BIGGS, CA (MPG) - Biggs High School honored approximately 37 graduates during commencement ceremonies, celebrating the accomplishments, friendships and experiences that shaped the Class of 2026.

The ceremony featured speeches from Salutatorian Gracie Sheppard and Valedictorian Mason Kaelin, who reflected on the lessons learned during their years at Biggs High and encouraged classmates to embrace the future.

Sheppard acknowledged the uncertainty many graduates face as they prepare for the next stage of life.

"Most of us don't have it all figured out. And honestly, I feel that there is something beautiful about figuring it all out," Sheppard said.

She encouraged her classmates to remember the value of kindness and to recognize that others may be facing challenges that are not always visible.

"Never forget the value of kindness. It will get you so far in life," she said. "You really don't know what someone else is going through."

Sheppard also urged graduates to appreciate every moment and avoid taking time for granted.

"Life is shorter than we are ever going to admit, and not a single day is promised," she said. "So don't wait, say the words you want to say, take the risk, and be present for the people who you love the most."

Valedictorian Mason Kaelin reflected on how quickly his high school years passed and thanked the teachers, family members and friends who supported him along the way.

"Today we are not just celebrating those of us who are graduating but also celebrating everyone who got us here," Kaelin said. He offered special thanks to teachers for their guidance and to families for their sacrifices and encouragement.

Kaelin said the graduates are entering a world full of opportunities and

Rural Counties Back State Split Resolution

By Susan Meeker

COLUSA, CA (MPG) - Rural frustration over water policy, state mandates, shrinking local control and what county leaders described as a widening political divide between urban and inland California is fueling new support across Northern California for Assembly Joint Resolution 23, a proposal signaling interest in forming a new state from California's existing boundaries.

County boards in Colusa, Sutter, Butte and Yuba counties approved resolutions backing AJR 23 during May meetings. The proposal, authored by Assemblyman James Gallagher, would formally express legislative consent for specified counties to potentially form a new state, subject to approval by Congress.

The Colusa County Board of Supervisors approved its resolution May 19 after supervisors and public speakers argued rural counties are increasingly overshadowed by urban political priorities.

County leaders said the proposal was intended primarily to "send a message" to Sacramento that rural residents believe state policies favor urban population centers while agricultural and inland counties continue losing political influence.

Colusa County Supervisor Daurice Kalfsbeek-Smith said rural communities are increasingly frustrated by state policies that fail to reflect the needs of agricultural counties.

"The state's one size fits all approach is what's destroying rural California," Kalfsbeek-Smith said.

Public speakers in Colusa also voiced support, including a representative of the State of Jefferson movement who urged officials to continue demanding greater Northern California representation.

But the strongest concerns surfaced days later in Sutter County, where supervisors tied the proposal to mounting frustrations over public safety costs, infrastructure funding, wildfire policy, water storage and state oversight.

Sutter County Supervisor Dan Flores said his support for the resolution stems from what he sees as a widening gap between state expectations and the resources counties receive to meet them. He said counties are increasingly expected to manage homelessness, mental health services, public safety, roads and public works, and health care while

Glassy-Winged Sharpshooter Found on Costco Plants

By MPG Staff

MARYSVILLE, CA (MPG) - Yuba County agricultural officials are urging residents to take immediate precautions after the invasive glassy-winged sharpshooter was detected on grape and citrus plants sold at Costco stores.

The insect, a type of leafhopper, can spread Pierce's disease, a bacterial infection that is fatal to grapevines. It can also damage almond, citrus and ornamental plants, posing a significant threat to California agriculture and home gardens.

Anyone who purchased grape or citrus plants from the Marysville Costco beginning May 21 is asked to help prevent the spread of the pest by contacting their local county agricultural commissioner's office.

"Glassy-winged sharpshooters pose an immediate and serious threat to vineyards because they transmit the bacterium Xylella fastidiosa, which causes the deadly Pierce's disease in grapevines," said Yuba County Agricultural Commissioner Stephen Scheer. "We are asking for communitywide cooperation to help limit this risk. If you recently purchased grapevines or citrus plants at Costco, please contact your county agriculture department so we can safely dispose of grapevines and inspect citrus plants." Officials emphasized that the plants in question are grapevines intended for planting in home gardens and landscaping, not grapes sold for consumption.

Residents who purchased grapevines are advised to place two garbage bags over the plants and secure them tightly. Those who purchased citrus plants should contact their county agriculture department to schedule an inspection.

Residents should not attempt to return, transport or relocate the plants. They also should not place them in the trash or compost.

Residents seeking guidance should contact their local county agriculture department. Yuba County can be reached at 530-749-5400 or yubaag@yuba.gov. Sutter County can be reached at 530-822-7500 or sutterag@co.sutter.ca.us. Colusa County can be reached at 530-458-0580 or ccag@countyofcolusaca.gov. Nevada County can be reached at 530-470-2690 or agdept@nevadacountyca.gov.

