always someone available to guide a family in crisis. Anyone can get assistance by phone. "All they have to do is call our number, and they will get immediate support over the phone," Leek says. "However, I would say about 80% of those who reach out are through referrals. We work with over 100 other agencies to get them the help they need and partner with counties all around us who are able to provide the needed assistance."

Crisis nursery approach

The award-winning Providence House provides children with a warm, safe, home-like environment while connecting families to community organizations that provide family support. Children receive free shelter, personal necessities, medical and loving care from the professionally-trained staff. Their multi-generational approach has been proven to effectively prevent child abuse and neglect and reunite families with greater strength and stability.

"We layer in family support with child advocates who will understand their personal situation and work with them individually to get the help they need," adds Leek, "this can be anything from assisting in improved housing, parenting skills or help with addiction, sobriety, or mental health issues."

In addition to speech and hearing therapies, physical, developmental, and emotional therapies are provided on-site by licensed qualified professionals, if needed. The ultimate goal is long-term self-sufficiency. The agency has served more than 8,000 families through their decades of service.

"My greatest satisfaction in my job," Leek says, "is what I call the 'ring the bell moment' when Mom and Dad get to take their children home."

How you can help

Volunteering: Providence House has multiple ways for you to get involved. Volunteers are welcome and needed for childcare, done-in-a-day projects, special events (their three major events are listed below) and their PHriends Group where young professionals help raise awareness and funds for Providence House!

Donations: If your schedule doesn't allow for you to volunteer, there are several ways you can donate including:

- Monetary donations (which can be done through their website).
- Donation of NEW items including Uber and Lyft gift cards, children's clothing, diapers, toys for ages 6–12 and much more. A complete list is on their website.

Attend a fundraising event: Providence House hosts three major fundraisers each year. This year's dates are:

- 44th Annual Luncheon will take place on Wednesday, April 30, 2025 from 11:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. at the Westin Cleveland Downtown. Your ticket includes lunch, parking and a guest gift and donation to Providence House.
- Join the Providence House Board of Directors for the 2025 Providence House Charity Classic, which will be at the Barrington Golf Club in Aurora on Monday, August 18, at 11:00 a.m. This event is one of their most popular fundraisers to support their ongoing mission to help children and their families.

- The Deck the House benefit auction is another widely anticipated fundraiser that takes place every December and is a great way to spend the holidays by giving back. This annual event features celebrity hosts and guests. Information for 2025 to be announced at a later date.

If you are unable to attend these events, Providence House always welcomes donations.

For more information, call (216) 651-5982, or see www.provhouse.org. Be sure to read their success stories. (Read one below!)

Success Story

Destiny reached out to Providence House after her teenage son, Michael, was assaulted by their neighbor.

She needed to move her family somewhere safe and help Michael through his traumatic experience.

Since all of the family shelters were full, Destiny brought her younger children to stay in the safe, loving environment of our Crisis Nursery while she worked to find a new home for her family.

While Destiny's younger children were safe and cared for at Providence House, our social work team helped refer Michael to support services, including connecting him with the Children Who Witness Violence Program.

With the support of Providence House, Destiny secured a safe, new home for her family, and our social work team referred her to our friends at Humble Design who helped furnish it!

When her family reunited, Destiny told us, "I am very appreciative for all the help and support from Providence House and cannot thank them enough."

At times, I felt like there was no hope, but Nora (her Providence House social worker) always spoke positively, listened, and helped me get through things that my family and I endured. I am forever grateful."

In parenting, the only constant is change

As a new parent, I read all the books, magazines, and online posts to try and prepare for the coming changes. I signed up for the weekly prenatal emails that explained each new step in development, from when my baby was the size of a bean, to an orange or a pear, and eventually, a fully formed little human. I wanted to know what to expect even before those first few weeks and months, so I sought information from doctors, nurses, parenting experts, and sometimes just confident-looking parents a few years ahead of me on the journey.

I felt unprepared for this new adventure and relied on the adage that knowledge is power. I approached it like I do most new or unfamiliar things: by gathering information from a variety of sources. I thought that by learning all I could, I'd prepare myself for parenting my kids. While I now know that notion is laughable, I can appreciate that my younger self needed the distraction from all the changes that were about to take place in my body and in our lives.

