Auto museum hires new executive director

Mark Steigerwald stands inside the California Automobile Museum, at 2200 Front St., on April 3. He recently became the museum's new executive director.

By LANCE ARMSTRONG

The California Automobile Museum has a new executive director: Mark Steigerwald.

Steigerwald, 50, replaced Delta Pick Mello, who after about three years as the auto museum's executive director took on the same position at the Sacramento History Museum in Old Sacramento. Steigerwald's first day on the job was March 18.

A native of New York, Steigerwald gained an early appreciation for old automobiles during his youth through his grandfather's 1939 Dodge pickup.

"He used that (truck) for furniture deliveries in the 1970s," he said. "Even then it was an old car. I was probably 4 or 5 years old, and I just thought it was the most amazing thing. I recall it was dark green, with black fenders, and of a design I think that was just certainly more interesting than some of these cars to me. That just cemented my interest (in automobiles) going forward."

Following his graduation from high school in New York, Steigerwald continued his schooling at the State University of New York at Oswego, where he earned a bachelor's degree in English in 1992.

Continuing his schooling, he earned a master's degree in library and information sciences at Syracuse University in 2000.

Steigerwald noted that he earned his latter degree to obtain a specific automobile related job.

"I wanted to pursue a library degree with the express purpose of working in an automotive archive," he said. "At the time, I only had the Henry Ford Museum (of American Innovation in Dearborn, Mich.) in mind."

Pondering that goal, Steigerwald called it a "very focused, perhaps narrow approach."

After graduating from Syracuse, Steigerwald remained in upstate New York and began an internship with the International Motor Racing Research Center.

While attending a race, he heard about the upcoming opening of a new racing archive facility that was associated with the public library.

Steigerwald eventually spent nine years working at that institution, first as a librarian and later as the director.

Part of the facility included an atrium, with vintage car displays, which generally focused on road racing.

Prior to his hiring at the auto museum, Steigerwald worked a fundraiser for the College of Engineering at Cornell University.

"I was in the development side, engaging alumni and stewarding their giving to the college, specifically," he recalled. "However, the engineering aspect was a component, so there was some subject interest there. Cornell and their student teams often were a contender in the Formula SAE, so its students were essentially building a car from scratch to compete for the university. "What working at Cornell allowed me to do was to pursue the aspect of fundraising. Museums, in general, are not-for-profit, so you have to find the funding lines, and I thought applying those skills that I had been immersed in for 17 years in a museum setting would be a dream job.

That's what led me to the (auto museum)."

With his years of experience as an avid automobile enthusiast, Steigerwald began his time with the museum with a considerable knowledge about cars of different eras.

Steigerwald noted that he is fascinated by the culture of automobiles.

"For me, personally, I became more interested in the automobile in culture, with the idea that the automobile is a significant invention of largely the 20th century," he said. "It's something that almost everyone relies on. So, it's both a scholarly look at an interest, but it's also a hobby."

Steigerwald acknowledged the benefit of working in a field that is also his hobby.

"Being able to integrate one's hobby into a profession is perhaps the ultimate goal, if it's achievable," he said.

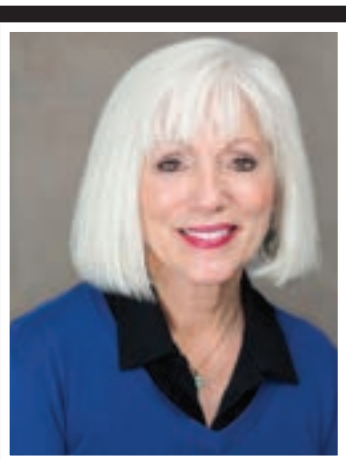

Among the other elements of automobiles that intrigue him are the various designs of automobiles throughout the decades.

"There are several different golden eras of design," he said.

Steigerwald mentioned that the first golden era of design began with streamline automobiles in the 1930s.

"There are varying opinions about when that (era) was established," he said. "I believe it was the 1932 Graham Blue Streak that was credited to sort of leaning back the grill – although there were other examples – in that sort of windswept look.

Portuguese baking with Jeremiah

Story and photos by Monica Stark

As a light rain passed through the valley, the warmth of a hot oven and cozy kitchen helped set the stage for Portuguese pastry baking that perfect evening, Friday, March 22, as the sound of Fado, or the Portuguese blues added to the ambiance inside the Pocket neighborhood home of Jeremiah Duarte Bills.