Colusa County agricultural officials also issued a request for public assistance following the discovery, asking residents who purchased grapevines from Costco to contact the Colusa County Agricultural Commissioner's Office for evaluation. ★

The New Pi-Line

If you are unencumbered and you want a cultural and sociological scientific adventure, go to the Dollar General Store in Gridley. They have a camouflage clothing section, beach furniture, and ice cream. Mostly based in the Southern United States, "DGs" have a different worldview and culture that is palpable when you are inside. Spent 40 minutes there last week, just looking around and people-watching. Oddly, the Gridley Herald sells out at the Dollar General every week. The Dollar General in Live Oak is not as folksy; it is more uptown and larger in scale.

Two weeks ago, we were leaving the Dick Jones Little League Field at Viera Park, and we noticed some vagabonds and hobos at the Portuguese cultural hall. So when we saw a GPD officer, we alerted him. Patrol Sgt. C. Massey knew who they were and what they were doing and was in the process of processing them. He noted with a grin, "I know everyone in Gridley." Fast-forward to this week: we see 5 GPD officers arresting a guy at Wilson School and the CalFire 74 crew on the roof of the old CVS Pharmacy on the highway. The first thing we wondered was whether the hobo getting arrested was the guy who lights things on fire? Such intrigue! GPD Chief Farr should start negotiating a contract for a reality TV series. It would be a great way to make revenue for the City, and if people saw how often GPD personnel stop crime, they would appreciate the local police a bit more.

If you have not seen it, the Portuguese Hall has been demolished. Sad day. Great memories. Holy Trinity forever.

Biggs High Class of 2026 Celebrates Graduation

"A few people I've spoken to have said that high school will be the best years of our lives, but, goodness I hope not," Kaelin said. "There is so much to life and so much beauty in our futures both near and far."

As he concluded his remarks, Kaelin encouraged his classmates to carry forward the relationships they built during their time at Biggs High.

"Growing up is scary. It's painful. It makes you feel uncertain," he said. "If there is one thing I will leave with you, it is no matter what, continue to love."

Principal Doug Kalin congratulated the graduating class and praised students for their perseverance and growth.

"Your hard work, your determination have brought you here, and you should be incredibly proud of what you have accomplished," Kalin said. "Today is both an ending and a beginning."

Kalin reminded graduates that success is measured not only by achievements but also by character, kindness and integrity.

"The world needs people who are willing to listen, help create and lead with compassion," he said. ★

Wildfire Helicopter Returning This Summer

By Susan Meeker

OROVILLE, CA (MPG) - Butte County will again have a privately contracted firefighting helicopter stationed at Chico Airport this summer under agreements approved May 26 by the Butte County Board of Supervisors.

The agreements between Butte County Fire, Pacific Gas & Electric and CAL FIRE provide a Sikorsky UH-60 Type 1 helicopter for wildfire suppression from June 15 through Nov. 15. The aircraft will operate during daylight hours and remain under the operational control of the Butte County Fire Department.

Fire Chief Garrett Sjolund told supervisors the helicopter program has already proven valuable during the past two fire seasons.

"In 2024 and 25 the board both approved an agreement with PGE to provide at no cost to the county a helicopter as pilots and its mechanical support," Sjolund said.

Sjolund said the helicopter logged 84 total flight hours over the last two years, including responses to the Thompson, Park and Granite fires. Crews delivered nearly 440,000 gallons of water during firefighting operations.

The helicopter is equipped with a 1,000-gallon water tank and has capabilities similar to CAL FIRE aircraft, according to Sjolund. The aircraft will be dispatched through the county command center and can respond throughout Butte County's local and state responsibility areas.

The agreements also allow the helicopter to assist neighboring jurisdictions through the state mutual aid system at no cost to the county. CAL FIRE may request the aircraft for state responsibility area fires and reimburse Butte County for flight hours used on those incidents.

PG&E will cover the first two hours of flight time for incidents within Butte County. Additional flight hours will cost $10,500 per hour, according to Sjolund.

Sjolund said the locally based helicopter provides an important backup resource when state firefighting aircraft are committed elsewhere during major wildfire activity.

"It provides a local capability when state resources are pulled out of the county for other fires," Sjolund said. "That helicopter is here to be able to maintain initial attack response."

Board Chair Bill Connelly noted the helicopter responded to both the Thompson and Park fires while other large fires were burning across California. ★

Freebirds Endure Losing Streak After Being Swept by the Coast

By YSBC Sports

MARYSVILLE, CA (YSBC) - The weekend series between the Long Beach Coast and the Yuba-Sutter Freebirds was an offensive outpour as Long Beach beat YS on Saturday, May 30, 15-10.

The Coast continued their early season success against the Freebirds as they took the first two games of the series.

Long Beach scored 25 runs on May 29 in a dominant victory and wasted no time getting back on the scoreboard on Saturday as they put up seven runs quickly in the first two innings.

YS starter Zac Addikson was relieved after he finished the second as he allowed seven runs off seven hits and tossed 74 pitches.

The Freebirds responded in the second and third with an offensive output of their own as they racked up 10 runs over the two innings, including six runs with two outs in the third.

YS utility Josh Duarte continued flustering opposing pitchers as he was the batting average leader (.571) to n the Pioneer

Baseball League (PBL) at the conclusion of Saturday and added four hits and five runs-batted-in (RBIs).

Duarte gave the Freebirds the lead in the third with a bases-clearing double to center.