The frantic drive to the hospital to deliver baby number one was the first indicator. My husband blew through red lights along the early morning streets getting us to the hospital in record time. And learning the steps that take place during childbirth and practicing breathing during a preplanned class didn't dispel the fear and panic we felt during labor. Despite this, our sweet, healthy daughter entered the world, and we officially became adults.

A day or so later, sore and sleep-deprived, those highly educated doctors and nurses told us it was time to go home. Just the three of us. Once settled in the car, with baby snapped safely into her car seat, my husband and I looked at each other and wondered aloud how they could trust us to just drive away with this tiny, precious new life.

But we each learned and grew and thrived. And even though we mostly knew what to expect with baby number two, we worried about our transition from a family of three to four. We figured it out together, just as we have continued to do so in every new season that comes. Because the only constant is change, and we're all just figuring it out as we go along.

I guess my point is that whatever stage you're in right now, know that you've got what it takes to make it (even if you don't think so). If you don't believe me, just take a minute to look back at how far you've come. impossible or improbable – you've handled them all. And you can tackle this new season, too.

What to do if your child hits their head

As a parent, one of the most nerve-racking experiences is seeing your child hit their head. Whether it's a tumble from a couch, a fall while learning to walk, or a playground accident, head injuries can be alarming. Knowing what to do in such situations can help ensure your child's safety and prevent complications. March is Brain Injury Awareness Month, making it an ideal time to educate yourself about head injuries and brain health. Here's a comprehensive guide on how to respond when your child hits their head.

1. Assess the severity of the injury

The first step after your child hits their head is to evaluate the severity of the impact. Most minor bumps and falls do not result in serious injury, but it's crucial to watch for symptoms that could indicate a more significant problem.

Mild injury signs: Brief crying, a small lump or bruise, minor dizziness, or a momentary daze.

Moderate to severe injury signs: Loss of consciousness (even briefly), persistent vomiting, confusion, difficulty walking, seizures, severe headache, or clear fluid/blood draining from the ears or nose.

If your child exhibits any of the moderate to severe signs, seek medical attention immediately.

2. Comfort and observe your child

If your child appears to have suffered only a mild injury, comfort them and keep a close watch for any developing symptoms over the next 24 hours. You can do the following:

Apply a cold compress: Use a cloth-wrapped ice pack to reduce swelling and relieve pain.

Encourage rest: While sleep is generally safe after a mild head injury, wake your child periodically (every 2–3 hours for young children) to check for unusual behavior.

Monitor for symptoms: Look out for changes in mood, coordination, balance, or speech, as these could signal a more serious problem.

3. Know when to seek medical help

Not every head injury requires an emergency room visit, but you should contact a doctor if:

- Your child lost consciousness, even for a brief moment.
- They exhibit persistent vomiting or extreme drowsiness.
- You notice changes in their behavior, such as excessive irritability or difficulty recognizing familiar faces.
- They have trouble walking, speaking, or focusing their eyes.
- The injury was caused by a high-impact fall or object (e.g., a fall from a significant height or being struck by something heavy).

If your child has any of these symptoms, take them to the emergency room immediately.

4. Preventing future head injuries

While accidents happen, there are steps you can take to minimize the risk of head injuries:

Supervise young children: Always keep an eye on toddlers, especially around stairs, furniture, and playgrounds.

Use protective gear: Ensure your child wears helmets when biking, skateboarding, or playing contact sports.

Childproof your home: Install safety gates on stairs, use corner protectors on furniture, and secure heavy furniture to the walls.

Teach safe play habits: Encourage safe play and educate older children about the risks of roughhousing or dangerous activities.

5. Follow-up and recovery

If your child has had a mild head injury but continues to have headaches, dizziness, or trouble concentrating in the following days, schedule a follow-up with their pediatrician. For more severe injuries, follow your doctor's recommendations on rest, activity restrictions, and symptom monitoring.

Head injuries in children are common but can often be managed with careful observation and prompt action. By staying calm, assessing the injury, and seeking medical care when necessary, you can help ensure your child's health and safety. Preventive measures can also reduce the risk of head injuries in the future, allowing your child to play and explore safely.