Growing up in a "dessert-obsessed family," Jeremiah brings his Portuguese heritage front and center in the heart of his home, teaching bakers and food lovers the ins and outs of creating such delicacies as tarte de amêndoa (Portuguese almond tart), queijadas de laranja (little Portuguese orange custardy tarts with dashes of cinnamon), pastéis de nata (custard tart, a favorite in Lisbon), bolo de bolacha (a traditional Portuguese dessert made with Maria biscuit, rich coffee, and buttercream).

In an intimate demonstration style class with plenty of hands-on participation, classes are limited to six students. In the midst of his cooking classes, Jeremiah offers historical and cultural context, as well as personal experiences he's encountered during trips to Portugal for vacations and research.

From cultural tidbits such as the origin of the Portuguese word for spatula, Salazar, named after António de Oliveira Salazar, the dictator who ruled Portugal for 40 years and "scraped the country for all its worth" – to the cloistered nuns of the 1500s who learned how to make large swaths of paper thin dough with a filling and a drizzle of butter, Jeremiah's passion for the Portuguese culture contagiously seeps into cooking lessons.

Speaking of his adventure touring a convent during one of his cooking classes as a student, he said, "It's like a Middle Eastern pastry, really. It's the same idea. But, you have to think. We have that kind of dough like strudel dough (which originated in Austria), and filo dough (rooted in the Ottomon cuisine), and then this tiny little place in Portugal figured out how to do it by these nuns living on their own. It's like a miracle. And watching it, was like, I'm witnessing a total miracle."

Not originally from the Pocket, Jeremiah said he learned of the Portuguese historical impact on the area after he moved here. A beautiful happenstance, Jeremiah now is on the board of the Sacramento Portuguese Historical and Cultural Society and looks to make more neighborhood connections.

In 2016, Jeremiah appeared on ABC's The Great American Baking Show where he baked many Portuguese recipes. This experience connected him to people all over the world hungry to learn about Portuguese dessert recipes. He has collaborated and created recipes for many Portuguese American companies including UMA CASA Restaurant, Ginja9 Cherry Liqueur, and Rooster Camisa. His test kitchen also serves as home base for testing traditional Portuguese dessert recipes for his upcoming book, "Portuguese Desserts", which of course, will also include histories and stories. Portuguese Desserts' extensive and exhaustive collection of recipes are adapted for the American kitchen and include recipes from continental Portugal, the islands of the Azores, Madeira as well as the Luso (Portuguese speaking) world.

With about 3,300 followers on Instagram, Jeremiah says he loves being connected and sharing his talent, but that book agents seem obsessed with the 50,000 follower mark. Despite that trend, one agent has expressed interested, though nothing has been signed as of yet. Because anyone can "Google" recipes, the agent explicitly encouraged him to include stories. "I was happy she was into that because it's more of an artistic project," he said. "I like those books, too, and it's totally true, we have access to almost everything these days."

And with that side note during this class, he turned, rose his voice and said, "Look at you guys. You guys are amazing. Good work."

When he dismissed himself to package goodies in take-home boxes for his students, one of them described the class as a "creativity and culture class, and you get to eat too. All the good things in life."

Jeremiah's creative and cultural talent does not stop with cooking, his background is in music. He attended the world-famous Juilliard School and performed as an orchestral flutist all over the world. He keeps bees, and also teaches aspiring flute and piano students.

As he said when discussing the intricacies of Fado, "Portuguese love poetry, and music is like food. You get it no matter what. If you don't speak the language it doesn't matter."

His next class is Saturday, April 13. Follow him on Instagram or Facebook. Perhaps, look for a food column in this publication at a later date.

Aussie Footy to offer spring league at Reichmuth Park

By Monica Stark

Ten years ago a husband and wife pair of Aussies relocated to Sacramento bringing Australian football (aka Footy) with them. Along with one Sacto local named Helen, they formed the Sacramento Australian Football Club, which over the years has had more than 300 players in their multiple leagues. And now, for Pocket and South Land Park residents, Reichmuth Park is home turf for the group this season. With adequate space and lights for early sunsets and restrooms, the team is "excited to bring Aussie footy to Reichmuth Park," says SAFC President Makenzie Seckora. "We hope people join us for our free fitness events, gain friends and get a little dose of Australian culture."