The Coast retaliated and took the lead in the fourth as they tallied four runs off of YS pitcher Anthony Silvas.

Silvas came into the game in the third inning and tossed 3 2/3 innings of relief where he gave up four runs off five hits and struck out three.

Long Beach outfielder gave the Coast an 11-10 lead off an RBI single.

There were a lot of familiar faces on the Long Beach roster as some former YS High Wheelers returned to Bryan field.

Long Beach catcher Cuba Bess had three hits in the win on Saturday and Cole Cressend started the game on the mound for the Coast.

Long Beach catcher

Thomas McCaffrey had a great series at the plate as he had seven hits, including three home runs and 10 RBIs in the first two games of the series against the Freebirds.

The Coast finished off the series sweep on Sunday night with a 13-6 win and handed YS their fourth-consecutive loss.

YS hit the road for the first time this season as they traveled down to Modesto and took on the Roadsters, who are one of the three newest teams in the PBL.

The series with Modesto will conclude on Sunday, June 7 and the Freebirds return to Bryant Field and host the RedPocket Mobiles beginning on Tuesday, June 9 at 6:35 p.m. ★

Caltrans Awards $23.6 Million Statewide

By MPG Staff

SACRAMENTO, CA (MPG) - Caltrans has awarded $23.6 million in transportation planning grants to 58 projects across California aimed at improving climate resiliency, reducing greenhouse gas emissions, increasing pedestrian and bicycle safety and strengthening disaster preparedness.

The funding will support local planning and conceptual design efforts that help move transportation projects closer to construction. State officials said the grants focus on multimodal transportation options and improving mobility in under-resourced communities.

Nearly $14 million of the funding comes from Senate Bill 1, the Road Repair and Accountability Act of 2017. Additional funding sources include the State Highway Account, the Federal Highway Administration State Planning and Research Program and the Federal Transit Administration's Section 5304 Grant Program.

California Transportation Secretary Toks Omishakin said the grants will help communities develop transportation solutions that improve quality of life and create safer connections to schools, workplaces and community resources.

"Every California community deserves an opportunity to shape a safer, healthier and more connected future," Omishakin said.

Caltrans Director Dina El-Tawansy said the investments will support climate-resilient infrastructure while expanding access to transportation options.

"These investments will strengthen California by making it safer and easier for people to move through their communities," El-Tawansy said. "By planning for climate-resilient infrastructure, improving access to walking and biking options and supporting under-resourced areas, these projects will help protect people, expand opportunity and build a transportation system that serves everyone."

Of the total funding, $20.4 million will support 49 Sustainable Communities Competitive and Technical Grant projects involving local governments, regional agencies, transit operators and tribal governments. More than $8.7 million of that amount will fund 20 projects focused on active transportation safety improvements. Caltrans said 86% of those projects will benefit under-resourced communities.

Another $3.2 million in Strategic Partnerships Grants will support nine projects focused on long-term transportation planning, railroad crossing safety, transit reliability, multimodal circulation improvements and bus rapid transit planning.

Among the projects receiving funding are a $256,300 grant for the Paskenta Band of Nomlaki Indians in Tehama County to develop an Active Transportation Plan and a $593,000 grant for the Torres Martinez Desert Cahuilla Indians in Riverside County to update a tribal land use plan with climate-resilient transportation standards.

Caltrans has awarded 808 transportation planning grants totaling $316 million since the program began during the 2015-16 fiscal year. The agency reported that more than 73% of those projects have been completed.

SB 1 generates approximately $5 billion annually for transportation improvements and is shared between state and local agencies. ★

Mendocino Forest Plans Trails Day Events

National Trails Day takes place annually on the first Saturday in June. Photo by Yinet_87 via Pixabay

By MPG Staff

WILLOWS, CA (MPG) - Mendocino National Forest officials are inviting community members to take part in National Trails Day events June 5 and 6 across the forest.

National Trails Day, established by the American Hiking Society in 1993, takes place annually on the first Saturday in June. The event brings together land managers, volunteers and partners to celebrate public trails and complete maintenance projects.

Forest officials said volunteers will help improve trail safety, accessibility and maintenance during several projects scheduled throughout the forest. All ages are welcome to participate.

The first event, the Snow Mountain Wilderness Waterfall Hike, will take place Friday, June 5, from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the West Crockett Trailhead. Participants will hike to Middle Fork Falls, learn about the trail's history and assist with trail maintenance. Forest staff also will demonstrate the use of crosscut saws.

The guided hike covers 2.5 miles each way. Participants may meet at the trailhead at 10:30 a.m. or caravan with Forest Service staff from the Supervisor's Office in Willows at 8 a.m.

On Saturday, June 6, the Stonyford OHV Trail Stewardship project will run from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Stonyford Work Center. Volunteers will ride and work along 20 miles of mixed-use trails using motorcycles, side-by-sides or four-wheel-drive vehicles. The day begins with check-in and a safety briefing.

Also on June 6, volunteers can join the Lake Pillsbury Nature Trail project from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Sunset Campground. Participants will help clear trails and restore trail tread on a half-mile nature loop near Lake Pillsbury.