In Ireland, the holiday was historically a solemn day, but in more recent years the celebrations have evolved to include public festivals and parades.

St. Patrick's Day

A tale of two celebrations – Ireland vs. the United States

St. Patrick's Day, observed every year on March 17, is a global celebration of Irish heritage and culture. While both Ireland and the United States commemorate the occasion with enthusiasm, the way the holiday is observed varies significantly between the two countries. From religious traditions to extravagant parades, St. Patrick's Day manifests in distinct ways, reflecting the cultural values of each nation.

St. Patrick's Day in Ireland: A traditional and reverent celebration

In Ireland, St. Patrick's Day is more than just a festive occasion; it is a national holiday with deep religious significance. As the country's patron saint, St. Patrick is honored for bringing Christianity to Ireland in the 5th century. Traditionally, the day has been observed with church services, family gatherings, and community events.

Religious observances are at the heart of St. Patrick's Day in Ireland. Many Irish citizens attend mass, where prayers and hymns are dedicated to St. Patrick. The holiday was historically a solemn day, with pubs even closing until the late 20th century to encourage reflection rather than revelry. However, in more recent years, the celebrations have evolved to include public festivals and parades, particularly in larger cities such as Dublin, Cork, and Galway.

Modern-day Irish celebrations still retain a strong emphasis on cultural pride. Festivals feature traditional Irish music, folk dancing, and storytelling. Many Irish people wear a sprig of shamrock, the three-leafed plant associated with St. Patrick, which he is said to have used to explain the Holy Trinity. While there are parades, they are generally more modest and community-focused compared to their American counterparts.

St. Patrick's Day in the United States: A grand spectacle

In contrast, St. Patrick's Day in the United States is a highly commercialized and grand celebration. With millions of Irish immigrants having settled in America over the centuries, particularly during the Great Famine of the 19th century, the holiday has transformed into a nationwide party celebrating Irish heritage with parades, music, and revelry.

Cities with large Irish-American populations, such as New York, Chicago, and Boston, host some of the world's largest and most extravagant St. Patrick's Day parades. The New York City parade, which dates back to 1762, is one of the biggest, featuring marching bands, floats, and thousands of participants. Chicago takes the celebration a step further by dyeing its river green, a tradition that has captivated onlookers since 1962.

Unlike the more reserved Irish approach, St. Patrick's Day in America is often synonymous with drinking and partying. Many people dress in green, don novelty shamrock accessories, and enjoy pints of beer—sometimes dyed green for the occasion. Bars and restaurants offer special promotions, and Irish pubs become the center of festivities. Corned beef and cabbage, an Americanized Irish dish, is a staple meal on this day, even though it is not commonly eaten in Ireland.

A shared love for Irish culture

Despite these differences, St. Patrick's Day remains a celebration of Irish heritage and culture in both Ireland and the United States. While Ireland embraces a mix of solemnity and festivity, the U.S. turns the day into a vibrant, large-scale event. Regardless of location, the holiday fosters a sense of unity, pride, and appreciation for Irish traditions worldwide.

When your child doesn't like to read

I saw it again. Another post on social media from a friend singing the praises of her child who couldn't stop reading.

"How lucky am I?" she wrote. "My son finished Harry Potter and he's only in second grade!"

You are lucky, I thought, damping down my jealousy. My son hates reading. He loathes it with a passion unseen since he lost a game of Candy Land to me when he was 3 years old.

I can't exactly post, "My son hates reading!" on social media, though. He's a teenager now, and I've waited years to admit publicly how much he hates reading. I felt that my son's lack of interest in reading meant that I was a bad mother, that I had failed somehow.

However, the truth is kinder to me than I am to myself: reading is a pursuit that he is not passionate about.

He can read.

He doesn't like to read.

There is a difference.

Ever since he was born, I tried to instill in him a love of reading. In no particular order, here are the word-nurturing, pro-book, literature-lovin' experiences I exposed him to:

- I read in front of him. I love to read!
- I read to him. Daily from birth until third grade.
- I took him to the library.
- I took him to story time at the library.