To that end the club offers free SacFooty Spring League Open Days, which the next one held on Thursday, April 11 at Reichmuth Park from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The session is added prior to the league, so individuals can learn the skills and rules of the game in a "commitment free" environment. For ages 14 and older, no prior experience necessary. Additionally the group's "fitness through footy", a series of events that run every Tuesday and Saturday, just began on Tuesday, April 2 and are at Doc Oliver field in William Land Park. (For a full schedule, visit sacfooty.webs.com)

Australian Rules Football (also "Aussie Rules" or "footy") is a physical contact sport with roots traceable from early forms of Rugby and Gaelic football, but is uniquely Australian. It was established in 1858 and is currently the most popular sport in the Australian community, Seckora explained.

While American football is a "stop-start sport", in Aussie footy, players can be on the field for up to 20 minutes without a break, she said. In Australian football there are no pads or helmets worn, there are no set plays; it's much faster paced.

Seckora explained that in Australian football, even though there are designated positions, every position plays both offense and defense depending on where the ball is in play. The reason for tackling in Australian football is to gain control of the ball, also known as the 'footy'. A tackle is considered legal only if the defensive player grabs the offensive player below the level of the shoulders and above the knees, players do not go in head first. "For this reason," Seckora said, "there are significantly less injuries than in football or rugby, even without the use of pads or helmets."

Interest in the game is at an all time high in North America with live games from Australia being televised on Fox Soccer Plus; with the United States and Canada fielding teams in the International Cup held in Australia every three years; and recently several North American players were signed up to semi professional clubs in Australia as International Rookies.

Recruited by one of the club founders at a work event, Seckora was leery about the sport as she had never played a tackle sport growing up. But, she did some research online and showed up for her first co-ed tag game. Two weeks later she was attending practices for the tackle team and shortly after played in her first tackle game against the San Francisco Iron Maidens. "After that first game, I was hooked. The sport was so much fun to learn and the community of people who support it are welcoming and excited to teach new women," she said. This is her sixth season.

The United States Australian Football League, was founded in 1997 with some 40-plus clubs, including approximately 20 women's teams, spread across the country. Each year in October, at a different location, a national tournament is held to decide who will be the National Champions with four Men's Divisions and two Women's Divisions. The Divisions are determined by the size of the team and the teams standings. The Sacramento men's team, the Suns, won the Division 3 National Title in 2014 and the women's team, the Lady Suns, won the Division 2 National Tile in 2018.

Seckora was able to represent the USA Liberty at the 2015 Parallel Cup vs Canada and at the 2017 International Cup in Australia. During the International Cup (a three-week long tour), the Liberty played five local Australian teams competing against women who had grown up watching and playing this sport. Her team won three of the five games, which was the first time the Liberty had won a game versus an Australian team. The USA women's program has two teams the Freedom and the development squad, the Liberty. The USA Freedom ended the International Competition in 4th place in a close game with the Canadian women's team.

The Sacramento Australian Football Club now offers two to three social co-ed leagues, one local metro league, and trainings for the national teams, the Suns and Lady Suns annually. The past several years SAFC has hosted free youth clinics during the summer and at local area high schools with the hopes of adding a yearly youth league to its repertoire. The season starts in early April with pre-season fitness and runs through October, where it culminates at the USAFL National tournament every year.

Faces and Places: Jazzercisers enjoy new digs at the Promenade

Photos by Stephen Crowley

After 18 years at the South Hills Shopping Center, Jazzercise moved on over to the Promenade in the Pocket earlier this year. Chosen for its "great location" after losing their previous lease, this space became available at literally the "last moment and we were thrilled," said Jazzercise co-owner Aileen Van Noland.

"While it was a wonderful home for so many years, our South Land Park Jazzercise Center was getting run down and the space had become too large to manage," Aileen said. "This is a perfect size, and in Jazzercise's 50th anniversary year, they wanted an upgraded new look for all Jazzercise facilities and this one fits the bill!" While keeping the same schedule of Jazzercise classes with 29 classes each week, Aileen said they'll adding yoga and ballroom dance classes this month. Aileen's co-owner is Louanne Hensley.

SAFC has had 10 players (men and women) who have represented the United States at the multiple International levels.

"We have had three players who were named to the All World Team, the highest recognition in the USAFL. In addition, one of our Lady Suns moved to Australia to compete at the semi-professional level, the VFL with hopes of trying for the 'big leagues' the AFLW," Seckora said.