Forest officials recommend volunteers arrange their own transportation. Many forest roads are dirt or native surface roads, and officials recommend high-clearance four-wheel-drive vehicles.

Participants should bring lunch, water, snacks, gloves, sunscreen and a hat. Officials also recommend long sleeves and closed-toe boots because some trails may be steep, uneven or blocked by downed trees.

The Forest Service also designated June 6 as a fee-free day at standard amenity recreation sites on Forest Service lands in recognition of National Trails Day. The waiver does not apply to expanded amenity fees, reservation fees, special recreation permits or concessionaire charges.

According to the Forest Service, the agency manages more than 165,000 miles of trails nationwide. In 2025, volunteers and partner organizations completed nearly 26,000 miles of trail maintenance work, accounting for more than 60% of trail maintenance accomplishments.

County Approves Gridley Area Road Projects

By Susan Meeker

OROVILLE, CA (MPG) - Bridge repairs and roadway safety improvements affecting the Gridley area are included in Butte County's newly approved Senate Bill 1 transportation project list for the 2026-27 fiscal year.

The Butte County Board of Supervisors approved the Road Maintenance and Rehabilitation Account project list May 26 as part of the county's annual submission required to remain eligible for SB 1 transportation funding. The project list was approved as part of the board's consent agenda.

Among the projects added this year is a scour repair project for the East Gridley Road bridge at the Feather River. The bridge repair project carries an estimated total cost of about $1.38 million with approximately $277,150 in RMRA funding identified in the project list. Construction is currently targeted for June 2031.

County officials said the annual SB 1 list includes road maintenance, bridge rehabilitation and traffic safety projects throughout Butte County. The program also allows local agencies to leverage additional state and federal transportation funding programs.

Additional projects affecting south Butte County communities include roadway safety improvements on East Gridley Road, West Biggs Road, Richvale roads and Larkin Road through the Highway Safety Improvement Program. One project involving edge line improvements on several south county roads carries an estimated cost of about $1.36 million.

Another safety project involving median barrier and guardrail replacement on East Gridley Road and several other county roads is estimated at about $250,000.

The county's project list also includes preventive bridge maintenance on the East Gridley Road bridge near Larkin Road with an estimated project cost of about $294,710.

Other south county projects include rehabilitation work on Foothill Boulevard between Swiss Lane and Oro Bangor Highway estimated at $250,000, along with a rubberized pavement improvement program involving Durham-Dayton, Midway and Richvale roads estimated at $1.25 million.

The RMRA program was established under Senate Bill 1, also known as the Road Repair and Accountability Act of 2017. Counties must annually submit project lists to the California Transportation Commission identifying planned road and bridge work funded through the program.

Butte County anticipates receiving approximately $8.98 million in RMRA revenue during the 2026-27 fiscal year. County officials stated the projects approved under the program are not expected to impact the county general fund.

The county's broader transportation list for the coming fiscal year also includes bridge work, pavement rehabilitation, erosion repairs and safety upgrades in other areas of Butte County, including Concow, Cohasset, Paradise and the Oroville foothills. ★

ARREST LOGS UPDATED DAILY

Council Frustrated Over Traffic Studies

By Susan Meeker

GRIDLEY, CA (MPG) - The City of Gridley is pursuing federal traffic safety funding for dangerous intersections, school congestion and railroad access concerns, but several council members questioned whether the city is spending too much time studying problems instead of fixing them.

The City Council on May 18 authorized applying to the U.S. Department of Transportation's Safe Streets and Roads for All grant program, which could provide funding for traffic safety planning and related studies. City officials said the grant would require a 20 percent local match.

Harden said a project in the $350,000 to $400,000 range would require a local match of $70,000 to $80,000, which he said could be met through staff time, consultant work and survey efforts rather than cash alone.

Harden said the grant would allow the city to gather the traffic data, crash analysis and public outreach needed to compete for future construction funding. The consultant-led work would focus on long-standing concerns, including the East Gridley Road and Fairview Drive intersection, traffic near Wilson School and emergency response access when trains block crossings.

"We have fire on one side and the hospital on one side of the tracks, and all our development coming in on the west side," Harden said.

The proposal includes temporary demonstration projects such as short-term curb extensions, delineators, rumble strips or a temporary closure of Lincoln Avenue during Wilson School drop off. Harden said the goal is to test traffic calming ideas before committing to permanent construction.

Vice Mayor Bruce Johnson questioned why the city must continually hire consultants to validate problems residents and school staff have raised for years.

"Why can't we just use common sense and say this is what we need to do," Johnson said, warning that the city could spend years pursuing planning grants while dangerous conditions remain unchanged.

Council member J. Angel Calderon raised concerns about students walking along narrow highway shoulders and residents near Hollis Lane struggling to safely enter Highway 99 during peak traffic.

"Sometimes during the rush hour, people are just driving like crazy," he said.

Harden said the grant would not prevent the city from making immediate safety fixes.

"This is not going to pay for the construction of anything," he said. "This is strictly planning." He added that project scopes can be adjusted if the city addresses a safety issue before the study is complete.

The council voted to move forward with the application before the federal deadline. ★

Gridley Advocate Presses County for Mental Health Support

By Susan Meeker

OROVILLE, CA (MPG) - A Gridley councilmember urged Butte County supervisors to protect behavioral health services for south county residents as the board approved several mental health contracts and funding increases May 26.