- I signed him up for the summer reading program at the library.
- I took him to the bookstore.
- I bought him books from the bookstore.
- I bought him books from the school book fairs.
- I made sure his daycare was a developmentally-appropriate, NAEYC-accredited child care center that was chock full of book nooks, story times, and language-enrichment activities.
- I signed those homework reading logs that came home every night from kindergarten through sixth grade.
- I chatted with him about books.
- I bought him a e-reader.
- I downloaded books for his e-reader.
- Did I mention I read in front of him? I love to read!

For years, I've felt bad about his lack of fervor for reading, especially during the dreaded "March is Reading month." Until one day I stopped.

It was the day a mom came over to pick up her child from a play date with my youngest (who loves to read, by the way). I don't remember how the topic of my son's lack of interest in reading came up, but she shared her thoughts.

"I hate reading, too," she commented. "It was never social enough for me. I always wanted to be doing something else."

Here she was, a successful vice president at an international company with three lovely children, confessing that reading wasn't for her.

It was a relief. It was the first voice I heard that defied the cacophony telling me that I must get my child to love reading. That day I allowed myself to believe, to embrace even, that my son could succeed in life even though he doesn't like to read.

Reading is not for my son. However, what is for my son is socializing with friends and family, chatting with anyone he meets, participating in classroom discussions, being a leader, playing sports, and being pretty great.

Maybe I should put that on social media. He can't be embarrassed by such a post. Chances are he won't even read it.

Women's History Luncheon

Join the Lake County History Center on Saturday, March 8 at noon for a delicious lunch and learn about Stagecoach Mary Fields who was born a slave and lived by her wits and her strength.

Robin Echols Cooper will portray Mary and how she traveled north to Ohio, settled in Toledo and worked for the Catholic convent. She formed a strong bond with Mother Amadeus. When the nuns moved to Montana and Mary learned of Mother Amadeus' failing health, she went west to help out. Having nursed Mother Amadeus back to health, she decided to stay and help build the St. Peter's mission school. She protected the nuns. Mary was a pistol-packing, hard-drinking woman, who needed nobody to fight her battles for her.

The menu will feature a salad, lemon chicken, rice pilaf and a seasonal vegetable. Registration is required. No refunds will be given. Cost is $38 members/$42 nonmembers. Register at lakehistory.eventbrite.com or call 440-639-2945.

6 tips to help save money, common HVAC & plumbing bad habits

Taking proper care of your HVAC and plumbing is essential to maintaining high efficiency and avoiding future costly maintenance. There are a variety of bad habits that homeowners can unintentionally have regarding their HVAC system and plumbing. These common mistakes can add up over time if you are not careful. Completing annual maintenance and taking a proactive step to fight against future costly issues are one of the most important things that you can do to save money on plumbing and HVAC.

Not changing your filter: There are a variety of issues that stem from not changing your filter, inefficiency, and rising energy bills among them.

No regular maintenance: Forgoing regular maintenance on your HVAC & plumbing system may seem like an easy way to cut costs, but the damage of doing so can quickly add up over time.

Blocking airflow: Proper airflow is one of the most important things that your HVAC system requires to function efficiently. If this airflow is blocked, multiple issues can arise.

Actively look for drips: Drips add up over time —and can also signal a larger problem at hand. Loose valves, cracked pipes, or even flooding are all issues that a few small drips can warn homeowners about.

Upgrade your water heater: Heating water requires a lot of energy; by upgrading to a more effective, energy-efficient model, you can save a lot of money over time.

Check your water meter: Take a quick look over your water meter to be sure that your water flow is running normally.

Blue Whales: Return of the Giants opens March 1 at the Science Center

Join the search for a missing pod of blue whales in the Indian Ocean and eavesdrop on a group of whales in the Gulf of California when "Blue Whales: Return of the Giants" opens on March 1 in the Cleveland Clinic DOME Theater at Great Lakes Science Center.