"We typically practice and play at Doc Oliver Field in Land Park. Unfortunately very few fields have the space we need to set up a regulation footy field," she said.

The typical size of a field varies between 135–185 meters long by 110–155 meters wide in the shape of an oval. This is approximately 2 1/2 football fields combined.

There is only one regulation size Australian Football Field in the entire country, located in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Every year, SAFC plays against teams across the West Coast during the normal season, and plays teams from all over the nation at the National Tournament every year. The closest competitive men's and women's teams are located in San Francisco. There are also a handful of clubs in Southern California and in the Pacific Northwest (Portland and Seattle) that SAFC often travels to for games or tournaments. "Last year, the Sacramento Australian Football Club was lucky to host the Western Regional Tournament at the Davis Legacy Soccer Club with over 20 teams and 300 players from the West Coast. The goal now is to host the National Tournament in 2020," Seckora said.

The club is always recruiting new players; no experience is necessary. "We will teach you the skills and rules of the game. We are also happy to participate in youth clinics at local area high schools to continue the growth of our youth program," Seckora said. If you are interested, please send inquiries to info@sacfooty.com. In addition, SAFC is a non-profit organization that is always looking for community members to partner with for fundraising and sponsorship opportunities. Find SAFC on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter, or at sacfooty.com.

Botanical collection to be showcased at local art show

Arthouse on R at 1021 R Street in Downtown Sacramento is getting ready to showcase paintings by local artist and Hollywood Park resident Sharon Norton. Sharon's Botanicals collection can be viewed from April 11 through May 6.

No stranger to the local Art Scene, Sharon, 43, has been a featured artist and has presented various works at galleries and events throughout Sacramento over the years. She is known for her expressive portraits and vibrant depictions of California nature and everyday life. Some of her works have been considered reminiscent of another well-known Sacramento artist, Gregory Kondos, in her use of color and detail.

With her botanical pieces, Sharon showcases the fullness in range of her artistic talents. "One of my favorite childhood memories was when I first learned to draw a beautiful daisy-like flower," Sharon mused, recalling what ignited a passion for painting flowers that has continued to burn brightly for over the last 20-years. "I was so enlightened that I created several flower drawings and gifted them to different family members. I still often stop to photograph a flower that catches my eye to use for a future painting."

At the upcoming show, Sharon is excited to present what she considers the most intricate and vibrant oil painting of her flower collection. This painting depicts a stunning Zinnia captured on a large 30-inch by 40-inch canvas. The original Zinnia was one grown by Sharon in her backyard garden. According to Sharon, "these beautiful flowers pop up every year and never disappoint with their vibrant color and structure." She also created a Zinnia in watercolor on 12-inch x 12-inch wood panel. Other works being featured include a variety of white flowers such as Magnolias, Roses, Poppies, and Camellias on top of a rich dark blue background.

Sharon's typical medium of choice is oil painting with acrylic underlay on canvas or wood panel. While she also works in watercolors, she explains that this medium can present different challenges. "With watercolor, I have to work fast and plan ahead. You cant hide a mistake. My oil and acrylic technique is more forgiving and allows several days to work and blend colors." No matter what medium she uses, she applies the same overall technique building up the paintings composition petal by petal.

When not pursuing her passions painting, Sharon works as an Office Manager for a local engineering company. She is also a devoted wife and mother and loves to spend time in nature with her family. She is available for commissioned portraits, other works, and even graphic design. To learn more about Sharon and her artistry, or to purchase any existing pieces, please be sure to see her works on display at Arthouse on R from April 11 through May 6, visit her website at sharonlnorton.com, and follow her on instagram @sharon

"The design was pervasive in the 1930s (and) pulled the automobile from sort of the carriage traditions of design. The automobile kind of came into its own."

Other golden eras of the automobile were the 1940s, 1950s and 1960s, Steigerwald noted.

He added that eye-catching designs have also made their way into race cars, with aerodynamic designs.

Steigerwald noted that he is well aware that California has its own car culture.

"California is certainly unique in terms of car culture," he said. "Being an East Coaster, like a lot of car guys, you sort of dream about what California might be like in terms of hot rods or drag racing or whatever you're into.

"But car culture is just entirely unique here. It certainly helped to build the state in terms of infrastructure. Someone might curse being stuck on (Interstate) 405 in LA, for example, but there is just no denying the impact that the cars had on the state.