J. Angel Calderon, a former behavioral health employee and current Gridley City Council member, told the board the Gridley area has historically been underserved in mental health care and warned against reducing outreach programs aimed at vulnerable populations.

"One of the reasons I run for office is actually to address and possibly establish an infrastructure for health in Gridley," Calderon said during public comment.

Calderon said he was encouraged by reports that a new behavioral health clinic could open in Gridley within months but raised concerns about what he described as planned reductions to special population services.

"I am very concerned about the last meeting we had with the advisory board," Calderon said. "I understand that behavioral health is going to cut all the services provided to special populations."

He pointed to outreach efforts involving farm workers, children and elderly residents. Calderon said the Promotores Program helped uplift Latino and Hmong families by connecting at-risk residents with mental health education, chronic disease prevention and behavioral health services, particularly during the COVID-19 pandemic when many agricultural workers continued working under stressful conditions.

He also reminded supervisors that Gridley once had one of the highest suicide rates per capita in the region and credited community outreach and prevention efforts with improving conditions over time.

The comments came during a meeting in which the Butte County Board of Supervisors approved multiple behavioral health agreements and funding amendments.

Among the actions supervisors approved was an amendment increasing a state behavioral health grant by $450,000, bringing the total grant amount to more than $5.5 million and extending the funding through June 2028. County officials said the grant supports expanded access to mental health services for children and youth, including foster youth and LGBTQ students.

Supervisors also approved additional funding for Paradise Unified School District mental health outreach services and a nearly $500,000 agreement for psychiatric medical director services due to an ongoing shortage of psychiatrists in Butte County.

The behavioral health items were approved as part of the board's consent agenda. ★

Biggs Reviewing Utility System Costs

By Susan Meeker

BIGGS, CA (MPG) - Biggs officials are reviewing long-term costs tied to the city's water and sewer systems as infrastructure maintenance, utility expenses and future capital improvement needs continue growing.

During a May 26 budget workshop, the Biggs City Council reviewed proposed 2026-27 enterprise fund budgets for the city's water and sewer operations. City Administrator Nicholas Gauthier said the city is restructuring how utility finances are organized to create more accurate budgeting and long-term planning.

Under the proposed budget, the water fund projects about $499,515 in water sales revenue, while the sewer fund projects about $661,468 in operating revenue.

The city is also adjusting how shared public works and administrative expenses are charged to enterprise funds. Gauthier explained that water and sewer employees are no longer budgeted separately and are instead grouped under the city's public works operations, with utility funds reimbursing the general fund for shared services.

"Once we get through this next fiscal year and we have all the wrinkles ironed out, this will be a lot cleaner process," Gauthier said.

Several expense categories increased under the proposed budget, including utilities, maintenance and equipment repair.

Gauthier said previous budgets did not fully charge utility-related electrical and gas costs directly to the water and sewer systems, including electricity used for pumps and operations equipment.

The proposed water fund includes about $56,000 for repairs and maintenance tied largely to wells, pumps and water infrastructure.

Discussion also focused on the city's water supply system and the possibility of upgrading the city's third backup well into a full-time operating well to improve reliability and maintain water pressure during maintenance outages. Biggs currently relies on two active wells, while the third is reserved for emergency use.

"That will give us a lot more basically backup supply, backup pressure," Gauthier said.

Council members also discussed creating formal reserve and capital improvement policies to help fund future infrastructure upgrades. Officials said the city has historically lacked formal reserve policies governing how excess enterprise revenue is set aside for future needs.

The city's sewer and water rate schedules reviewed during the meeting were previously approved and do not include new proposed increases this year, although Gauthier said both systems are approaching the point where updated rate studies will likely be needed.

"The city is due for a rate study," Gauthier said.

Gauthier said the council is expected to review the city's electric utility fund during the next budget session. He told council members the electric fund remains financially strained and currently lacks enough revenue to support major capital improvements without future adjustments.

"Electric doesn't even have the money for capital improvement that it needs, let alone for the normal operating expenses it has," Gauthier said. ★

Rural Counties Back State Split Resolution

state funding fails to keep pace.

"It's not because I don't love California. It's really because I do love California," Flores said. "My family has lived in this state for generations and California is our home."

He said counties are now functioning as the "front lines of government," with residents turning first to local officials when problems arise.

"When people need help, they do not call Sacramento, they call us," Flores said.

Sutter County Board Chair Mike Ziegenmeyer described similar frustrations, pointing to state budget cuts affecting local youth, veterans and senior services while counties continue facing growing financial pressures.

"We're running prisons now," Ziegenmeyer said, referring to state public safety realignment policies that shifted additional incarceration and supervision responsibilities onto counties.

Ziegenmeyer also criticized what he described as excessive state control over grant funding and local projects, saying counties are often required to complete studies and mandates dictated outside their communities.

"We have water issues," Ziegenmeyer said. "We have all kinds of water, and yet we can't get storage."

Rural leaders also pointed to wildfire concerns, local project restrictions, grant limitations and Proposition 50, a Democratic redistricting proposal following the death of U.S. Representative

Doug LaMalfa, among frustrations raised during the discussions.