Blue whales are the largest animals to have ever lived, bigger than any dinosaur, yet we know surprisingly little about them. The film follows two scientific missions to learn more. First, join a high-risk mission to find a missing population of blue whales, not seen in 50 years, off the Seychelles Islands in the Indian Ocean. Then, travel to Mexico's Gulf of California where Diane Gendron, the "Blue Whale Whisperer," and her team eavesdrop on whale conversations and explore the important role these remarkable animals play in the health of our oceans. Experience their spectacular feeding habits, their awesome long-distance communication, and their tender mother-calf bonds.

Narrated by award-winning actor

Andy Serkis and featuring a score by Academy Award-winner Steven Price, the film will entertain audiences of all ages as it transforms our understanding of these iconic ocean giants.

"This movie is incredibly uplifting and powerful," Serkis said. "Everyone assumes that because blue whales are the largest mammals on the planet, we should know a lot about them, but in fact that's not the case. We need to find out more about creatures like these, because they inspire us to have hope."

"Blue Whales: Return of the Giants" will screen at 1 and 3 p.m. daily, with an 11 a.m. screening on weekends and a 5 p.m. showing on Thursday evenings. Visit www.GreatScience.com for more info.

It won't happen to me

Accidents happen every day, protection is available

Imagine a child and his friends playing with the family puppy in the backyard. Suddenly, the dog bites one of his friends in the face causing permanent disfigurement. The owners of the puppy are legally liable for the loss, but the limits on their homeowners policy aren't enough to cover the damages.

Now imagine a family heading to its favorite restaurant for dinner on a rainy night. Slippery conditions cause the car to slide off the pavement onto the shoulder. The driver over-corrects, sending the family car straight into the path of an oncoming vehicle. The family's automobile liability coverage isn't enough to pay for the injuries to the other car's occupants.

Think it couldn't happen to you? The stark reality is that accidents such as these happen nearly every day. Fortunately, protection is available should the unthinkable occur with a personal umbrella policy.

While it's easy to assume that a personal umbrella policy is only for people with substantial assets, the truth is anyone is at risk of being held liable for an accident. Settlements of $1 million or more have become commonplace and if you don't have an umbrella policy, you may have to pay whatever costs exceed your primary insurance policy directly out of your own pocket. Where will you find the money? Your children's college tuition savings? Your retirement savings? Your home?

A personal umbrella policy offers you an unbeatable layer of protection – you can select limits of $1 million up to $10 million in coverage – over the coverage limits you already have from your automobile, homeowners or other personal insurance policies. In the examples above, the personal umbrella policy would pay the difference between the primary policy coverage limits and damages amount, up to the limits of the personal umbrella policy.

While the odds are more likely you'll need the protection of a personal umbrella policy for liability from an accident, you'll also receive coverages not usually included in your basic policies such as libel, slander, false arrest, false imprisonment, wrongful eviction, violation of privacy rights, and wrongful detention. An added feature of the personal umbrella is the policy will also pay your defense costs – even on covered losses where you're found not legally liable. This additional coverage could save you thousands of dollars in legal defense fees.

Contact the Corsaro Insurance Group and ask us how you can further protect yourself, your family and your future with a personal umbrella policy.

Have you ever dreamed of reliving the joy and excitement of camp—without the kids? Now's your chance! The Children's Museum of Cleveland (CMC) is thrilled to announce Camp CMC, a special adults-only event designed to bring back the magic of childhood summer fun. This one-of-a-kind evening of camp-themed activities will take place on Wednesday, March 5, from 6–8 p.m. at the Museum, including access to its vibrant and interactive exhibits.

Whether you're into arts and crafts, games, or having the space to create the most epic blanket fort ever, Camp CMC has something for everyone. Attendees will have access to all the Museum's exhibit spaces, where they can unleash their inner child through a variety of themed activities, games, and hands-on experiences. Proceeds from this event support the Museum's Wonder Fund, which makes the magic of a CMC visit accessible to all families by offering free and reduced admissions programs for low-income and special needs guests.

Event highlights include:

- Camp-themed activities throughout the Museum's interactive exhibit spaces
- Two complimentary drink tickets
- Light snacks to fuel your adventure
- A special take-home tote

The Children's Museum of Cleveland is located at 3813 Euclid Avenue in Cleveland.