"As we look forward in terms of exhibits and the collection and admission, we want to be able to encompass all of that as 'the' California Automobile Museum."

Steigerwald said that part of his excitement in working at the museum has been getting to know Dick Ryder, who founded this Front Street facility in 1987.

"I was thrilled to meet Dick, and I certainly knew him by reputation beforehand, and we've certainly had a couple of conversations," he said. "He is an admirable (automobile) enthusiast."

Although Steigerwald visited Sacramento's auto museum for the first time last January, he noted that he has been aware of its existence since its earliest years as the Towe Ford Museum of California.

Steigerwald, who has visited from 40 to 50 automobile museums in the United States, recalled his first impression of seeing Sacramento's museum.

"I was actually dumfounded," he said. "The fact that the museum had grown, certainly beyond an all-Ford collection (was impressive). I think the building has a ton of character, and a brand new roof. Between the permanent collection, the cars on loan and the rotating exhibits, I thought it was really entirely unique."

He added that the museum also has a great staff and a lot of potential.

"The more I found out about what was going on here, the more intrigued and interested I became," he said.

Automobiles featured at the museum include this 1929 Stutz.

Homeless Young Man with Autism Is Hopeful That His Life Will Soon Change

By Jan Dalske

I met Jamison at the local library when he asked me for ride to a local restaurant to get something to eat. The local Indian restaurant offers him a free meal at dinner time if he goes there and picks it up.

We talked for a few hours, and, during that time, I discovered that he was homeless, and had been diagnosed with Autism. How he ended up homeless is a long story that did not end well for him.

He had been living with his "Auntie" and the home that she was renting was sold. The family was evicted and they had struggled to find another place to rent that they could afford. The amount that the landlords wanted was more than they could pay on their combined limited incomes.

Jamison stayed at a few local homeless shelters and then he alternated staying with other relatives. Nothing was ever permanent. Since he only has a limited income source, from SSI, because of his Autism, he does not have enough money to pay for the cost of a room.

All of his belongings are in a local storage unit. Every day, as he walks the streets of Sacramento, he has one wheeled suitcase, which contains his sleeping attire and some clothes, and, a large plastic bag that contains his rain boots.

When he goes to the library to use the computers, he sometimes uses Craigslist to try to find a place to live. He feels that it is not a great source, and that people are trying to "rip you off" on that website. He just wants to find a cheap room to rent, somewhere in the area of $300-$400.

He told me that he had rented a room some time ago with whom he described was a "stinky old guy", but shared with me that "as long as I'm sleeping, and eating, I'm good."

He showed me his Facebook page, where he posts daily messages. They are mostly upbeat and tells the readers: "good things are gonna happen to me today." He does not have a phone and uses the library computer to communicate with his friends and family, whom he feels give him "useless advice".

He tries to avoid what he calls are "stupid people". He does not like people who will, as he describes it, "turn on you". Jamison is just looking for a part-time job which help him to pay the rent and a place to live. Isn't that what we all need? A place to call home, where we can safely sleep and food to eat: Food and Shelter. It just seems that those two needs are difficult for many of our local people to attain.

Private Property- No Trespassing or Loitering- All Violators Will be Prosecuted

By Jan Dalske

This is the latest sign to be posted at our local public libraries. Why do all of the elected leaders of our City and County of Sacramento find it necessary to post these signs at the parking lots of our public libraries in many parts of the city?

The signs state that there is "no trespassing, no loitering, no overnight parking, no skate boarding", and that the parking lot is for "customer parking only". And, they add that "violators will be prosecuted" and "all unauthorized vehicles will be towed at the owners' expense".

The signs are part of an effort to discourage any people from parking in the library parking lots overnight. They are targeting the homeless population. Some of the homeless people may have a van or a car that they have been sleeping in overnight to stay warm. They are sleeping in their vehicles because they have nowhere else that might be safe to spend the night.

They have lost their jobs, or the rent on the place where they were living had been raised so high that they could no longer afford to pay it. They had no choice. They had to put all of their belongings in a storage unit. Then they packed up needed clothing along with warm blankets and pillows for sleeping. They are spending the night in their vehicles. Some of them are individuals, or couples, but some of them are also families with children.

Most of the members of the homeless population have no vehicles and have to use shopping carts from local stores to transport their belongings around the city. They have small carts, and large carts, and some have two or more carts. They use the carts to carry extra clothing, and sleeping bags, and maybe some food items.