AJR 23 lists 15 Northern and inland California counties, including Colusa, Butte, Sutter and Yuba, as eligible to participate in the formation of a new state if approved by Congress.

The proposal itself does not divide California. Any future state split would still require approval from both the California Legislature and Congress under the U.S. Constitution.

Colusa County Board Chair Merced Corona said he supported the resolution as a symbolic effort to draw attention to rural frustrations with state government but said he does not necessarily support splitting California into two separate states.

"I feel we are stronger together," Corona said. "Dividing California into two smaller states would better serve the citizens by fostering governance that is more responsive and representative." ★

Farms Increasingly use Drones for Aerial Applications

Drone operators say they see an uptick in business as agricultural drone application technology improves, farmers become more comfortable with it and more products receive aerial labels. Drones have proven useful for aerial applications, especially for specialty crops. “Vegetable crops have probably adapted drones faster than any other crop,” said Briana Layfield, president and owner of Temecula-based Ag-Bee LLC. “When vegetable plants start growing, (growers) can’t get tractors in past a certain growth stage.” Last winter, her company treated vegetables in the Imperial, Coachella and Pajaro valleys. Other seasons, the company flies coastal vegetable fields from Ventura to Watsonville. Nicholas Steed, who operates Oakdale-based UAV Ag Solutions with brother Brandon, said they’ve also experienced increased producer interest. The company has used drones to treat walnuts, almonds, alfalfa and field corn.

Former Dairy Vet Looks to Improve Welfare on Farms

Founded in 2022, Tennessee-based nonprofit Kinder Ground makes animal welfare improvement more accessible on farms by offering grants and expertise to farmers who are looking to learn more about animal welfare. “The idea is for farmers to come to us with ideas,” Jen Walker, chief animal welfare officer at Kinder Ground, told Ag Alert® in an interview. “We really like projects that elevate welfare beyond those basics. Sometimes it’s seeing the simplest of opportunities. That’s where I think relationships are important. What we have found is if a farmer can have somebody go in on it with him or her, it’s much easier to take a risk.” A former dairy veterinarian, Walker said one new animal welfare technology she is excited about is cattle-vision goggles. “It’s a computer program that takes input from a camera and digests it, and puts it up in virtual reality goggles so that what you’re seeing is what we think cows would see,” she said.

Committee Meets to Advise DWR on State Water Plan

An advisory committee to the California Department of Water Resources held its first meeting this month to begin work on the next update to the California Water Plan, the state’s long-range strategy for managing water resources across all sectors. The plan is updated every five years and guides statewide water policy, planning and investment priorities. The meeting came months after Gov. Gavin Newsom signed Senate Bill 72 in October 2025, launching a multiyear effort to modernize California’s water planning framework in response to intensifying droughts, floods and long-term water reliability challenges tied to climate change. SB 72 established an interim statewide planning target of 9 million acre-feet of additional water supply by 2040. The target is expected to play a central role in the development of the state’s 2028 and 2033 water plans. ★

Gavin Newsom’s Rosy Painting of California’s Economy Leaves Out Its Darker Undertones

By Dan Walters, CALMatters.org

As Gavin Newsom makes his increasingly frequent appearances outside the state — seemingly preparing for a 2028 presidential campaign — one of his stock messages is that California’s economy is soaring.

“We dominate in every category,” Newsom bragged during a recent presentation to the Center for American Progress, a left-leaning think tank. “We are the center of the universe (and) America’s coming attraction.”

He cited the state’s $4-trillion-plus economic output that, were it a nation, would rank 4th or 5th largest in the world, and mentioned the ranks of Nobel Prize winners and vigorous venture capital investment in the state.

Moreover, he boasted, California has used that economic vigor to finance an array of social programs and services, such as universal health care, proving, he said, that such largesse can co-exist with capitalistic gains.

Subliminally, Newsom was pitching the notion that electing him as president could bring California-like prosperity and generosity to the nation as a whole. However, since Newsom is using the economy as a major talking point, it would be fair to provide key facts he fails to mention.

Yes, California has world-class economic output, but it is due largely to a very narrow sector, Silicon Valley’s high-tech industry, which has hugely benefited its entrepreneurs and capital investors.

However the industry is undergoing a shakeout due to the artificial intelligence phenomenon and it’s shedding thousands of jobs, thus concentrating wealth even more.

Meanwhile the state’s other world-famous sector, Southern California’s movie and TV industry, is hurting badly as production migrates to other states and nations — so badly that the state is offering subsidies in an effort to slow the hemorrhage.

Ever since the COVID-19 pandemic, California’s unemployment rate has routinely ranked among the nation’s highest, with a million members of its labor force lacking jobs.

Beacon Economics, a major consulting firm that closely charts California’s economic situation puts it this way: “On one hand, California’s economy is in good health. While the official figures for the last quarter are still being tallied, the state’s economic growth comfortably outpaced the national average of 2.5% in 2025, tracking toward an annual growth rate near 3%.”

“At the same time, the job market is sagging. California now has the highest unemployment rate of all fifty states in the Union, stubbornly hovering at 5.5%, and its job market appears to be going in the wrong direction. The total number of jobs in California actually shrank by 0.6% since the beginning of this year, making it the 17th worst-performing state in the nation in terms of job creation.”