Tickets are $50 per person and are available now on the Museum's website at www.cmcleveland.org/events. Space is limited, so be sure to secure your spot today!

SUMMER CAMP GUIDE

History of Summer Camps

Early Beginnings

(Late 19th century)

- The concept of summer camps began in the U.S. in the late 1800s.
- Camps were created to provide boys with outdoor experiences away from urban life.
- First known U.S. camp: The Gunnery Camp (1861), founded by Frederick Gunn in Connecticut.

Expansion & Formalization

(Early 20th century)

- The American Camping Association (ACA) was founded in 1910 to standardize camps.
- Girls' camps emerged, such as Camp Fire Girls (1910, now Camp Fire USA).
- Scouting movements, like the Boy Scouts (1910) and Girl Scouts (1912), influenced camp programs.
- YMCA and church-affiliated camps grew in popularity.

Mid-20th Century Growth

- More specialized camps appeared (sports, arts, science).
- Jewish and minority-focused camps provided inclusive experiences.
- WWII and economic growth led to increased family interest in camps.

Modern Evolution

- Coed camps became more common.
- Themed camps emerged (STEM, adventure, performing arts).
- Technology-free and wilderness survival camps gained popularity.
- International expansion brought the American summer camp model worldwide.

Current Trends

- Focus on diversity, inclusion, and mental wellness.
- Eco-friendly and sustainable practices in outdoor camps.
- Digital detox programs to counteract screen time.

10 tips for choosing a summer day camp

Choosing the perfect summer day camp for your child can feel overwhelming with so many options available. A well-chosen camp provides children with a safe environment to learn, grow, and have fun, while also giving parents peace of mind. Here are some essential tips to help you navigate this decision and find the best fit for your family.

1. Identify your goals and priorities

Before diving into camp brochures or websites, take time to identify what you and your child hope to gain from the experience. Are you looking for a camp that focuses on academics, sports, arts, or outdoor adventures? Does your child want to make new friends or improve a specific skill? Clarifying these priorities will help narrow down your options and ensure you choose a camp that aligns with your expectations.

2. Consider your child's interests & personality

Each child is unique, and their preferences and personality should play a significant role in selecting a camp. For example, an introverted child might thrive in a smaller, quieter setting, while an extroverted child may enjoy a bustling camp with diverse group activities. Engaging your child in the decision-making process can also help them feel excited and invested in the experience.

3. Research camp options thoroughly

Begin your search by gathering recommendations from friends, family, and online reviews. Many camps have websites or social media pages where you can find detailed information about their programs, schedules, and staff. Look for camps accredited by organizations like the American Camp Association (ACA), which ensures they meet high safety and quality standards.

4. Assess safety and supervision

Safety is paramount when choosing a day camp. Check the camper-to-staff ratio and ensure it aligns with industry standards. Ask about staff qualifications, including background checks, certifications in first aid and CPR, and relevant training. Inquire about the camp's protocols for handling emergencies, illnesses, and injuries.

5. Evaluate the schedule and activities

Review the daily schedule and activity options to ensure they align with your child's interests and energy levels. A good camp will offer a balance of structured activities and free time, catering to various age groups and skill levels. If your child has special interests, such as coding, dance, or swimming, look for camps with specialized programs in those areas.

6. Consider the location and hours

Logistics are an essential factor in choosing a summer day camp. Consider the camp's proximity to your home or workplace and whether the hours fit your family's schedule. Some camps offer extended care options, which can be a lifesaver for working parents.

7. Visit the camp in person

If possible, arrange a visit to the camp before enrolling your child. A tour allows you to see the facilities, meet the staff, and observe the environment. Pay attention to cleanliness, the condition of equipment, and whether the atmosphere feels welcoming and inclusive. This firsthand experience can provide valuable insights that you won't get from brochures or online descriptions.

8. Review costs and budget

Day camp fees can vary widely, so it's essential to understand the costs upfront. Ask about what the tuition covers and whether there are additional fees for meals, field trips, or supplies. Some camps offer discounts for early registration or multiple children, as well as financial aid for families in need.