You cannot miss seeing them. They are all around our cities, and in all of our neighborhoods. Some of them stand on street corners with signs asking for cash donations to help them with getting food or maybe put toward paying for a hotel room for one night so that they can get off of the streets.

Where are the people supposed to sleep? How can they get food without money to purchase it? What can we do to help them? They are human beings, just like the rest of us. They have physical needs, such as cleanliness, or using a restroom, and having water and food and, of course shelter. They have to use the restrooms at fast food places or go to the local Walmart stores to use their facilities.

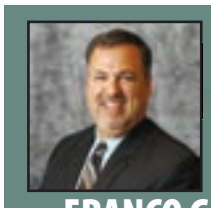

Many of the homeless people are sick, or disabled. They may have mental health issues. Where can they go for help with these problems? The social service agencies are overloaded. Their offices are filled with people trying to apply for help with food and shelter needs. They are long waiting lists for housing.

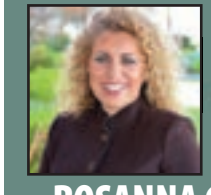

Some of the homeless people have an EBT card, and that helps them. But, where can you keep perishable food items when you do not have anywhere to live? Yes, they can buy something and eat it, but if you get anything that needs refrigeration, that could be a problem.

We can try to help our local homeless people by calling our elected officials and telling them to do something now. Quit talking about it, and act. Maybe they should spend a night on the streets of our city and see what it feels like to be homeless, cold and hungry.

Mayors of Sacramento and West Sacramento Leading the Mayors' Commission on Climate Change

By Jan Dalske

With, what they feel is an urgent need to take action now, Sacramento Mayor Steinberg and West Sacramento Mayor Cabaldon, will be taking the lead on the Mayors' Commission on Climate Change.

Their plan is to develop a common vision and a set of strategies for both cities to achieve net zero emissions. This is referred to as Carbon Zero. They want to accomplish this goal by the year 2045.

The aims of the Commission are to establish specific goals and priorities which will help them achieve Carbon Zero by the year 2045. They will also strive to strengthen local and regional partnerships which will serve to address climate change and increase resiliency. They plan to engage community members as well as business leaders with the goal of building political support for robust climate action.

The two mayors will provide a forum which will develop and vet the guiding principles of what they refer to as "ambitious strategies" within the City of Sacramento and West Sacramento's Climate Action Plans.

They will work to advance social equity and economic prosperity, while working to attract additional investments into both regions for future consideration.

West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon stated that "The City of West Sacramento is partnering with the City of Sacramento on this effort to provide input and feedback on climate policies that can not only reduce greenhouse gas emissions but promote our shared goals for equitable mobility and sustainable communities. We look forward to adding our perspective to this collective effort, resulting in strategies that can have a truly regional impact."

Sacramento Mayor Darrell Steinberg added, "By working together, we can accelerate and shape the transition to a clean energy economy that's already occurring to ensure that it benefits our local businesses and residents. We can strengthen Sacramento's position as a hub for investment in clean technologies and promote social equity and economic prosperity for all."

The Commission on Climate Change (CCC) will include experts and community leaders who will convene public meetings and conduct roundtable discussions. They will be held with business leaders and other key stakeholders. Subgroups will "dive into" the three key sectors: the built environment, mobility, and community health and resilience. From there, they will create recommendations that they will present to the full CCC.

Mayor Steinberg and Mayor Cabaldon both recognize just how critical that it is to prepare for the impacts of climate in our region. These impacts include rising temperatures, droughts, fires, and floods. Both leaders feel that their cities must combat these impacts. And by working to do that, they feel that the end result will greatly help to improve our environment, as well as public health. By making this preparation, the end result will ensure a thriving business environment which will ultimately attract workers and investments into each city.

There is also a Climate Emergency Campaign forming locally and they will meet regularly to discuss how you can get your neighborhood involved. If you are interested in finding out more about this group, you can contact Organize Sacramento at 1714 Broadway in Sacramento. They are supporting a ten year timeline to achieve Zero Fossil Fuel Emissions.

The exhibit allows guests an opportunity to explore the historic American pastime of traveling with family and friends. Depending on age, race, and financial status, experiences and memories of road trips differ dramatically. Museum guests will learn how different Americans experienced life on the road.