One result of these contradictory data is one of the nation’s highest levels of income disparity, as a recent report from the Public Policy Institute of California points out. Only eight other states have wider gaps.

“The gap between top and bottom incomes in California has increased substantially (by 57%) since 1980, when families at the top earned seven times more than those at the bottom,” the PPIC report says, reflecting 72% income growth for those in the top tenth in income but 19% growth for those in the bottom tenth.

The Census Bureau’s calculation of poverty that includes the state’s staggering living costs puts California’s rate at the highest, 17.7%, tied with Louisiana. A similar calculation by PPIC and the Stanford Center on Poverty and Inequality puts it at 16.9%, while another 17.9% of the population is “near-poor.”

About 15 million Californians are poor enough to qualify for healthcare under the state’s Medi-Cal program but, as Newsom failed to mention in his Center for American Progress presentation, his new budget reduces Medi-Cal eligibility for some Californians to shrink the state’s chronic budget deficit, which he also didn’t mention during his recitation of cherry-picked data.

Dan Walters is one of the most decorated and widely syndicated columnists in California history, authoring a column four times a week that offers his view and analysis of the state’s political, economic, social and demographic trends. ★

Gridley Thumbs and Roots

By Barbara Ott

The blueberry mockingbird thief is returning regularly. It’s eating the berries when they barely have color. I’m guessing this is a female who was nesting. Now that it is child free it is coming for the berries. I’ve tried putting dried insects in the feeder hoping it would sense them and go eat that. So far, no sign that is working. I already had the dried insects for my turtle and I was given dried meal worms at the toad party because a friend had toads and would feed them the dried meal worms. The fact that I’ve harvested a lot of berries already allows me to let go a little bit. The fact that the shift in weather for a week or so to cooler temperatures made the berries quit ripening also allows me to let go a little. The part that makes me wonder if I’m losing out is that I planted two new later fruiting varieties of blueberries with the idea in mind to extend the blueberry harvest time. Both of the new bushes are growing well and one of them fruited. I was a wee bit concerned when I realized that the other later variety was not flowering that my grand plan would fail. Blueberries need other flowering berries to develop fruit. Turns out that my current early variety produces enough new flowers late in its’ season to be a pollinator or so I think because there are berries developing on the late season bush. Now with this mockingbird taking berries all of the time, I’m wondering if I will ever get any of the later berries. We’ll find out.

The berry saga continues with the blackberries. They have been nibbled on but not totally eaten. I’m not noticing new flowers, so the berries on all levels may be done. ★

Kings Korner

By V.G. Harris

The Finals Are Here

If you've been watching what has turned out to be the coming out party for San Antonio's Victor Wembanyama, it would be easy to miss his impact in the final and deciding seventh game of the western division series. Wembanyama put up a solid 22 points, seven rebounds and two assists in what for him appeared to be a pedestrian performance. But stats alone won't tell this story which is one you don't want to miss.

When Oklahoma City ran the table last season with an overwhelming performance in the NBA playoffs and finals, they established themselves as by far the organization that had the best team. Many fans throughout the nation had to learn the names of the players as few were household names, but the chemistry on the court was something rarely seen.

At the center position the thunder reminded me of the 1975 Golden State Warriors when they came out of nowhere to win the championship with two no name centers that split time the entire series and were the consummate team players.

OKC took a chapter out of that book to produce seven-foot Chet Holgren and Isaiah Hartenstein who played as an ensemble that took the league by surprise and gave a lesson to one and all when it comes to true team basketball.

After enjoying one short year as NBA champions the Thunder have been dethroned, and of all things beaten at their own game.

Although the Spurs Victor Wembanyama will get the majority of the headlines and well deserved, it was the nearly perfect execution of team basketball that won the seventh game of this series. A total of seven players were in double digit scoring, and the Thunder were left wondering who beat us?

It was the team that beat you, and I have high hopes that the front office of the Sacramento Kings was watching.

Unable to capitalize on the stellar performance of MVP Shai-Gilgeous-Alexander who led the Thunder with 35 points, four rebounds and nine assists, OKC found out what they already knew. MVP or no, one player cannot do it by himself, and on their own court they had to watch as the San Antonio Spurs schooled the reigning champions of how to play effective team basketball.

I admit to not seeing this coming. I was confident that the Thunder would unveil what got them there last year, but on this night, it was not to be. Inexplicably Chet Holgren played 33 minutes and added a paltry four points for the night and a total of four rebounds. His counterpart Isaiah Hartenstein played 21 minutes and had seven points and five rebounds for his efforts. While neither made a noticeable impact, Holgren may well have had the worst performance of his NBA career.

Everyone that plays this game has a worst ever performance, but few save it for the seventh game of a series that would have propelled them to the NBA finals.

Already pundits all beating the drum that Holgren is on the chopping block, and sadly for him, Chet Holgren may have played his last game for the OKC Thunder.

Time has a way of healing all wounds, and things may look better when a week or two passes, but great players answer the bell when it counts, and without question Holgren did not answer the bell.