9. Seek feedback from other parents

Talking to other parents who have experience with the camp can provide honest insights. Ask about their child's experience, the camp's strengths and weaknesses, and whether they would recommend it. Online parenting forums and local community groups can also be valuable resources for reviews and recommendations.

10. Trust your instincts

Finally, trust your gut feeling. If something about a camp doesn't feel right, keep looking. The right camp should give you confidence in its ability to provide a safe, enriching, and enjoyable experience for your child.

Choosing a summer day camp is an important decision that requires careful consideration. By identifying your goals, understanding your child's needs, and thoroughly researching your options, you can find a camp that offers a rewarding and memorable summer experience. With the right preparation, summer day camp can become a highlight of your child's year, fostering growth, learning, and lifelong memories.

Types of summer day camps to consider

Summer day camps provide children with opportunities to explore new interests, develop skills, and make lasting memories. For parents, choosing the right camp can feel overwhelming given the variety of options available. To make the process easier, it's essential to consider your child's interests, needs, and goals. Below are the primary types of summer day camps for parents to explore.

1. Traditional day camps

Traditional camps offer a classic summer experience, typically including a mix of outdoor activities, arts and crafts, sports, and games. These camps are perfect for children who enjoy variety and socializing with peers. They foster teamwork, independence, and problem-solving skills. Activities like hiking, swimming, and team sports ensure a balance of fun and personal growth.

2. Sports camps

Sports camps cater to athletic kids who are passionate about specific activities like soccer, basketball, tennis, or gymnastics. They often feature skill-building sessions led by professional coaches or athletes. These camps help children refine their techniques, enhance physical fitness, and develop a competitive spirit in a supportive environment. Whether your child is a beginner or an experienced player, sports camps can be tailored to various skill levels.

3. Art and performing arts camps

For creative kids, art camps are an excellent choice. These camps focus on activities such as painting, sculpting, photography, theater, music, and dance. Performing arts camps may culminate in recitals or performances, giving children a chance to showcase their talents. These programs encourage self-expression, confidence, and creative thinking while allowing children to connect with like-minded peers.

4. STEM and academic camps

STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) camps engage curious minds with hands-on projects like robotics, coding, and chemistry experiments. Academic camps, on the other hand, may focus on specific subjects such as writing, math, or foreign languages. These camps are ideal for children who enjoy problem-solving and exploring innovative ideas. They foster critical thinking and can provide a head start in school-related topics.

5. Nature and adventure camps

Nature-focused camps immerse children in outdoor exploration, teaching them about environmental conservation, wildlife, and survival skills. Activities like hiking, kayaking, and rock climbing encourage physical fitness and an appreciation for nature. Adventure camps provide thrilling experiences that can boost confidence and resilience while fostering a love for the great outdoors.

6. Specialty camps

Specialty camps cater to niche interests, such as cooking, horseback riding, or even video game design. These camps allow children to dive deeply into a specific passion, offering expert guidance and advanced learning opportunities. Specialty camps can be a fantastic way for kids to explore hobbies or consider future career paths.

7. Camps for special needs

For children with special needs, there are inclusive camps designed to provide personalized care and adaptive activities. These camps focus on creating a supportive and accessible environment, ensuring that all children can enjoy enriching summer experiences. Staff are typically trained to work with children with disabilities or medical conditions, offering peace of mind to parents.

Selecting the right summer day camp involves understanding your child's interests and comfort levels. Whether they are aspiring athletes, budding scientists, or creative dreamers, there's a camp to match their personality and needs. By choosing thoughtfully, parents can ensure their children have a memorable and rewarding summer filled with growth, fun, and discovery.

Welcome to Camp Curiosity 2025, presented by Timken. Their week-long summer day camps for kids in grades K-6 offer unforgettable science adventures, new opportunities to grow their interests, and the chance to make new friends and create amazing memories. Great Lakes Science Center camps combine fun with STEM themes designed to keep kids engaged and learning during the summer.

Kids can make some waves while exploring a Great Lakes steamship, discover how to build structures that can withstand a hurricane, or learn how to solve mysteries like Sherlock Holmes. Whether your kid dreams of exploring space, loves tinkering with simple machines or longs to discover what chemical reactions can be created with ingredients from your kitchen, there is a camp sure to capture their interest.