Congratulations to San Antonio for their historic win, and even more on showing the world how to build a championship team, because that is quite likely what they are about to become.

The New York Knicks are saying wait a minute! How about us?

They would be right to say so, and I believe the finals may well surprise some people, but at this moment San Antonio looks like the odds-on favorite.

Pay attention Sacramento, because it was team basketball and not any one player that took out the thunder. Yes, Wembanyama is a force, but 22 points and seven rebounds is not an overwhelming stat, and it's what San Antonio did as a team that won the day.

Will we all be watching the finals as they get under way on Wednesday? I certainly will and it should be an entertaining series, but I'll be glued to my TV set on June 23 when the NBA trots out Adam Silver for this year's highly anticipated draft night.

All the best Kings fans! ★

Supervisors Back Sutter Buttes Event Venue

By Susan Meeker

YUBA CITY, CA (MPG) - The Sutter County Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 to overturn a Planning Commission denial and approve a scaled event venue project near the base of the Sutter Buttes, siding with a local farmer seeking to diversify his agricultural operation despite opposition from nearby residents concerned about preserving the rural area.

At their May 26 meeting, supervisors approved an appeal filed by Mike Smith Jr. for a use permit allowing outdoor special events on his 80-acre agricultural property along Pass Road in the Agriculture-Sutter Buttes Overlay zoning district. The venue would allow for weddings, receptions, nonprofit fundraisers, political fundraisers and similar gatherings in view of the world's smallest mountain range.

Chair Mike Ziegenmeyer, whose district includes the area surrounding the project, cast the lone dissenting vote.

Ziegenmeyer said he remained concerned the project could create future problems for the rural Buttes corridor.

"Bad things are going to come of this with the possibility of accidents and so forth," Ziegenmeyer said. "Public safety is my number one concern. Scares the heck out of me."

The hearing drew emotional testimony from residents who said the venue would alter the quiet agricultural setting surrounding the Sutter Buttes and create traffic and safety problems along narrow rural roads already heavily used by visitors.

Opponents warned of increased trespassing, littering, wildlife collisions and noise in an area many residents chose specifically for its rural isolation.

"You are setting a precedent," resident Arlyn Smith told supervisors, warning approval could encourage similar commercial event venues throughout the Buttes area.

Another resident described ongoing problems with illegal parking, trash and trespassing from visitors already traveling through the Buttes corridor and questioned whether emergency services could adequately respond to major events in the area.

professionally managed events while helping sustain agricultural land through additional revenue opportunities for farming families facing economic pressures.

Jim Whitaker of AIP Consulting, representing the applicant, said the property owner remains committed to farming walnuts on the property while attempting to create another income source tied to the unique landscape of the Sutter Buttes.

"My client is a good steward of Sutter, a good steward of the community," Whitaker said. "He's a farmer in the area."

Wedding photographer Liz Gates told supervisors professionally managed venues typically include security, cleanup crews and transportation planning while creating opportunities for local vendors and businesses.

"We might as well keep our dollars here," Gates said. "It's going to bring in business for vendors, opportunities for many, many, many people."

Brian Davis, speaking on behalf of nonprofit organization Be Extra, said the venue could provide a place for community fundraisers and youth-related events without groups needing to travel outside the county.

Following public testimony, supervisors discussed modifying the original proposal rather than approving the project as initially presented to the Planning Commission, which included up to 16 events annually with attendance ranging from 100 to 850 guests.

Supervisor Karm Bains pushed for stricter operating conditions and a reduced number of events, saying he wanted stronger safeguards in place for surrounding residents and public safety concerns. Supervisors also discussed making clear that violations of permit conditions could result in revocation of the use permit.

The Board of Supervisors ultimately approved the revised project with additional conditions for event operations. ★

Supporters argued the project would create controlled,

Live Oak Softball Sweeps Majors and Minors Tournament of Champions

By YSBC Sports

YUBA-SUTTER, CA (YSBC) - The Live Oak Little League softball major Lions and minor league Sooners softball teams ended their seasons with two banners California District 2 Little League Tournament of Champions.

The Lions went 16-1-1 as their only defeat was to the older junior Lions in LOLL in late March.

The Lions roster consists of multiple athletes that made it to the LL West Regional tournament last summer and they have improved their skills within the last 12 months.

The Lions were dominant throughout the season and a fair amount of the roster will move onto All-Star's and the goal of the team is to make a deeper run than they did in 2025.

The Live Oak Major Lions won the California District 2 Championship on May 26 by defeating Sutter Area. Photo courtesy of CA District 2 Little League

The Live Oak Sooners minor softball team went 16-0 during the season and won the CA District 2 Tournament of Champions on May 27. Photo courtesy of CA District 2 Little League

The Sooners went 16-0 during the 2026 season.

LOLL had two minor league teams as they had to play a game in the beginning of May to determine the representative for the league during the TOC.

Between the two squads, Live Oak minor softball went 26-1 during the 2026 season as that only loss was reflected during the determination game of finding the LO representative for TOC's.

The Sooners went 3-0 in the minor tournament as they beat Plumas Lake LL and Peach Bowl LL to reach the final.

The Sooners defeated Olivehurst/Linda LL 9-4 on May 27. ★