Sessions begin June 2 and run through the week of August 11.

SUMMER CAMP GUIDE

Greater Cleveland Cross Country Camp

(440) 290-0185

The Greater Cleveland Cross Country Camp is geared for the beginner to the advanced runner, who is looking to have a better focus pertaining to the fundamentals of cross country running and conditioning, to obtain maximum benefit.

Through group runs, guest speakers and group activities, each runner will leave with a positive attitude, tools to become an improved runner, and a better understanding of running.

This is the 21st annual cross country camp and will be held Tuesday, July 22 through Saturday, July 26 from 8 a.m.–11:30 a.m. at Shore Middle School in Mentor. The last day is a cross country race for all campers based on grade level. The camp is open to boys and girls K–12th grade.

The Greater Cleveland Cross Country Camp is organized by Mentor High School boys/girls head cross country coach, Bill Dennison, with the support of other local coaches and college runners. They hope each camper leaves with the love and passion that the staff at the Greater Cleveland Cross Country Camp has.

Campers will discover hidden talents in many different fine arts camps this summer available at Rabbit Run Community Arts Association.

Youth Art Camp is for anyone who likes to be creative and make a mess in the process. In these one-week camps, campers, ages 3–16, get elbow deep in paint, pastels and other mediums as they create original works of art with RRCAA art instructor Miss Katie.

Preschool Art Camp is for ages 3–6; Youth Art Camp is for ages 7–10 and Teen Art Camp is for youth ages 11–16.

Campers delve into all areas of theater including drama, music, dance, costumes, make-up, and stage craft in both the Junior Theater Camp for ages 4–8 and Explorer's Theater Camp for ages 8–15.

A six-week dance session offers classes in jazz, tap, ballet and creative movement.

Dates for each camp and the summer dance session will be available the middle of March.

Preparing your child to attend summer day camp

Summer day camp is an exciting adventure for children, providing them with opportunities to learn new skills, make friends, and enjoy outdoor activities. However, for both parents and children, the transition to camp life can bring a mix of excitement and anxiety. Proper preparation can help ease any concerns and ensure a smooth and enjoyable experience. Here are some key steps to prepare your child for summer day camp.

Discuss expectations and build excitement

Talk to your child about what they can expect at camp, including daily schedules, activities, and new friendships. Highlight the fun aspects, such as games, crafts, and outdoor adventures. If possible, visit the camp beforehand or explore their website together to familiarize your child with the environment. This helps to reduce uncertainty and builds excitement.

Pack smart and label everything

Ensure your child has the necessary items for camp, including weather-appropriate clothing, a water bottle, sunscreen, a hat, and any required medications. Packing a healthy lunch and snacks is also important if the camp does not provide meals. Label all personal belongings to prevent mixups and lost items.

Encourage independence

Day camp often requires children to take on small responsibilities, such as keeping track of their belongings, following instructions, and making choices about activities. Encourage independence at home by allowing them to pack their own backpack, dress themselves, and practice good hygiene habits. Teaching them problem-solving skills, like how to ask for help or handle minor conflicts, can boost their confidence.

Address any anxieties

It's natural for children to feel nervous about a new experience. Validate their feelings and reassure them that it's okay to feel a little anxious. Share stories about your own positive experiences with camps or new activities. Encourage them to talk about their worries and provide solutions to potential concerns. If they feel apprehensive about making friends, role play social scenarios to help them feel more prepared.

Establish a routine

Camps often have structured schedules, so transitioning from a relaxed summer routine to a more structured day can be challenging. A few weeks before camp starts, adjust your child's schedule to align with camp hours, including wake-up times, meal schedules, and bedtime routines. This will help ease the transition and reduce morning struggles.

Foster a positive attitude toward new experiences

Encourage your child to embrace new activities and step out of their comfort zone. Remind them that making mistakes and trying new things are part of learning and growing. Reinforce a positive mindset by celebrating their courage and effort rather than just their achievements.

By taking these steps, you can help your child feel confident and prepared for their summer day camp experience. With the right preparation, they will have a fantastic time, creating lasting memories and building valuable life skills.
